Navy Asks Four Billions For 27,000 More Planes

Added to Record 20-Billion Request; Knox Voices Pride In Asiatic Fleet

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

An increase of approximately four billion dollars in the already record-breaking $19,977,965,474 Navy appropriation bill will be recommended today to finance sharp expansion of naval plane construction.

The new budget estimates, raising still higher the Navy's plane sights, were awaited by the Senate Appropriations Subcommittee which completed hearings yesterday on the largest appropriation bill of all time.

Proud of Asiatic Fleet

Testifying in support of the House-approved measure, Secretary of the Navy Knox voiced pride in the performance of the Asiatic fleet and confidence in plans for ultimate world naval superiority.

"He agreed with Winston Churchill that 1942 will be a year of preparation, 1943 a year of attack and 1944 the year of possible victory," one member of the subcommittee said.

Senator Overton (Democrat), of Louisiana, chairman of the subcommittee, will ask the 4 billion dollar plane construction mark-up in the bill today and history's biggest single appropriation will go before the full committee for approval tomorrow.

Together with the $1,688,281,470 included in the House bill for naval aviation, the increased air appropriation is expected to provide 27,000 additional naval planes. The 12½ billion dollar Army air bill approved Wednesday carried funds for 33,000 more planes for the land forces. The President in his opening address to Congress set a 60,000 plane goal for 1942.

Emphasis on Light Craft

Increased naval emphasis on construction of planes and warcraft and auxiliary vessels meanwhile was reflected in Senate passage of an authorization for the building of 1700 minor combatant and auxiliary naval vessels, at a cost of $3,150,000,000. For construction and ordnance, 750 million dollars was authorized.

Senator Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts, chairman of the Naval Affairs Committee, said a dozen new types of ships will be built under the program. The main type, he said, small, fast, armed vessels, will be used in convoy work. Appropriations for these ships are carried in the $19,977,965,474 bill still pending before the Senate subcommittee.

Also passed by the Senate and returned to the House was an authorization for 450 million dollars in naval public works, amended to provide temporary relief of civilian contractors and employes for losses incurred on Guam and Wake Islands.

Rear Admiral John H. Towers, of the Naval Bureau of Aeronautics, and other naval officials appeared

Oil Supply 'Tight,' Ickes Reports, as Result of Sinkings

Interior Secretary Ickes said yesterday the petroleum situation in the East, where rationing was imposed last summer, was "tight and getting tighter" as a result of tanker sinkings and diversion of such vessels to war service.

The Secretary, who also is petroleum coordinator, declined to predict that gasoline rationing was forthcoming, but indicated he might reopen a proposal to build an 80 million dollar pipeline from Texas to New Jersey.

Asked at his press conference about the New England coal situation, Ickes said the supply situation was getting "critical."

The situation has resulted, he said, apparently from unnecessary and arbitrary" regulations imposed at New York and New England coal receiving ports.

Hitler to Speak Today at 10 A. M.

The Berlin radio announced last night that Adolf Hitler will make a speech today on the ninth anniversary of his assumption of power as chancellor of Germany.

The announcement heard by the New York listening post of the United Press, said he would broadcast at 5 p. m. Berlin time, 10 a. m. E. S. T.

Birthday Today

Stars Arrive With Glitter For Parties

See "A Look Back Over 60 Years" on Page 16; also editorial and cartoon on Page 10.

A galaxy of motion picture stars converged on wartime Washington yesterday for today's celebration of Franklin D. Roosevelt's sixtieth birthday as part of a Nation-wide fund-raising effort against the scourge of tomorrow's soldiers of peace—infantile paralysis.

At least nine major parties are scheduled at Washington hotels, theaters and public places by the official Birthday Ball committee, with other programs expected to be held by private groups. Public interest is expected to reach such great proportions that the Police Department's new civilian defense auxiliary force has been asked to assist by relieving regular police officers assigned to duty in the vicinity of the celebrations.

The stars will spend the evening making a tour of the celebrations and taking their bows at each place. Last night many of them went to Baltimore to attend birthday celebrations there—held

New Bottleneck

Girl Tenants Not Desired

THE fact that girls wash their undies and hose in the bathroom and boys don't is creating one of the biggest bottlenecks in the Washington housing situation.

It has reached a point, Roy Miller, manager of the Defense Housing Registry, said yesterday, where the condition is truly "serious." Here is the condition:

Whereas more than 80 per cent of persons coming to Washington to work for the Government are women, about 70 per cent of the householders listing rooms with the registry specify that they want "men only."

"We are entirely satisfied with the number of rooms being listed," Miller said, "but the fact so many of the people listing them will not take women is throwing the whole situation out of kilter."

Why don't householders want women?

Well, the general answer is they are "more trouble" than men.

For Lonely Plebe

Wanted: Most Beautiful Girl

A LONELY plebe at Annapolis, looking forward to March 7-8, which is the one weekend when plebes "are allowed to escort female guests," has requested The Post to find him "the most beautiful girl in Washington."

He says: ". . . this will be the one big point in a plebe's life because he has a chance to show to his female guest a few of the things that he has been exposed to during his stay here and—well, you know how it is.

"Would you send me the address of the most beautiful girl in Washington? A brunette of about 18 years would be preferred . . . I can assure you that she will have a very wonderful weekend."

The applicants can now line up on the right.

U.S. May Oust All in D.C. Not In War Work

Move to Other Cities May Be Necessary If Proposed Housing Can't Handle Influx

If proposed defense housing fails to take care of Washington's growing population, it may become necessary to order removal of all persons from the District who are not directly participating in the Nation's war effort, Coordinator of Defense Housing Charles F. Palmer told the House Public Buildings and Grounds Committee yesterday.

Appearing before the committee during its first day of hearings on a bill which would authorize appropriation of 50 million dollars to provide homes for Federal war workers here, Palmer declared:

"After we have provided the 10,000 houses and 4500 temporary shelters necessary, we should build no more housing here no matter how great the congestion, because it would too severely overtax the facilities of the District. It may then become necessary to take over facilities possessed by those not engaged in war work, and those people not essential to prosecuting the war should be asked to leave the District."

50 Millions Held Inadequate

Commissioner of Public Buildings W. E. Reynolds envisioned the need for a larger appropriation than the 50 million dollars provided in the bill sponsored by the committee chairman, Representative Lanham (Democrat), of Texas.

He also outlined a District public works program, costing about 10 million dollars, to service the proposed local housing construction. This public works program Commissioner John Russell Young terms a "voice from heaven."

It would relieve pressure on the District's overtaxed school system, by constructing 17 new buildings; would increase water, sewage disposal, street, refuse collection, police and fire alarm systems.

Both Palmer and Reynolds forecast the transfer of at least 20,000 old-line Federal employes from Washington in the near future to make room for incoming war workers.

In the coming year, "56,000 families will have to be provided for," Palmer said. "To date, 34,000 of the necessary 56,000-family dwelling units have been provided for. Decentralization of 20,000 employes will release an additional 12,000-family units, leaving 10,000 homes to be provided for the essential workers and their families arriving before July 1 of this year."

Later he added that it is planned to set up 4500 temporary houses on empty lots and other locations throughout the District area.

"It is now over seven months since I first stated the facts of the District situation to this committee," he continued. "I don't know of any new words with which I can more emphatically state the gravity of the situation than I have on previous appearances before you.

"If we are again delayed by con-

Maryland Guard To Release Men With Federal Jobs

Maryland State Guard units in Prince Georges and Montgomery Counties today faced the loss of half their officer and enlisted personnel through an order of Gov. O'Conor to release from duty all guardsmen working for the Federal Government.

Cooperating with Third Corps Area headquarters in Baltimore, and indirectly with the War Department in Washington, the Governor ordered that all Federally employed guardsmen be given honorable discharges and that the order take effect immediately.

Gov. O'Conor said Corps Area officials had advised him that the "administrative function" of the Federal departments whose employes are in the guard may be retarded, since the guardsmen are subject to immediate call to active duty and would have to leave their Federal posts.

Maj. Caesar Aiello, of Hyattsville, commander of the Ninth Battalion of which the Prince Georges County unit is a part, said yesterday that because of the order he would lose 160 men of a total enlistment of 300, and 9 officers out of 24.

Maj. E. Brooke Lee, commander of the Seventh Battalion, which includes Montgomery County, said that he would lose 75 men out of 180, and 6 officers out of 11 in Montgomery County alone.

End of the Barham

Reporter Sees Battleship Die In Great, Rending Blast

(Larry Allen, the A.P.'s veteran seagoing war correspondent attached to the British Mediterranean fleet, yesterday got back to New York on furlough a few hours ahead of his story describing the sinking of H. M. battleship Barham last November 25. The story, which follows, had been held up by the British censor.—Editor's note.)

By Larry Allen

Aboard the British Mediterranean Flagship Queen Elizabeth, Nov. 25, 1941 (Delayed by Censor).—The British battleship Barham, struck by four torpedoes from an enemy submarine, exploded and sank within five minutes today off the Libyan coast.

LARRY ALLEN

I saw the Barham go down in a cloud of flame and smoke in one of the most spectacular scenes of the war.

The blast was so great that it was believed the attacking submarine may well have been destroyed by concussion.

The fleet was making a wide westward sweep in search of Axis convoys when a single submarine made a daring daylight penetration of the line of destroyers screening the battleships.

At a range of 700 yards, the submarine fired its salvo, apparently at the Queen Elizabeth.

Just at that moment, this battleship made a quick zig-zag, and the torpedoes sped on to strike the Barham, which was following closely in battle formation.

In the commander's cabin I heard the successive clanging crash of the torpedoes and raced to the upper deck.

The Barham, a 31,000-ton giant, already was listing heavily to port.

As I watched, she wobbled over more heavily, like some punch-drunk prize fighter.

From quarterdeck to forecastle, all along her starboard side, hundreds of men began leaping into the calm blue water that contrasted with the U. S. Command Unified in 3 Outpost Zones

Hawaii, Canal Zone Included; Airforce Leadership Shuffled

By Marshall Andrews
Post Staff Writer

Unified command of Army and Navy forces in three war zones was announced yesterday by Secretary of War Stimson, who at the same time revealed important changes among top jobs in the Air Corps.

Operations of all forces in Hawaii will be under the Navy; in the Panama Canal Zone, under an air officer of the Army, and in the Western Caribbean, including Puerto Rico, under the Navy. All Allied forces in the Far East already have been placed under command of British Gen. Sir Archibald P. Wavell.

In the Air Corps, Maj. Gen. Carl Spaatz, former chief of the Air Staff, was named chief of the Army Air Force Combat Command, succeeding Lieut. Gen. Delos C. Emmons, who became chief of the Hawaiian Department when Maj. Gen. Walter C. Short was relieved after the Pearl Harbor attack. Maj. Gen. Frederick L. Martin, commander of air forces in Hawaii December 7 but not mentioned in the report of the Roberts Commission, was appointed to command the Second Air Force at Fort George Wright, Wash.

Stimson denied the coordination of military and naval effort made possible by unified command in various theaters of operations was a result of the Roberts report. The question of unity in command, he told a press conference, had been

Churchill Gets 464-to-1 Vote Of Confidence

U. S. Troops' Arrival Releases Arms Stores To Far East, He Says

By William B. Dickinson
United Press Staff Writer

London, Jan. 29.—Prime Minister Churchill won a 464-to-1 vote of confidence from the House of Commons today after asserting that although there had been mistakes in his Far Eastern policy, the arrival of American troops in the British Isles would release vast stores of arms to Allied forces in the Pacific.

He said the landing of United States troops in North Ireland met American wishes "that the large mass of trained and equipped troops they have in the United States should come in contact with the enemy as close and as soon as possible."

"The fact that the United States has been able to send well-equipped divisions to Britain so easily and so rapidly will enable substantial supplies of munitions and weapons held to Britain's account in the United States to be sent to Australia and New Zealand," he said.

With this word of promise Churchill survived the worst governmental crisis of his wartime career. And despite the virtual unanimity of the vote, his victory was tempered with the knowledge that the country as a whole and many members of Parliament in particular feel that some members of his

Henderson Checks On Tire Dealers' Stocks, Records

Hinting that there have been widespread violations of the tire rationing order, Price Administrator Leon Henderson yesterday announced a Nation-wide investigation of the stocks and records of tire dealers.

He said that if "unauthorized" transfers of new tires are uncovered, the dealer will be required to explain the transactions, and cases of deliberate violation of the order will be referred to the enforcement division of the Office of Price Administration for possible prosecution.

Roosevelt to Talk On Progress of War About Feb. 22

President Roosevelt expects to deliver a radio talk to the Nation about February 22 regarding the progress of the war effort, it was announced yesterday. By that time "it is quite possible he will have things of importance to say," Presidential Secretary Stephen T. Early commented.

Early said the White House had been receiving, by mail, telegram and orally, many requests that the Chief Executive make another fireside chat to the country "to dissipate poisonous and troublesome rumors and in so far as possible to give the country a clearer and better understanding of the war."

San Francisco, Los Angeles Waterfronts To Be Cleared

Attorney General Biddle last night ordered all German, Japanese and Italian nationals to leave specified vital areas in San Francisco and Los Angeles by February 24 and announced that 27 additional prohibited areas recommended by the War Department would be published today.

The order was only the first, Biddle said, of numerous such actions to be taken as the Justice Department receives additional recommendations from the War and Navy Departments, which are expected to apply to other Western States.

The initial areas include, at San Francisco, the entire waterfront from China Basin to the Presidio reservation boundary line, including the Embarcadero and some nearby areas, and, at Los Angeles, the area at the shoreline near the intersection of Sepulveda Boulevard and Rosecrans Avenue, easterly to Western Avenue, and then northerly to Manchester Avenue, and then westerly to the ocean.

Several Thousand Must Move

The Attorney General was unable to give an exact figure on the number of aliens, principally Japanese, who would be moved out of the two areas, but said that it would be "several thousand." The number to be affected by the 27 prohibited areas which will be designated today is expected to be considerably smaller.

The "final date" after which no alien enemy may remain in or enter the 27 areas will be February 15. The difference in the dates, it was explained, is due to the fact that relatively few enemy aliens now are in the areas to be named today, compared with the number in the first two designated regions. Thus the problem of moving or excluding them is much easier.

Biddle said that in addition to the War and Navy Departments, he was cooperating with the Labor, Treasury and Agriculture Departments, the Federal Security Agency, the Works Projects Administration and the Office of Facts and Figures.

Part of Big Program

These steps, the Attorney General said, represent moves in "steadily tightening control of enemy aliens"—a "large and carefully worked out program" for internal security.

The Attorney General was unable to say where the alien enemies sent out of vital areas would be expected to go, but he said that assistance would be given where necessary.

The particular areas will be policed by representatives of the Justice Department with assistance from the Army.

10% Increase In Fares Granted To Bus Lines

The Interstate Commerce Commission authorized the Nation's bus lines yesterday to increase their passenger fares by 10 per cent.

The new fares can become effective ten days after formal notice is given by the carriers.

Exempted from the increased fares are members of the Army, Navy, Marine Corps and Coast Guard and personnel of the British military forces traveling in uniform.

'Sighted Sub, Sank Same,' Flier Reports

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

"Sighted sub, sank same."

With such brevity, a Navy petty officer pilot on ocean patrol duty reported performance of a duty, and Navy Department officials let the Nation in for a prideful chuckle over it, despite the Navy rule of not revealing individual submarine sinkings.

Officials would give no details of this bit of action, refusing to reveal when or where it took place or even whether the victim was a German, Italian or Japanese undersea fighter.

The Navy Department did strongly indicate in a communique, however, that other enemy submarines had been destroyed.

It disclosed, also, that Midway Island, America's westernmost mid-Pacific outpost, had been attacked again by two Japanese submarines but had driven off the attacking ships with artillery fire, scoring a hit on one of them.

The communique told of continu-

MacArthur's Guns Smash Twin Assaults

U. S. Bombers Sink Another Transport in Macassar Strait Port

American forces in the Far East were disclosed yesterday to have scored new blows against the enemy, as President Quezon of the Philippine Commonwealth pledged that his people will fight on "until victory."

The War Department announced that five American four-engined bombers had made a third attack on Japanese shipping in the Macassar Straits and destroyed an enemy transport in Balik Papan harbor. Another transport was set on fire and two Jap fighter planes were shot down by the bombers, it was said.

All of the American craft returned safely to their base after damaging a third enemy plane.

On Batan Peninsula, meanwhile, the Japanese returned to the attack after several days of inaction, making heavy assaults on Gen. Douglas MacArthur's left and right flanks.

Both attacks were broken up by concentrated artillery fire and the enemy was thrown back with heavy losses, the War Department stated.

President Quezon's pledge to fight on was contained in a message to Gen. MacArthur, which the latter sent to officials here. It was published in last night's Army communique.

The Filipino executive declared that Japanese troops are occupying only one-third of the commonwealth territory and that in the remaining areas "constitutional government is still in operation under my authority."

"The determination of the people of the Philippines to continue fighting side by side with the United States until victory is won has in no way been weakened by the tem-

Taxi 'Pick-up' Service to Get 30-Day Trial Starting Feb. 9

By Howard F. Wentworth
Post Staff Writer

A 30-day trial of taxicab "pick-up" service will begin here February 9, the Public Utilities Commission announced last night.

Fourteen taxi associations, controlling some 2500 cabs, were authorized to participate in the new transportation plan.

The service was ordered as an experiment to relieve the war-time strain on mass transportation facilities and P. U. C. Chairman Gregory Hankin said a public hearing on its continuance would be held at 10 a. m. March 5 in Room 203 of the District Building.

Under the new set-up, authorized taximen will operate an "emergency pick-up service" during rush hours—from 7:30 to 9:30 a. m. and from 3:30 to 6:30 p. m. on all week-days.

They will be permitted—in zones 1 and 2 only—to pick up a maximum of four passengers who may be traveling in the same general direction.

Foe Shifts Attack

By the Associated Press

The Japanese, still trying with a heedless fanaticism to hurl the surviving units of their crippled southern invasion fleet through the terrible Allied fire covering Macassar Strait, extended their landings in the Dutch East Indies yesterday by another and less costly approach.

In Malaya, the invader had not been halted in his slow push in the central and eastern sections down upon Singapore, although his columns in the western side of the peninsula apparently had been checked. At the center his troops, having overrun the desperate bayonet counterattacks of the out-numbered Australians, stood within 30 miles of the Singapore base about the railway town of Layang-Layang.

In the Indies the enemy's new incursions were made not through Macassar Strait—there his main troop bodies still were transfixed in the channel under American-Dutch bomber and torpedo action—but on the opposite westward side of Borneo.

Land 525 Miles From Java

There Japanese troops landed at Permangkat, some 525 miles above Java, the center of the Dutch war effort and the seat of the Allied supreme command. Heavy land fighting in that same general area suggested also that a supplementary invasion overland was being directed over the very difficult terrain leading from the enemy-occupied Sarawak portion of Borneo.

The general enemy pattern in the thus far futile effort to get at Java thus appeared to be in two sections: He appeared determined, in spite of already tremendous losses figured by Washington at not less than 38 ships sunk or damaged and by other Allied sources at as high as 46, to bore through Macassar Strait at any cost, intending to divide what force might survive the passage for dual thrusts at the lower Celebes and Borneo coasts to put himself in position to strike across the Java Sea at the main Dutch naval base of Soerabaja on Java Island.

He was hacking down into western Borneo as a secondary part of this offensive, and the only part that had any success. At the port of Pontianak, 85 miles below Pemangkat, the Dutch garrison smashed all equipment of value.

What was left of the Macassar invasion train was a diminishing figure which earlier had been estimated at perhaps two-thirds of the invader's original strength. This same estimate, which was unofficial, assumed that 150,000 Japanese troops were aboard.

Whatever the outcome, it was plain that the enemy already had suffered a disaster not soon to be retrieved. It was equally plain that the Australians, who had been gravely worried, were much easier in mind. The Australian army minister, Francis M. Forde, implied as much.

Aussies Hit 2 More Ships At Rabaul

Melbourne, Australia, Jan. 29 (AP).—Australian aircraft scored a direct hit on one Japanese ship and probably hit another despite bad visibility in their third attack on Rabaul, New Britain, since the island port was occupied by the Japanese, an R. A. A. F. communique said today.

All the Australian planes returned to their base.

Four of the 11 Japanese vessels known to be at Rabaul were reported previously to have been knocked out of action by Australian raiders.

Reconnaissance flights over the Bismarck Archipelago, of which New Britain is a part, were reported to have disclosed no developments of major importance.

To Form Home Guard

Formation of a special people's army, trained on the lines of Britain's home guards, for protection of the commonwealth against invasion is to be discussed by Army Minister Francis M. Forde and Maj. Gen. Vernon Sturdee, chief of the Australian general staff.

Army headquarters reported that New Britain was believed to be the only area where land fighting is taking place. The position there is obscure. Every effort is being made to establish communication with the Australian militia and guerrilla fighters making their stand in the mountains west of Rabaul.

The war cabinet this morning discussed reports of operations with the chiefs of staff of the three services. Forde announced later that certain "consequential communications" had been approved.

Turn in Tide Seen

By the Associated Press

San Francisco, Jan. 29.—Australian newspapers are giving prominent display to a statement by Deputy Prime Minister Francis M. Fode that he is confident the initiative in the Southwest Pacific is passing to the Allies.

An Australian broadcast received here by the C. B. S. shortwave listening station gave a summary of Forde's conclusions. The announcer remarked that "the statement is notable because it is the first definite statement by an Australian cabinet minister that the tide at last shows signs of turning."

The smashing blow at the Japanese convoy in the Macassar Straits, the deputy prime minister said, was evidence that Allied powers in the southwest Pacific had reached the state at which they could seek out and attack the Japanese.

The broadcast said Forde "described the presence of American forces in the situation as 'inspiring' and added that the magnificent fight by the N. E. I. services had earned great gratitude and admiration from all Australians."

British Western Flank Holds but Foe Presses On in Center

By C. Yates McDaniel
Associated Press Staff Writer

Singapore, Jan. 29.—The British imperial line held firm today in the western Malaya sector, but still was beaten back elsewhere by the Japanese who had thrust to within 30 miles of Singapore on the central front tonight despite the strong and gallant bayonet counterattacks of the outnumbered Australians.

This, the most menacing advance reported by imperial headquarters, was accomplished by the Japanese fifth division of veteran shock troops over Australian infantrymen who had inflicted heavy casualties, but had been able only to interrupt and not to arrest the invader's slow and bloody push. A 9 p. m. curfew was proclaimed in Singapore tonight.

Advance Down Main Railroad

Fighting in this area, the afternoon British communique conceded, had extended down to the area of Layang-Layang, a town on the main Singapore railroad.

On the British right, along the east coast of the peninsula, action was heavy about Ulu Sedili, on the Sedili River 40 miles north of the Strait of Johore and some 15 miles below the scene of earlier fighting in that sector.

The imperial troops which clashed with the Japanese advanced units on the east coast road near Ulu Sedili were fighting closely pressed delaying actions after trapping a larger enemy party some miles to the north on January 27 between artillery and forward units.

Japs Lose 200 Men

When the brief but bitter engagement was over the Japanese had lost about 250 men and the Australians only about 30.

The Japanese lost some 200 killed and wounded yesterday in the central sector when one Australian company charged a much larger enemy force with bayonets.

While the imperial forces were stemming the Japanese push in the eastern and central sectors, British and Indian troops beleaguered several days ago in the Batu Pahat area continued cutting their way through.

By tonight, a British spokesman said, a further 570 British troops reached their own lines in addition to considerable numbers reported yesterday to have arrived.

On the left, however, where earlier enemy pressure had been concentrated along the Malayan west coast, British G. H. Q. announced succinctly:

"There is no change to report in the situation in the western sector." Thus the invader was being held about Rengit, some 40 miles above Singapore, which he had reached yesterday.

Still more imperial troops previously cut off in the area of Batu Pahat, up the west coast, had slipped through the enemy lines to rejoin the main British bodies.

Along the Strait of Johore, the last barrier before Singapore and a barrier but a mile wide, the British authorities continued their preparations to remove all civilians from a mile-deep strip—ready for a battle for this very island.

Aloft enemy and British activity was heavy during the day and over last night.

Japanese planes came over in the moonlight from shortly after sundown until early this morning. Although their bombs started several fires all were quickly controlled and it appeared that Singapore had lost little other than sleep.

Today, the city's ground and fighter defenses went into swidespread action against several formations of Japanese bombers escorted by fighters. A single Hurricane flew at screaming speed into a formation of 27 enemy bombers, wheeled and pursued the raiders into a cloudbank. An enemy raider fled, trailing smoke. British fighters forced the raiders to jettison their bombs.

No military damage was caused yesterday in the Singapore area, the British command announced. In today's air attack at least one enemy plane was destroyed, and probably another.

The ministry of information disclosed this evening that 105 persons were killed and 243 injured in Japanese raids on Singapore yesterday.

Honor Medal Awarded Hero Killed in Luzon

The first Congressional Medal of Honor to be given in this war has been awarded posthumously to Lieut. Alexander R. Nininger, jr., of the Philippine Scouts, the War Department announced yesterday.

Lieut. Nininger was awarded the decoration, highest given by this Nation for gallantry in action, for voluntarily joining a counterattack in which American positions were retaken from the Japanese January 12, on Batan Peninsula. He gave his life in the action.

He was recommended for the Medal of Honor by Gen. Douglas MacArthur, commanding in the Philippines, for "conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity above and beyond the call of duty in action with the enemy."

Braved Continuous Heavy Fire

"This officer," said the citation accompanying the medal, "though assigned to another company not then engaged in combat, voluntarily attached himself to Company K, same regiment, while that unit was being attacked by enemy forces superior in fire power. Enemy snipers in trees and foxholes had stopped counterattack to regain part of position.

"In hand-to-hand fighting which followed, Lieut. Nininger repeatedly forced his way to and into the hostile position. Though exposed to heavy enemy fire, he continued to attack with rifle and hand grenades and succeeded in destroying several enemy groups in foxholes and enemy snipers.

"Although wounded three times, he continued his attacks until he was killed, after pushing alone far within the enemy position. When his body was found after recapture of the position, one enemy officer and two enemy soldiers lay dead around him."

Father to Get Medal

The Medal of Honor will be presented to Lieut. Nininger's father, Alexander R. Nininger, sr., of Fort Lauderdale, Fla. Lieut. Nininger was born at Gainesville, Ga., and was graduated from the Military Academy at West Point in 1941.

Established by act of Congress in 1862, the Meal of Honor is the oldest and highest decoration conferred by the United States. Until the first World War, only 1723 were issued, and in the World War, only 95 soldiers out of more than 4 million received the medal.

It is awarded in the name of Congress for performance of an act above and beyond the call of duty, the omission of which would not subject the soldier to censure.

Batavia, N. E. I., Jan. 29.—Japanese invaders surged out of occupied British Sarawak in a combined land and sea offensive against Borneo's west coast today and forced one landing at Pemangkat, 320 miles due east of Singapore, where they were promptly blasted by Dutch naval planes, it was announced tonight.

Netherlands Indies troops destroyed everything of value before withdrawing from Pemangkat, which is 60 miles south of the Sarawak border and 85 miles north of the important equatorial port of Pontianak, the apparent Japanese objective in that area, it was announced. The defenders also fought doggedly against Japanese troops moving down from Sarawak by land.

It was the fifth invasion of Netherlands Indies territory and diverted attention from the titanic naval battle which has raged for a week in Macassar Strait, between East Borneo and Celebes. Japanese troops, landed from a 100-ship armada which has been under American and Dutch naval and air fire in Macassar, are now fighting at the East Borneo oil port of Balik Papan. These two Borneo invasion forces are separated, however, by 600 miles of trackless jungle.

A communique said that Dutch naval planes rushed to the scene of the latest landing and "carried out action against Japanese units." It is too early to announce the results, it said. The Dutch apparently had expected the assault, as their bombers had been blasting for two days at Kuching, capital of Sarawak, former domain of the white rajah, Sir Charles Vyner Brooke.

There was no information on the progress of the land drive from Sarawak, except that the Japanese were "exerting pressure on Netherlands Indies troops in the region." The drive apparently was following the coast line, since the interior is a virtually impenetrable jungle.

Official assurance came today that Dutch forces still were resisting at Balik Papan, in East Borneo, and Kendari, in southeastern Celebes, scene of Japanese landings last weekend. A Kendari report revealed that the Japanese landed at two points there under cover of fire from warships, but, the Dutch Aneta news agency said, "Our troops have held their positions."

Resistance at both Kendari and Balik Papan was described as "strong." At last reports a section of the badly battered invasion armada was under attack by American and Dutch planes near Balik Papan, and although it had last many ships and men, was still regarded as a grave threat to Java, principal island of the Indies.

Aneta quoted "informed sources" as saying that the Japanese fleet appeared to be trying to reach the southern end of the strait where it could separate, one section attacking the Borneo port of Banjermassin, an important trade center between the Banto and Martapyra Rivers, while the other attacked the Celebes Island capital of Macassar, a city of 90,000, known as the "key to the Moluccas."

Pontianak, an old fortified trading post and Kapuas River port lying just below the Equator, is directly threatened by the new drive "notwithstanding our firm resistance," the communique said.

Pemangkat, scene of the landing, is famous as the site of a battle between Netherlands troops and natives in 1850.

Scattered Japanese air raids on the Indies archipelago continued unabated. Emma Haven, on the Sumatra west coast, was bombed for the second successive day, but no casualties were reported. A communique said that "on several points in the outlying provinces air activity continues, while the enemy is apparently carrying out much air reconnaissance."

Tokyo Preparing To Celebrate Victory

Berlin (From German Broadcasts), Jan. 29 (AP).—The Berlin radio broadcast this dispatch from Tokyo today:

"First preparations are being made here (in Tokyo) for celebrating the fall of Singapore. A musical festival will be held in the big Hibiya hall (a municipal auditorium) as soon as the victory news is received. The festival will be followed by a procession through the main streets of the Japanese capital."

Yank Falls 10,000 Feet, Opens 'Chute

By Daniel de Luce
Associated Press Staff Writer

Rangoon, Burma, Jan. 29.—The young man from Chipley, Ga., came tumbling out of the blue Burma sky—down, down, down at the rate of 140 miles an hour.

Somewhere near him his bullet-slashed Tomahawk plane, flat on its back with the painted shark's teeth on its belly grinning up at the sun, spun to the earth like a crazy top—nose over tail, sidewise, backwards.

The Georgian kept falling. The half-broken strap of his wrist watch flapped annoyingly. He took it off and put it in his pocket.

He remembered a passage in his textbook which said a parachute jump gave very little feeling of dropping through space at a high rate of speed.

"Nuts," he thought, "I can feel myself falling now, and it's terrific."

Eye Bruised

The revolving sky, the rice paddies, the clouds and patches of green jungle made a crazy-quilt around him. No matter how he strained he couldn't manage to stay upright, feet first toward the ground.

When he finally pulled the rip-cord, for the first time in his life, he guessed he'd fallen 10,000 or 12,000 feet.

His chute opened and then, he said later, "I felt right in the groove." One eye was surrounded by a bruise from striking the bucking cockpit.

"Bailing out and falling so far was so the Japs wouldn't have a chance to take pot-shots at me the way they did at Chris (another American pilot) last week," said the Georgian.

"I Was on a Jap's Tail

"Gil and I had taken on seven Japs at about 21,000 feet. I was on a Jap's tail, firing, when my plane flopped over, out of control, probably from an attack by some one I never saw.

"I pulled back the hatch to change my Tommy's flying character, but it was no good. I was getting quite a belting around.

"After we'd dropped about 4000 feet I let go the safety buckle. All I knew after that was that the plane's tail went by me and I was dropping like a rock.

"It was a lot more sensation than they tell you in the textbooks.

"One plane came at me after the 'chute opened. I thought sure it was a Jap.

"Then I got a good look and it turned out to be Gil, just hanging around to convoy me down.

"I barely missed plopping into a cattle water-hole, and Tommy landed flat on his belly about a quarter of a mile away.

"The native farmers were very kind. One of them insisted on spurting mouthfuls of water to wash the blood off my forehead. Others stuffed my pockets full of crackers to eat on the way back to town.

"I got back so late the skipper didn't have me down on the next day's flying schedule. That's how you caught me loafing now," he said.

Chinese Batter At Guardians Of Rail Lines

By F. M. Fisher
United Press Staff Writer

Chungking, Jan. 28.—Chinese troops battered today at Japanese railway and highway communications near Canton, Shanghai and Hankow, as the Chinese army, through its newspaper, the Sao Tang Pao, called on the United States to fill the East Asia skies with war planes.

Chinese units seeking to break the Japanese hold on the Canton-Kowloon Railway blocked a Japanese counterattack on Poklo, east of the railway about 60 miles southeast of Canton, and drove the attackers back, an army communique said.

Nearly 700 miles to the northeast, other Chinese forces attacked the Japanese at several points in the Ningpo area, along the coast in Chekiang Province about 95 miles south of Shanghai.

The communique referred to these attacks as opening up "a new field of operations."

It was recalled here that foreign refugees from Shanghai who passed through Chekiang Province early this month had commented on weakness of Japanese garrisons in the interior, which apparently had been drained of men for use in the Philippines and Malaya.

The communique gave most prominence to new operations along the Peiping-Hankow railway in the vicinity of Sinyang, about 120 miles north of Hankow in southern Honan Province near the Hupeh border.

It reported successful attacks on two enemy-held railway towns and the destruction of 5000 feet of railway track and two bridges.

Allies Bag 13 Jap Planes In Rangoon

Rangoon, Burma, Jan. 29.—Paced by three resolute Texans, the unbeaten American volunteer squadron and R. A. F. colleagues tore 13 and possibly 17 more Japanese planes out of a mass enemy fighter sweep today and boosted their score of raiders destroyed since the war started to at least 111 machines.

Some Japanese wrecks were found as far as 18 miles from Rangoon, one having almost struck a white stone pagoda. Not an Allied plane was lost.

It was truly Texas day over the rice paddies of the Kipling country.

Sandy from San Antonio got three Japanese for sure, a total of five in the two days since he was transferred here from China.

Bill, also from San Antonio, got one for certain, increasing his bag to seven.

Kirk, of San Saba, came down safely, drenched with oil from a broken fuel line and creased across his forehead by a bullet.

"Now I'm really mad," he drawled. "Some guy got me while I was chasing another one at 20,000. I'd have stayed up but oil was squirting all over the cockpit."

It was not all Texas, either. The squadron leader, Jack, of Scarsdale, N. Y., added another victory to his string; so did Noel, from Randalia, Iowa, and Frank, of Pensacola, Fla.

Sub Is Sighted Near Los Angeles

Los Angeles, Jan. 29 (AP).—An enemy submarine was sighted today a short distance off Point Vicente, overlooking Los Angeles harbor, and Navy craft went into action, dropping depth charges without apparent result, a Navy announcement said.

porary reverses suffered by our arms," Quezon declared.

"We are convinced that our sacrifices will be crowned with victory in the end and in that conviction we shall continue to resist the enemy with all our might."

Quezon said that he had no direct information about reports broadcast from Tokyo that a commission of some well-known Filipinos had been organized to take charge of some civil Government functions. But, he added, that if this is true, it is no indication that the Filipinos are cooperating with the invaders.

The commission apparently is charged with purely administrative functions and its members evidently are serving only to safeguard the welfare of the civilian population of Manila.

Filipino sentiment, he added, remains fixed on two principles: "Loyalty to America and resolute resistance against the invasion of our territory and liberties."

The Army bomber attack on Balik Papan Harbor in eastern Borneo was apparently the same action reported from United Nations headquarters in the East Indies on Wednesday.

This exploit of American airmen brought the total enemy ship losses in the Macassar Strait during the past week to at least 13 sunk and 25 damaged. It is the fifty-third Japanese vessel officials listed as destroyed by American forces in the war to date.

Army Communique No. 81

"1. Philippine theater: Headlong enemy infantry assaults on the right and left flanks of our troops in the Batan Peninsula were broken up by our artillery fire. Enemy losses were heavy.

"Activity of hostile aircraft was limited to reconnaissance flights.

"2. Netherlands Indies: A third attack by heavy American bombers on Japanese shipping in Macassar Strait resulted in the destruction of an enemy transport in Balik Papan Harbor. Another transport was set on fire. Two enemy fighting planes were shot down and a third damaged. Five of our bombers participated in the attack and all returned safely to their base.

"3. There is nothing to report from other areas.

Army Communique No. 83.

"1. Philippine theater: The following message from His Excellency Manuel Quezon, President of the Philippine Commonwealth, was transmitted by Gen. MacArthur to the War Department today:

'The determination of the people of the Philippines to continue fighting side by side with the United States until victory is won has in no way been weakened by the temporary reverses suffered by our arms. We are convinced that our sacrifices will be crowned with victory in the end and in that conviction we shall continue to resist the enemy with all our might.

'Japanese military forces are occupying sections of the Philippines comprising only one-third of our territory. In the remaining areas constitutional government is still in operation under my authority.

"I have no direct information concerning the veracity of the news broadcast from Tokyo that a commission composed of some well-known Filipinos has been recently organized in Manila to take charge of certain functions of civil government. The organization of such a commission, if true, can have no political significance not only because it is charged merely with purely administrative functions, but also because the acquiescence by its members to serve in the commission was evidently for the purpose of safeguarding the welfare of the civilian population and can, in no way, reflect the sentiments of the Filipino toward the enemy. Such sentiments are still those I have repeatedly expressed in the past: Loyalty to America and resolute resistance against the invasion of our territory and liberties.

2. There is nothing to report from other areas.

R.A.F. Leader Held For 'Hostile' Link With Japanese

London, Jan. 29 (AP).—Squadron Leader F. J. Rutland, of the Royal Air Force, who returned from the United States last October, is being detained for "alleged hostile associations" with the Japanese while in Washington, an official spokesman announced today.

Detention of the veteran pilot involves "important military questions," he said.

Reds Drive 93 Miles West of the Donets

Advance Menaces Foe's Grip on Stalino; 25,000 Nazis Slain

By the Associated Press

Moscow (Friday), Jan. 30.—The Russians announced officially tonight the recapture of Lozovaya, midway between the Donets and Dnieper Rivers, disclosing a 93-mile drive in the industrial basin of the south which threatened the entire German winter line down to the Sea of Azov.

Four hundred populated points were retaken by the Red armies and 25,000 Nazis slain in ten days of bitter fighting through Tuesday, the communique said.

This big Soviet triumph in the south followed by a few days the powerful Red strides in the north which reached and passed Kholm, far above the pivotal Nazi central bastion of Smolensk.

The government newspaper Izvestia said the rout was so great that the German high command had ordered its retreating troops to "stand fast for Der Fuehrer or be shot."

German positions at Stalino, 75 miles to the southeast, were in danger of being outflanked by the capture of Lozovaya. The town also is only 70 miles northeast of Dnieperopetrovsk, the big Soviet industrial center captured by the Germans last year after the retreating Russians dynamited its great power dam.

Rail lines radiate from Lozovaya north to Kharkov, southwest to Dnieperopetrovsk and Zaporozhe, and west to Lubny and Kiev.

Soviet troops crossing the Donets took Barvenkova en route to Lozovaya, and Russian dispatches to Izvestia said that 1000 Germans were wiped out in a single day's action on this front.

Tanks Carry Troops

Izvestia named the routed German regiments in this area as the 228th, 229th, 339th and thirteenth infantry, and said the sixteenth Nazi motorized regiment and the third Hungarian cavalry also were badly mauled.

Russian troops rode atop tanks up to the fighting lines, and Cossack cavalry again proved their worth in scouting and pacing the attacks, it was said.

On the central front the Russians recaptured Sukhinichi and Myatlevo in mopping-up operations behind their advance troops pointed at Smolensk from the Kirov area, and also reoccupied Aleksandrov and Mokroye villages, a communique said.

In the January 18-27 period this booty was captured by the Russians:

More than one million cartridges, 100,000 mines, 80,000 rounds of ammunition, 62 miles of telephone cable, 23,000 hand grenades, 438 trucks with war material and other supplies, 24 stores of war materials, 2400 carts, 2800 horses.

In addition the Russians destroyed 28 tanks, 36 guns, 47 trench mortars, 133 railway trucks, 12 locomotives, 1071 supply trucks, 713 carts, 25 airplanes and 50 timber and earth defenses.

Maj. Gen. Gorodniansky, Lieut. Gen. Riabishev and Maj. Gen. Gretchko were cited for distinguished service.

Meanwhile, the Red air force was credited with destroying 27 German planes in Wednesday's fighting at a loss of eight planes. The Soviet airmen also destroyed 335 trucks, 100 carts and other equipment, and dispersed or annihilated five enemy battalions.

Maj. Gen. Grendal of the air corps declared in the army newspaper, Red Star, that winter had caught the Germans unprepared in Russia and that consequently they had suffered their worst aerial defeat of the war.

He cited the fact that the 100-plane Nazi raids on Moscow of last August had dwindled to 20-plane attacks in the first half of December, while in the last few days only one or two planes were heard in the capital area.

Russia nnaval dispatches from the far north said the Soviet Arctic submarines had sunk, among other German vessels, 45 troop and supply ships totalling 200,000 tons, despite hazardous operating conditions in the Barents Sea.

The Russian "Malutka," or baby submarine, was rated as a most effective weapon, one being credited with sinking seven Nazi transports.

Great credit for development of the fleet was given to Capt. Ivan Kolyshkin, described as "a Scotsman from Volga."

Japs Claim 9 Planes

Tokyo (From Japanese Broadcasts) Jan. 29 (AP).—The Domei News Agency reported today that Japanese planes dive-bombed the Rangoon airdrome both day and night yesterday and shot down nine enemy planes. Five others were believed shot down, it said, while "one Japanese aircraft dived headlong into an enemy position."

Enemy Sub Sunk, Navy Announces

ing operations of U-boats off the Atlantic Coast, some of them as far South as Florida, and added significantly:

"Counter measures by our forces are increasingly effective."

Holding to the policy of not announcing enemy submarine sinkings as they occur, the Navy communique did not elaborate on this terse but meaningful phrase.

Although the communique did not say so, many here believed that the Jap submarine hit by the Midway shore batteries must have been sunk. Earlier official reports said that the Marine garrison on the island was armed with 5-inch guns, and a direct hit by one of these would very likely put a sub out of action.

At the same time, the Navy spokesman disclosed that the American tanker Pan-Maine, reported by the Navy Department to have been torpedoed Monday night, is safe.

He declared that information just received indicated the tanker "escaped the attack and is afloat in good shape."

The vessel thus becomes the second intended U-boat victim to have been attacked but not sunk. The other was the American tanker, Malay, which survived an hour and a half attack and limped to port.

Nine merchant ships, however, have been sent to the bottom since the Axis opened U-boat warfare in American coastal waters more than two weeks ago.

The enemy submarines have been reported by the Navy to be operating all along the Atlantic Coast from Newfoundland south. There were reports from Texas Wednesday that some of the under-sea raiders were in the Gulf of Mexico, but the statement in last night's communique that the craft were believed to be "as far south as Florida" was taken to mean that the Navy believes the Texas reports to be erroneous.

Announcement of the sinking of an enemy submarine by a Navy plane brought to 20 the number of such craft which have been officially listed as destroyed by American forces in the Atlantic and Pacific.

The text of Navy communique No. 35 follows:

Navy Communique No. 35

"Central Pacific: Two enemy submarines appeared off Midway Island with the intention of shelling it. They were driven away by the artillery fire of our garrison. One hit was scored on one of the attacking submarines. No damage was inflicted on the Midway garrison and there were no injuries to personnel.

"Atlantic Area: Enemy submarines continue to operate off the East Coast of the United States and are reported as far south as Florida. Countermeasures by our forces are increasingly effective.

"There is nothing to report from other areas."

Bengasi Retaken, Rome Says; British Admit It Is Hemmed In

By the Associated Press

Rome (From Italian Broadcasts), Jan. 29.—The shell-shattered, often-bombed Libyan sea port of Bengasi has been recaptured by Gen. Erwin Rommel's African army, the Italian high command announced today.

German and Italian troops entered Bengasi, capital of Cirenaica and formerly a major Axis supply port, this morning.

(Thus the city, on the western side of the Cirenaican hump, changed hands for the fourth time. First taken by the British on February 7, 1941, in their initial Libyan thrust, it was recaptured by Rommel's forces two months later. The British drive to the west which started last November 18 swept into Bengasi little more than five weeks later, on December 25.)

City Is Probably Hemmed In, Cairo Says

Cario, Jan. 29 (AP).—The British command acknowledged today that Gen. Erwin Rommel's German and Italian forces appeared to have hemmed in Bengasi from the south and east in a drive that yesterday brought the Axis spearhead to El Regima, 16 miles east of the Cirenaican capital, on the highway leading into the Gebel El Achdar mountains.

(London said there was no confirmation of the Axis recapture of Bengasi, but that it would not be surprising if the port, generally considered indefensible, had been evacuated.)

The drive on Bengasi marked a sharp shift in the direction of the Axis thrust. Virtually halted two days ago by R. A. F. attacks in its attempt to push farther eastward, Rommel's army veered north and northwest.

Even this advance was carried out at the cost of terrific punishment from the air.

British Sink Jap Destroyer, Hit Another

By William W. White

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

London, Jan. 29.—In the first naval engagement between British and Japanese surface warships announced since the Pacific war began, two light British destroyers sank one Japanese destroyer and damaged another for the loss of the royal navy's 905-ton destroyer Thanet, the admiralty announced today.

The action took place Monday night off the coast near the town of Endau, 100 miles north of Singapore, when the Thanet and the 1090-ton Australian destroyer Vampire, which was transferred to the Australian navy in 1932, intercepted a Japanese force consisting of one cruiser and three destroyers.

The admiralty said "Our destroyers at once engaged the enemy who retired, and a running fight ensued."

Apparently the action took place so near the shore that some of the survivors of the Thanet were able to swim ashore, for the communique said. "It is hoped that many of the ship's company of H. M. S. Thanet will have reached the shore."

The Thanet's normal complement was 98 men. She was armed with three 4-inch guns, five smaller guns and four 21-inch torpedo tubes. The Vampire, which suffered neither casualties nor damage, has a complement of 134 and was employed in the last war as a flotilla leader.

The admiralty also announced today that the Free French Corvette Roselys, while on convoy escort duty, rammed an Axis submarine and then dropped depth charges in the area.

The U-boat was on the surface about 400 yards away when the corvette sighted her. As the corvette swung her helm over the submarine crash dived but the Roselys rammed her. As the corvette passed clear depth charges were dropped.

The admiralty concluded, "Since no prisoners were taken and no wreckage was picked up, it is impossible to say that this U-boat was destroyed, but there can be no doubt that it was seriously damaged. No casualties or damage of any consequence were suffered by the Roselys."

Rommel Promoted To Field Marshal

London, Jan. 29 (AP).—The Berlin radio, jubilant tonight with the announcement that the Axis forces had recaptured Bengasi, announced that Adolf Hitler had appointed Gen. Erwin Rommel, commander of the German Africa Corps, to the rank of field marshal, second class.

Reuters heard the broadcast.

Ex-Envoy Lauds Roosevelt for 'Aid to Mankind'

Kuibyshev, Russia, Jan. 29 (AP).—Alexander Troyanovsky, former Soviet Ambassador to both Washington and Tokyo, praised President Roosevelt today for "inestimable service to mankind" in connection with the President's sixtieth birthday tomorrow.

He expressed his views in the Moscow News, Soviet English-language organ now published in Kuibyshev.

"At the present time, when the United States is facing one of the gravest crises in its history," Troyanovsky wrote, "it is our firm belief that President Roosevelt, the United States Congress and with them the American people, will overcome all difficulties they encounter in their path."

Battle-Wise Larry Allen Home Again

By Seth Moseley
Associated Press Staff Writer

New York, Jan. 29.—Home from the war for a rest today came Associated Press's Larry Allen, wearing the British naval cap which bobbed up with him during months of battle, in which the British dubbed him "the darling of the Mediterranean fleet."

Jaunty and unscarred by Axis bombs and shells which he had faced on the decks of warships, Allen said he was in such a hurry to get home on leave that he had hitchhiked a ride on a bomber carrying William C. Bullitt, the President's personal representative, from Africa to a Western Hemisphere port.

"We'll be in this war for a hell of a long time," he declared. "At a minimum, three years; at a maximum, five years. I expect to get back into it, and I want to."

Often close to death, Allen's last hair-breadth escape occurred December 16, when he was aboard the British light cruiser Galatea, sunk by three torpedoes from an Axis submarine off the Egyptian Mediterranean coast in the darkness just after midnight. He fought through thick, oily scum from the sunken ship 45 minutes before being rescued.

Recuperated at Cairo

After recuperating at Cairo, Egypt, he met Bullitt there and asked the President's special representative to help him get back to the United States quickly. Bullitt said he was unable to do so, and left on a bomber for the Sudan in Africa. Allen followed aboard a commercial plane and caught up with Bullitt.

"He finally gave in," Allen said, with a grin. "I rode for two nights and three days in the bomb-storage compartment, the only place there was room for me. Sometimes I'd sit up and sometimes I'd lie down. We reached Trinidad and I got passage on a commercial plane there for New York."

He arrived here on the same Pan-American clipper with Bullitt.

There wasn't any doubt about what Allen thought of the British navy, when an interviewer asked him how well the British fought.

"The morale of the British fleet is excellent," he said. "They are the most courageous people I have ever seen."

The failure of the Italian navy in the Mediterranean, Allen added, was not due to lack of good ships or good war material.

"They have an excellent fleet, but they won't come out to fight," he said. "They have five battleships, 14 to 16 cruisers, 30 to 40 destroyers, 70 to 80 submarines, but most of them hug their ports. The British shoot straighter and think quicker."

Nazis Still Formidable

But the Germans were still formidable, Allen asserted, and he expressed belief that "their morale is still excellent."

Allen was on the British aircraft carrier Illustrous last January when 40 to 50 Nazi planes flung torpedoes at the Illustrious' sides and 100,000 pounds of high-explosive bombs at her flight deck in an unsuccessful attempt to sink her.

That was an incident in Allen's battle-ridden career in 1941. All around the Mediterranean area, Allen appeared at the moments when the big guns flashed and bombs fell with a roar.

Aboard the flagship Warspite May 13, he revealed that the British fleet was unscathed after a terrific air raid. At an Egyptian port 10 days later, he turned up with stories of the desperate slaughter in Crete, the drowning of 5000 Nazis at sea.

Since May, 1940, he has sailed nearly 100,000 miles with the British navy. He has been traveling ever since childhood, his parents moving from one state to another as often as five times a year.

A native of Mount Savage, Md., born there October 19, 1908, Allen sold newspapers to earn his way through high school and before joining the Associated Press in Charleston, W. Va., November 29, 1933, he worked on the Charleston (W. Va.) Daily Mail, the Baltimore (Md.) News, the Washington (D. C.) Herald, the Portsmouth (Ohio) Morning Sun, the Huntington (W. Va.) Evening Herald, and spent three months in Hollywood's motion picture studios.

He said he would celebrate being home in the United States by "eating all the hot dogs and T-bone steaks I can find."

British Observers Remark on Fine Physique of Men

By Rice Yahner
Associated Press Staff Writer

With the United States Army In Northern Ireland, Jan. 29.—Four thousand miles closer to the war in Europe, American troops fresh from United States camps buckled down under combat conditions today prepared for anything.

Scattered through 5200 square miles of Ulster, they settled into camps prepared by British soldiers, marched out the kinks of their transatlantic journey and concentrated on drills to protect themselves against German bombers and parachute troops.

"We are not surprised at anything any more," a group told me as I stood with them in the center of their camp on a hillside. They were encamped among the trees of what formerly was an Irish estate.

"We have traveled 6000 miles in the last month and a half, and surprises have run out," they said. "From here on we are ready to fight and get this thing over quickly."

The commanding officer at this base said that the boys, husky Midwesterners, are "ready for combat." They were in Federal service in the States for more than a year and in recent months have been in extensive maneuvers in the South.

British observers who have seen their own countrymen fighting in France and leaving Great Britain for other battlegrounds said that the Americans appear to be just as fit as the British soldiers.

Physique Remarkable

"But their physique is remarkable," said an English war correspondent who has seen continental fighting. "They generally are taller and huskier than the English. They are alert, eager and efficient, judging from what we have seen in this first lot."

"And such a variety of equipment," he continued. "Your men have great coats, mackintoshes (raincoats), short coats, field jackets and blouses. Our boys have great coats to wear over their battle dress, and their ground sheet (rubberized), which they can throw over them in bad weather in addition to using it for sleeping on the ground."

The British also are impressed by the way the Americans march "almost silently" in galoshes in contrast to the measured clop made by the hobnailed English boots. Neither is there the shouting of orders to which the British are accustomed.

"British sergeant-majors roar whether from tradition or whatnot," one British observer said, "and English soldiers expect to be shouted at."

Once Honored Grant

A North Ireland city which honored President Grant by giving him the freedom of the city 63 years ago officially welcomed the United States soldiers today. Standing beneath the Union Jack and the Stars and Stripes, Mayor F. J. Simmons, who also is a senator in the North Ireland Parliament, presided over a reception for Army and naval officers of the forces.

The historic Guildhall filled with cheers when the mayor mentioned the word "Americans" in saying they were received as comrades, and that no recognition has been taken in Ulster "of those who think you are here without being invited"—words obviously meant to be a reply to the complaint of Prime Minister De Valera of Eire.

Bullitt, Earle, War Reporter Arrive in N. Y.

New York, Jan. 29 (AP).—William C. Bullitt, personal representative of President Roosevelt, arrived today aboard a Pan American Airways clipper after an eightweek trip tot foreign areas.

Bullitt said he could not discuss his trip until after he had talked with the President, and added that he would go to Washington as soon as possible.

Also aboard were George H. Earle, United States Ambassador to Bulgaria and a former Governor of Pennsylvania; Larry Allen, Associated Press war correspondent, and E. N. Van Kleffen, Netherlands foreign minister, who said he was on his way to Washington to discuss the basic problems of the war in the Pacific.

Earle, who said he was going to his home at Haverford, Pa., declared that "German military morale has been very badly bent by three great shocks—the state of war with the United States, the mauling given German armies by Russia and the assumption of direct military command by a politician."

War Sidelights

Pipe Dream Comes True For Boy, 3

By the Associated Press

New Haven, Conn., Jan. 29.—Three-year-old Michael Bracelin finally has found the right pipe smoker.

Michael was only 18 months old when he left England with his mother and older brother for the duration. His father, Commander Peter T. Bracelin, of the British Navy, stayed behind because there was this business with the Axis to settle.

"For months," Mrs. Bracelin said today, "Michael has been asking every man he saw with a pipe whether or not he was his daddy, since he knew from pictures that his father smoked a pipe."

Michael got the right answer this week. After an 18-months' separation from his family, Commander Bracelin has arrived here for a brief visit pending a new assignment at an undisclosed port in America.

Commander Bracelin was one of the survivors of the British aircraft carrier Ark Royal, which was sunk in the Mediterranean last November.

Evacuees Returning

London, Jan. 29 (AP).—Lieut. Col. John J. Llewellyn, parliamentary secretary of the Minister of Transport, informed the House of Commons today that British women and children who had been removed to the United States and Canada are returning.

He said a small number of berths were being "specially allotted every month" to bring them back through the dangers of the Atlantic to comparatively bomb-free Britain.

Dutch Sub Sinks U-Boat

London, Jan. 29 (AP).—The Admiralty today identified the seagoing German submarine U-95 as the undersea boat which was sunk last November 26 in a torpedo duel with a Netherlands submarine on the moonlit surface of the Mediterranean.

Capt. Lieut. Gert Schreiber, commander of the 517-ton U-95, and 11 other officers and crew members—the only survivors—have been brought to Britain as prisoners.

The Netherlands submarine won the fight with a torpedo hit which ripped away the whole after part of the U-95. The German craft sank immediately.

Sink U-Boat, Win $200

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

New York, Jan. 29.—A prize of $200 for any Navy crew that sinks an enemy U-boat off the Atlantic Coast has been offered by Ralph M. Levey, president of International Looms, Inc., it was announced today by Rear Admiral Adolphus Andrews, commandant of the Third Naval District.

Levey said tonight that a desire to help turn the U-boat search into a "red hot hunting competition" prompted his offer, which he backed with a check for $1000 as a drawing fund.

Levey said a Cleveland friend heard of the prize and wanted to add $250 to it.

"I told him to think it over," Levey said, "and if he finds he's sure I'll relay his offer to the commandant."

Levey also offered a bonus of $100 to be paid to the Navy Relief Society, if a submarine is destroyed in the next 30 days.

In tentatively accepting the offer, pending final authorization by special legislation, Rear Admiral Andrews wrote: "Because of the necessary secrecy regarding our operations off this coast, I know that you will appreciate it will be impossible to announce these awards until such time as the revelation of this information would be of no use to the enemy."

He said that he would notify the Secretary of the Navy of Levey's proposed award.

McEntee Links Irish Plotters With Nazis

By the Associated Press

Dublin, Jan. 29.—Sean McEntee, minister of local government, told the Dail today that an organization in Eire was conspiring to "provoke attack upon us and bring about what these people have wanted—an actual state of war between Eire and Great Britain."

He avoided mentioning the outlawed Irish Republican Army by name, although an opposition leader in the Dail, John Dillon, named it yesterday, charging it had collaborated with Nazi agents dropped in Eire by parachute.

McEntee said Eire was "fanatically determined to remain at peace," but that the "conspiring organization" claimed to be at war with a nation with which the people of Eire wished to remain at peace.

Thus, he said, "we are entitled to call it armed rebellion."

He said that "until recently this organization was well supplied with funds. On some of those who have been arrested, considerable sums of money have been found."

Lately, however, "there was an outbreak of bank robbery and armed raids on postoffices and other places in which money might be found."

William T. Cosgrave, former President of the Irish Free State and an opposition leader, criticized the government for failure to name openly the organization to which it attributed conspiracy, murder and organized violence.

Cosgrave and Dillon sided with the government in defeating a motion to annual emergency powers under which military courts accept written statements as evidence in the absence of witnesses.

under "earnest study by the Army and Navy" for "many months" before Pearl Harbor.

"It has been accentuated," he said, "since the war began. It has been accomplished in some places already."

Supreme command in the Hawaiian area, under the arrangement announced yesterday, will go to Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, commander in chief of the Pacific fleet. Lieut. Gen. Emmons will serve as second in command.

In the Panama Canal Zone Lieut. Gen. Frank Andrews, an Army flying officer, will be in supreme command, assisted by naval officers.

In the western Caribbean Rear Admiral J. H. Hoover will have supreme command, assisted by officers of the Army.

Chief deputy to Gen. Wavell in the Far East is Lieut. Gen. George C. Brett, United States Army Air Corps, with Admiral Thomas C. Hart, commanding the Asiatic Fleet, heading naval operations.

In the Air Corps, Gen Spaatz's former duties as chief of the air staff will be taken over by Maj. Gen. Millard F. Harmon, whose former post as chief of the Second Air Force will be taken by Gen. Martin.

Maj. Gen. Barton K. Yount was named to head a new Flying Training Command designed to speed up training of 30,000 pilots for the 1942 production of combat aircraft. Yount is a pioneer in pilot training.

"Initially," Stimson said, "the Flying Training Command will embrace the Southeast, Gulf Coast and West Coast Air Corps training programs, but provision has been made to extend its control to additional units of an expanded training system to keep ahead of future needs."

Col. Edgar P. Sorenson, assistant chief of the air staff, was named director of bombardment aviation on the air staff, to be succeeded as assistant chief by Col. Thomas J. Hanley, jr., formerly executive officer of the First Air Force Base Command at Mitchel Field, Long Island.

Asked what action would be taken in the case of Gen. Short, Stimson said, "the only thing I can say is that the matter is now under careful study and consideration." Gen. Short, jointly with Admiral Husband E. Kimmel, former commander of the Pacific Fleet, was held responsible by the Roberts Commission for the success of the surprise attack there December 7.

Reporter Tells How H. M. S. Barham Met Doom in Great Blast of Flame

As the bodies struck the sea, they forced up little fountains which shone like diamonds.

Score after score of sailors plunged from the battleship. Soon I could see hundreds of heads bobbing above the surface. Some sailors managed to throw rubber floats down from the ship, upon which clambered dozens of men soon after they hit the water.

That all happened between 4:25 and 4:30 p. m. November 25. Executive officers of the Barham ordered: "Abandon ship!" Immediately afterward a heavy list developed and the Barham blew up at 4:30.

As the battleship Valiant veered away from the Barham, this flagship continued moving slowly eastward. The Barham was violently shaken by a series of blasts and burst into a great mass of flame and then was enveloped by a huge cloud of black smoke.

Great Sections Hurled Skyward

The air reeked with cordite fumes. Immediately with the explosions I saw huge sheets of armor-plating, whole sections of the battleship, and the Barham's big motor launch flung hundreds of feet into the air, falling with a loud smack into the sea dangerously near this battleship and the Valiant.

The tremendous compression of the air seemed to muffle the explosion.

All I felt aboard this battleship, which had pulled away to about 1000 yards distance, was a brisk gust of air.

Then black smoke spread over so wide an expanse of sea that I no longer could see the men or rafts in the water.

From both sides of the Queen Elizabeth, destroyers steamed full speed into the smoke that was the funeral pyre of one of Britain's greatest fighting ships.

They started picking up survivors and hunting the submarine simultaneously.

As the smoke drifted away there was nothing to be seen of the Barham.

Within a few seconds of the explosion of her magazines she had vanished. It had happened so quickly that it was difficult to believe what my own eyes had seen.

Scores of officers and seamen of the Queen Elizabeth, who had rushed on deck from a tea-time snack, stood helplessly as they watched the Barham die in a matter of moments.

The busy destroyers picked up about 500 of the Barham's 1400 men, including Vice Admiral Pridham Wippell, his secretary and 12 other officers.

The submarine apparently passed almost directly between the Barham and the battleship Valiant just after firing the torpedoes.

It was so close that the explosion of the torpedoes forced it momentarily to the surface. Some of the officers aboard this battleship said they saw the conning tower bob above water.

Then came the tremendous explosion of the Barham's magazines, and several officers expressed belief that the submarine, being so near, must have been crushed by the underwater concussion.

I was the only correspondent to witness the Barham's end. I shall never forget how bravely it seemed to fight to stay afloat with four gaping torpedo holes in her portside, but the great torrents of water pouring into her soon forced her over on her side.

It is amazing, considering the explosion, that 500 men escaped death.

Awed by this spectacle, many officers of this battleship, like myself, found it hard to believe the Barham was gone. When nothing but black smoke could be seen on the horizon, many of them remarked, "well, we cannot win all the time."

"But it was tough to see the old Barham go that way," they added, "she would rather have fought it out."

Two hours after the Barham was gone, Capt. C. B. Barry of this battleship told the ship's company over the loudspeaker, "you will all be glad to know that approximately 500 were saved from the Barham, including the vice admiral and his secretary."

Then, as every man aboard stood silently at his action station, an emotion-choked voice came over the speaker:

"This is the padre speaking. While we are thankful for those who are saved, let us not forget those who lost their lives, or, rather, have gone to a better life . . . Let us pray.

"O, Lord, grant those who have died Thy peace; let Thy protection shine upon them—these men who have given their lives for freedom."

This was the simple, moving requiem for the men of the Barham.

Their great ship, built in 1915 as a superdreadnaught, participated in the Battle of Jutland in 1916.

In the quiet years of peace, she spent much of her time in this very sea, the Mediterranean, on the empire's business.

She was damaged by a German submarine two years ago. (The Germans and the French also said she was damaged again in the Dakar Battle in September, 1940.) But she survived to carry her great battery of eight 15-inch guns into the battles of Cape Matapan and Crete and numerous lesser engagements before the familiar waters of the Mediterranean became her tomb.

U. S. Supplies Begin to Flow Across Africa

By Allen Raymond

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

Cairo, Jan. 29.—American war material and Americans to expedite it were flowing eastward across Africa today in several rivulets, but nowhere yet in any broad stream.

In the last five weeks en route here I have been in four seaports on the West African coast, several airdromes and two sizable cities, and on two railroad trains and a river steamboat. Every place I went I met Americans in brand-new uniforms, their faces turned eastward.

There weren't many in any one place, but there was always at least one, and usually there were several. These Americans are military and naval observers and technicians, as well as airplane ferry crews and others engaged in expediting the flow of American supplies and equipment to the British and their Allies.

Machines From Detroit

Shiny new trucks, sedans and station wagons from Detroit, and glistening airplanes which were still on the assembly lines of California factories only a few weeks ago, are a common sight today in darkest Africa. Many hundreds of miles from the nearest Axis bases the machines are being operated in regions where they move with striking incongruity with camel and donkey trains.

The Americans are now getting acquainted with their British allies, pooling their knowledge and techniques.

When they get together they talk shop. I have listened for hours to discussions on minute details of the construction and operation of small arms, big guns, tanks and planes of various sizes and types. After the day's work is done the British and Americans sit around, exchanging views on why a certain gadget worked well in one place and badly in another, and why some other mechanical contrivance fell down in one situation and performed magnificently in another.

They talk also of the German arms against which they are being pitted and as an observer listens to their conversations he realizes increasingly the highly industrialized nature of this war's operations. He realizes also that many extremely important mechanical and industrial discoveries are being made, and policies adopted, which cannot possibly be discussed in general public until after the war.

New Experiences

The progress of the newly arrived Americans across Africa is one that brings novel experiences and calls for adaptation to conditions few of them ever dreamed of meeting. The first knowledge of Africa that many get is that the continent requires white men to take care of themselves differently from the ways they had been used to, and that to continue to be fit requires innoculations against typhoid, paratyphoid, cholera and other diseases.

Uniformed Americans arriving on the continent have had these innoculations in camp. Followers like war correspondents get them upon arrival in order to be permitted to proceed on their journey. On the West African coast newly arrived Americans start taking quinine daily to ward off malaria.

senger for trips either from one zone to another or confined to a single zone. The first passenger to enter a cab, it was ordered, shall determine the first destination.

Each cab operating under the new service will display on the radiator grill a sign reading, "Emergency Pickup Service," and when carrying a capacity load will display a "full" sign on the right front window.

Loads, the PUC instructed, must be confined to three "fares" in the rear seat and one in the front. The prevailing zone rates will be charged for all other trips, said Hankin.

After the first passenger is picked up, subsequent passengers will be discharged in their respective order—unless they happen to be going to the same point or a point on the way to the original passenger's destination.

The P. U. C. acted on a petition for the "pick-up" service signed by representatives of the 14 taxi concerns. To participate in the scheme, all other cab operators must receive special authorization.

Cab compinies authorized include: Washington, Premier, Bell, Radio, Yellow, Checker, American, Lincoln, Diplomat, Harlem, Senator, Bison, Sun and General.

Something New Has Been Added To Our Reporter: A Manicure

Brush With Finer Things Finds Him Slightly Changed

Since there is such a delightful group of young people interested in learning cosmetology at the night class of the Chamberlain Vocational School, I wonder if you could arrange to have someone visit this class and have them shampooed, manicured and also have their hair styled? I am a student at the school.—From a letter to The Post.

Say, Boss:

After the girls look at my hair they ask me how many nights I have on this assignment, and when I say one they say, "How about the manicure?"

So I sit down among the many machines and while a student starts in on my digits, watch the school in operation and learn some things from Mrs. Aline Wade, who at 4 feet 11 inches and 94 pounds must be the cutest cosmetology instructor almost anywhere.

Despite some handicaps made by the war, beauty is marching right on at the Chamberlain School, operated by the public schools system.

True, the enrollment has dropped off some since Uncle Sam got into the war. Seems some of the students were a little worried about the place being so near to Bolling Field and what with thinking of the latest headlines and hearing the planes roar couldn't concentrate on a practice finger wave.

Men Students, Too

Mrs. Wade was telling about this when from one of the practice dressers a young man (yes, they have male students, too) turned toward her. He held a sheaf of black hair, attached to a head (not his own, but a model), in one hand.

"In a reverse roll, do you turn the pin curls forward or back, Mrs. Wade?"

After telling him "back," Mrs. Wade went on to say that the students in the course get a whole rigamorale in cosmetology instruction, including information about hair dyeing, anatomy and how to flatter the heck out of a client.

On this latter matter, boss, Mrs. Wade illustrated by saying you would never never tell a client that such and such a beauty preparation is made for old ladies and how would she like to try some? Instead you would say something like, "For women of your type, Mrs. Gosling, this is the better beauty preparation."

Hair Shorter Now

Some of the students are studying to be professional beauty operators and some are learning to pretty up themselves. Many graduates of the school now have District licenses, Mrs. Wade said.

A FACIAL for Wilda Way, Government worker, from the skilled hands of Aline Wade, cosmetology instructor at Chamberlain

Throughout the course the students keep right up on the latest in making the head a thing of beauty, indeed.

Thus they learn that hair is being cut shorter now. This is a move toward the practical. In wartime there are no hairpins to spare and also people are so busy they can't spend all day fooling with their hair.

"It takes war to bring things to normal," Mrs. Wade sagely observed as she smoothed her new "feathery bob."

Pupils can start in anytime, the course is open to anyone 16 or over, there is no fee and classes are held at 7:15 p. m. Mondays, Wednesdays, Thursdays, Mrs. Wade said.

Clinets From Neighborhood

The students practice on clients from the neighborhood and service is at cost. A manicure, for example, is only 20 cents.

The manicures are good, too, Boss. Mrs. Glena Gossett was through with mine about that time and it was a job to be proud of, especially considering the status of what she had to work on.

The hair restyling is good, too, everyone says. I had to take that on faith. No one would attempt to restyle my windblown in one night.

troversies over detail—indeed, if the bill that I have suggested does not make funds available within the next few weeks, I cannot accept responsibility for the disastrous conditions that face Washington, and for the effect such conditions will have on the war."

More Testimony Today

Representative Lanham assured him that the committee is moving as expeditiously as possible in its consideration of the bill. Today at 10:30 a. m. the committee will hear testimony from Civil Service Commission representatives.

Palmer added these details to the District housing picture:

Construction is expected to begin next week at Friendship, the estate sold by Mrs. Evalyn Walsh McLean to the Federal Government on a combination office structure and housing development which may be virtually a self-sufficient community.

The Civil Service Commission has requested a downtown temporary office building accommodating some 1000 persons which would serve as a "pool" in which new workers coming to Washington could "adjust themselves."

Representative Lanham and other committee members voiced disapproval of such a plan as "an invitation to people to come to Washington in search of jobs."

Allocations Urged

These allocations for District public improvements from the 50 million dollar amount were advocated by Palmer:

Streets and highways—$2,230,000.

Water supply and distribution—$2,577,000.

Sanitary and storm sewers and sewage disposal plants—$2,977,000.

Street lighting—$62,000.

Gas and electricity installations—1 million dollars.

Highway approaches—$1,500,000.

Construction of five schools (although eventual construction of 17 was previously advocated)—$1,800,000.

Construction of a new hospital—$609,000.

District departmental officials presented the picture of a local government totally unprepared to meet the demands of a huge population influx without financial aid.

J. B. Gordon, director of sanitary engineering, told the committee that water supplies and sewage disposal and refuse collection facilities are completely inadequate. He also warned that fire protection is inadequate in some sections of the Southeast because of low water pressure.

Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, director of highways, declared that it is difficult to determine what street improvements are needed until housing sites are fixed.

Dr. George C. Ruhland, District health officer, stated that 1000 new beds are required at Gallinger Hospital and Glenn Dale Sanatorium. He also reiterated the need for a new municipal health center.

Representative Randolph (Democrat), of West Virginia, chairman of the House District Committee, who attended the hearing with other members of his group, announced that the District Committee meeting scheduled for today has been postponed because of the continuation of the Public Buildings and Grounds Committee hearings this morning.

Pearl Harbor House Inquiry Voted Down

Proposals for a House Naval Affairs Committee "study" of the disaster at Pearl Harbor yesterday ran up against stifling opposition of Administration leaders as President Roosevelt moved to free the Federal Bureau of Investigation of restrictions now hampering its antiespionage activities.

Fifth Column activity in Hawaii was in a large measure responsible for the success of the Japanese attack December 7.

As the House committee voted, 16 to 4, to table a proposal that it request the Administration to supply it with the full report and evidence taken by the Roberts commission in its investigation of the attack, a White House spokesman envisioned as part of a legislative program to combat espionage, revival of a bill to permit wiretapping by accredited agents of the State, War and Navy intelligence services and the FBI.

"The President's feeling is that the handcuffs should be taken off the FBI and placed on somebody else," declared White House Secretary Stephen Early. As a result of disclosures by the Roberts Commission, he predicted an intense drive for corrective legislation.

Other moves in the aftermath of the Pearl Harbor report which found Admiral Husband Kimmel and Lieut. Gen. Walter Short derelict in duty, were:

Announcement by Attorney General Francis Biddle that all Japanese, German and Italian aliens were being removed from vital defense areas in Los Angeles and San Francisco on recommendation of the War Department. Twenty-seven additional defense areas on the Pacific Coast, it was said, will be designated for similar action today and others will be cleared within a few days.

Announcement by Senator Holman (Republican), of Oregon, that he has asked all West Coast Senators to discuss the possibility of removing aliens from coastal points and to consider measures now underway for protection of civilians and property in the area.

(The United Press reported "usually well-informed quarters" as stating that the FBI warned the Army and Navy on December 5—two days before the Pearl Harbor attack—that Japanese in Honolulu were telephoning significantly detailed information of disposition of the U. S. Fleet.)

Vote on Party Lines

The Naval Affairs Committee "study" of Pearl Harbor was suggested by Representative Maas (Republican), of Minnesota. Vote on the proposal was along party lines, suggesting Administration intervention.

Maas said the Roberts report "settled nothing fundamental." He observed that his objective had been to determine where "the system failed," whether, for example, the Army and Navy should operate under a single command.

Advocates of the investigation also wondered whether the elements of surprise at Pearl Harbor might have been caused by transfer of destroyers and other scouting vessels from the Pacific to the Atlantic.

Educator to Speak

Dr. Fred Pierce Corson, president of Dickinson College, Carlisle, Pa., will speak at the dinner of the Washington Methodist Union at 6:30 p. m. today at Hamline Methodist Church, Sixteenth and Allison Streets Northwest. Samuel W. McIntosh, union president, will be toastmaster.

Dealers' Records Checked For Tire-Ration Violations

(Titles issued here for 674 new motor vehicles since January 1—Page 32.)

By Alfred Friendly

Post Staff Writer

A strong hint that there have been widespread violations of the Government tire rationing program was contained yesterday in an announcement by Price Administrator Leon Henderson that he was making a Nation-wide investigation of the stocks and records of tire dealers.

Henderson, who is in charge of the strict rationing program, said that the purpose of the "inspection" was to "determine the extent of violation" of the regulations, and that first attention was being given to those dealers against whom complaints have been filed.

He added that if "unauthorized" transfers of new tires are uncovered, the dealer will be required to explain the transaction, and that cases of deliberate violation will be referred to the enforcement division of the Office of Price Administration.

If falsification of reports is involved, Henderson has powers to begin prosecution under Federal criminal statutes carrying penalties of fine and imprisonment.

The rationing regulations prohibit dealers selling new tires to all nonmilitary consumers except a small category of "eligibles." It is known that the OPA and local rationing boards have received numerous complaints that the rules were being evaded.

Meantime the War Department yesterday announced a two-fold program to conserve the Nation's stockpile of rubber. One phase contemplates the establishment of ten War Department field shops capable of recapping more than one million tires a year on Army vehicles.

Girl Tenants Rebuffed Here

They wash their underthings in the bathroom, lavatory or tub. They stay home nights and use up electricity, whereas a man will go out. It requires more time for them to take a bath. They entertain in the living room. And so on.

If you think this is petty on the part of the householders you ought to hear what some of the housing officials say about it.

"It's the most picayunish thing imaginable," one of them said. "What if girls are more trouble? Everyone else is making sacrifices nowadays and these people keep saying, 'We won't take roomers unless they're men.' It's downright unpatriotic. These girls are taking the place of men who are fighting. If we don't get places for them, there can't be any war."

Treasury May 'Suggest' Tax Changes Soon

A sharp trend toward a sales tax or a general manufacturers' excise tax in the House Ways and Means Committee yesterday raised a possibility that the Treasury will present "suggestions" in this field at the coming House tax hearings.

Indications that a majority of the Ways and Means Committee lean toward a sales tax followed the President's recommendations of a nine billion dollar tax program. A marked shift in Democratic sentiment yesterday clinched at least committee consideration of the plan.

Representative A. Willis Robertson (Democrat), of Virginia, former staunch opponent of the sales levy, said in his opinion "there is no escape from it now." Representative Wesley E. Disney, of Oklahoma, another Democratic committeeman, said he thought a majority of the committee would favor it.

Collections Up

"On the basis of 1941 incomes, there will be about four billion dollars in income taxes collected from 200,000 corporations," Robertson said yesterday.

"Collections in 1942 are expected to be even greater. While the Treasury estimates there will be 22 million individual income tax reports filed this year, the bulk of the payments will be made by some five million who have always paid.

"I think it will be financially impossible for personal or corporation taxpayers to assume a burden of seven billion dollars or any major part of it.

"If we are going to raise seven billion or nine billion dollars as the President has requested, I see no escape from some form of sales tax to raise part of it. The Treasury originally suggested at 15 per cent withholding tax. Certainly that is a far heavier tax on small incomes than any sales tax anyone has proposed."

Tax Battle Looms

Robertson told reporters that "the mere suggestion of a withholding tax by the Treasury is recognition that there is a point of diminishing returns on personal incomes and a point where industry can be hamstrung by corporate taxation."

Across the Capitol, Senator Brown (Democrat), of Michigan, a member of the Senate Finance Committee, said a major tax battle may be fought over the choice between a general sales tax or a withholding or wage-deduction tax.

Houston Sheriff Kills Constable, Self in Gun Brawl

Houston, Tex., Jan. 29 (AP).—Sheriff Norfleet Hill killed Constable Charlie Graham, then turned the gun on himself in his office today, Justice Tom Maes ruled in returning a murder-suicide verdict.

Deputy Sheriff Ira Saunders was wounded slightly in the shooting, its cause not immediately determined.

District Attorney Dan Jackson said five bullets were fired, all from Hill's .45-caliber automatic.

The floor of the outer office of the sheriff's department and the hallway to the steps of the criminal courts building were covered with blood.

Deputy Sheriff E. J. Buckley said the three men were alone in the office at the time of the shooting.

Lost Boy Frozen In Cape Blizzard

BOBBY KING, ,

after being lost overnight in a Cape Cod blizzard, froze to death yesterday. He was found, half-buried in snow, in a desolate shack on a snowbound artillery range near Camp Edwards, Sandwich, Mass. A posse of 200 soldiers, State troopers and volunteers had dug through 6-foot drifts in a frantic search for 20 hours.

Will Probated

The will of Joseph W. Meade, of Silver Spring, was admitted to probate in the Orphans' Court at Rockville yesterday. It bequeaths the entire estate, the value of which is not indicated, to his widow, Mrs. Ada Lois Meads, and names her executrix.

Gen. Patrick Dies; Was First Air Corps Chief

Maj. Gen. Mason M. Patrick, 78, first chief of the Army Air Corps and a member of the District Public Utilities Commission from 1929 to 1933, died yesterday at Walter Reed Hospital after a month's illness.

During the first World War, Gen. Patrick served in France, where he commanded the First Engineers, was in charge of engineer construction, American Expeditionary Forces, director of construction and forestry and, in 1918 he was made chief of the air service.

A classmate of Gen. John J. Pershing in the West Point class of 1886, Gen. Patrick was graduated three years later from the School of Engineering. He was commissioned as a second lieutenant in the Engineers Corps and was promoted through successive ranks until he became major general in 1918.

Commanded Fort Humphreys

After the war he served on the Inter-Allied Aviation Committee until 1919 and, on his return here, he served in the office of the chief of engineers, and later, as commander of Fort Humphrey, Va.

In 1921, following the dissension which split the air service, he succeeded Maj. Gen. Charles Menoher as chief of the reorganized Air Corps, the post he held until his retirement December 12, 1927.

In 1929 President Hoover appointed him to the Public Utilities Commission, the first retired Army officer to serve in that capacity. He was commissioner until his resignation in 1933.

Received Many Decorations

Gen. Patrick was awarded the French Legion of Honor, the Italian Order of Saint Maurice and Saint Lazarus, the Belgian Certificate of the Order of Leopold (Commander), the Order of the British Empire (Knight) and the Distinguished Service Medal, the citation for which is:

"He displayed much ability and devotion to duty as director of construction and forestry, and later, as chief of the Air Service of the American Expeditionary Forces, he perfected and ably administered the organization of this important department."

Gen. Patrick is survived by a son, Capt. Bream C. Patrick, Field Artillery, of Washington, and a sister, Mrs. Virginia Hill, of Dayton, Ohio.

Funeral services will be held at 11 a. m. Saturday at Fort Myer Chapel and burial will be in Arlington Cemetery.

Eight Drug Officials Lose Jobs As U. S. Charges Nazi Plot

By the Associated Press

The Treasury yesterday dismissed eight high officials of the Schering Corporation, Bloomfield, N. J., and asserted that the action "smashed completely a long-range German scheme to control an important segment o fthe pharmaceutical market in the Western Hemisphere."

The Schering Corporation was described as an important manufacturer of antishock vaccines, hormones, sulfa compounds and other pharmaceutical products "essential to the war effort."

Acting under Presidential orders freezing German-controlled property in this country, the Treasury dismissed the eight officials, blocked their personal bank accounts and forbade any other employes of the corporation to communicate with them without Treasury consent.

Officials Named

The officials, their salaries, and alleged connections were:

Dr. Julius Weltzien, president, $60,000, formerly president of the Schering company in Berlin and subsidiaries in South America; Ernst Hammer, promotion manager, $22,000, formerly South American representative; Hans Erdmann, engineering director, $10,000, formerly chemical equipment designer in Berlin; Martin Bernhardt, legal adviser and comptroller, $9,400, former vice president of the German Schering company, and four lesser employes with German connections.

While the Treasury did not explain this point, it was understood Americans will be placed in charge of the company. At the same time, however, the Treasury announced it had refused permission for George Gallowhur, of New York City, to buy the controlling interest in the company. No reason was given.

Conducted Vital Research

The Treasury said that the company not only made drugs important to American defense but also was conducting "vital research" in its laboratories at Bloomfield which could be coordinated with scientific discoveries in other United Nations laboratories to help defeat the Axis.

"Heretofore," the Treasury said in a statement, "the United States Government has been unwilling to exchange pharmaceutical secrets with Schering Corporation in order to further development of vital drugs because it felt that important scientific discoveries might be made known to German agents and benefit the Axis."

The statement alleged that in 1933 the Schering Co. in Berlin "undertook a long-range scheme to maintain its world-wide economic position."

Part of this plan, allegedly ordered by Marshal Goering, was to disguise the German ownership of subsidiaries in other parts of the world by selling them to Swiss interests.

Col. Rigby Addresses Federal Bar Luncheon

"More than half the workers in English factories are women," said Col. William Cattron Rigby, of the judge advocate's office, at the Federal Bar Association weekly luncheon yesterday as he told of his recent two-months trip to England.

Next week's luncheon will be held at 12:30 p.m. in the Harrington Hotel, Eleventh and E Streets Northwest. John T. Vance, law librarian of Library of Congress, will speak on "Hunting Law Books South of the Border."

Ringside Table

With Mary Harris

THE WORLD'S GREATEST BIRTHDAY PARTY will be celebrated royally in Washington tonight as well as all over the United States. President's Birthday dinner dances will be held at the Shoreham, Wardman Park, Hamilton and Mayflower Hotels. The straight tariff of $5 gives you a fancy dinner, gala trimmings, dancing all evening, views of all the visiting movie stars and that happy feeling of having helped in the Fight Infantile Paralysis Campaign.

Gene Austin, noted musician and impresario, will soon open a brilliant new place to be called "Blue Heaven," across the street from the Mayflower Hotel. It's said that New York's Billy Rose was angling for the same location but the Austin cohorts got there first.

CROSSROADS CONTEST. All of Washington's cute canaries should caper out to Crossroads next Tuesday eve between 9:30 and 10 and interview Owner Edgar Baum who is launching a series of Tuesday auditions for girl singers. The auditions will continue on all Tuesdays in February and the winner will become the singer with Ralph Hawkins' Crossroadsters. Prizes for runners-up, too . . . Leader Ralph Hawkins and Singer Sid Cowen, of Crossroads, will broadcast over the March O'Dimes Program this afternoon.

TONY PASTOR and his band are filling the new Victory Room with some of the most magical dance rhythm ever heard in Washington. They play softly but with a knockout tempo—and the arrangements are right out of another world. There'll be tea dancing on Saturday and Sunday. All the collegiates for 50 miles around will probably be there.

Maestro Joseph Sudy, of the Cosmos Room, is all set to play the favorite tunes of the movie stars visiting Washington this week-end. He's been digging up this song information madly for days, knowing that visiting celebs never miss a twirl in Cosmos.

DEL RIO'S DEBUT was a combination of circus, style show, feast and get-together party all strung together to the accompaniment of Dick Stabile's grand music. So many people having such a wonderful time! The dance floor was a bouquet of beautiful gowns and the picture, in its broad sweep, made one think of the dazzling ensemble of a big musical show. High lights that stand out in our memory are the radio's Kibitzers playing Charlie MacCarthy with news commentator Walter Compton and the way Dick Stabile and Gracie Barrie trimmed up "Daddy" with those hilarious "Pappy" and "Mommy" lyrics.

OF RHYTHM GIRLS. Roberta, of the Mayflower Lounge, toured for seven months with Raymond Scott, creator of "Powerhouse" and "Eighteenth Century Drawing Rooms" . . . Juanita Juarez, Troika's spectacular warbling dancer, sings in both Spanish and Portuguese. Our impression is that she dances in all languages . . . Hilde Simmons, now at Paul Young's, does contralto acrobatics in swing tempo that rate an orchid studded with gold stars . . . Beverly Stull should be back at Burt's Trans-Lux with her accordion and apple-blossom smile in about a week. . . . Virginia Sothern, of the Madrillon, has been entertaining her younger sister, who's here from Portsmouth, Va. . . . Angie Rodante, of the Old New Orleans, has been singing in public since she was a kindergartner . . . Joyce James, attractive new organist at Mayfair, is a Denver girl.

The Shoreham's floor show, beginning Monday, will include Will and Gladys Ahern, a pair of young rodeo entertainers, and the acro-dancing Winter Sisters. That prize barytone, Gene Archer, will be held over.

STUDY IN ROMERESQUE. Dear Miss Harris: Over "Tea for Two" at the Neptune Room Grant Thompson said, "I'll tell you about 'This Love or Mine' for the clarinet. When I was a cowhand 'Home on the Range' the steers' mournful mooing 'Night and Day' made me vow to 'Say It With Music' that would have a 'Cheri-beri Beam.'" Sincerely, Frank Romer . . . Well, we'll be switched.

GOOD FOR GIGGLES. Those tremendous bustles worn by the lasses in the 'Gay Nineties" number in the Lotus "Victory Revue.' They're almost big as blimps . . . Accordionist Eddie Whitesel at the King Cole Room remarks, "We don't need marching songs for this war. All the soldiers are riding" . . . "Jivin' Jack" Schaffer, of the Casino Royal, giving his orchestra directions for an acrobatic act—"Play a fox trot 'till they turn blue in the face. Then hit a chord" . . . Guitarist Vince Terri's (Cafe Caprice) description of an anaemic fellow—"He's got a date with an iron lung" . . . Those amusing mechanized leers of the Balalaika Russians in their marionette number.

Harley Bowes' Double Deuces, two boys and two girls, playing electric mandolin, two guitars and bass, will open at the Hi Hat on Monday. They sing trios, duets and solos, too.

RECOMMENDED ROVING. Kavakos Grill is the scene of unbounded hilarity every night. Floor shows directed by clever Nell Deacon. Quantities of our service lads having the times of their lives . . .

MICHAEL PEDICIN, dynamic young leader of El Patio's Four Men of Rhythm

The Nightingale is going great guns. The boys of Jack Maggia's band who were recently shaken up in an auto accident, are all back on the bandstand making sweet music . . . Charlie Parrish and his six-piece band have made a click hit at the Log Tavern, will be packing in the customers over the weekend.

'Johnny Eager' Attracts Eager Crowds to Capitol

Robert Taylor and Lana Turner Are Costarred For First Time in A-1 Underworld Romance; Another All-Star Bill Occupies the Stage.

THERE IS GRADE-A ENTERTAINMENT at Loew's Capitol Theater this week on both screen and stage. And in the orchestra pit, too, come to think of it. More cash customers than the most capacious picture house in town could hold responded to its promise at yesterday's first performance. They were standing all over the place, waiting to get in as the early birds filed out.

It would be a bit on the side of supererogation to attempt to identify the primary lure. That, of course, would depend on individual taste. Whatever that taste might have been, there was something on the bill to gratify it. A personal guess would be that the first costellar alliance of Robert Taylor and Lana Turner probably exerted the strongest pull. It may have been that an unsuspected number of the gentry were eager to hear Cass Daley and Dean Murphy again and catch a glimpse of the exotic Carmen Amaya, one of the foremost of the Flamenco dancers, for the first time. Or possibly, the advance hint that "Johnny Eager," the picture in which T. 'n' T. both are and is starred, is a film that revives the most robust romantic and melodramatic elements of the "gangster" cycle that was once so popular, had something to do with it. At any rate, the combination is practically puncture-proof—like the tire you wish you could get, but can't!

"Johnny Eager" is a rip-snorting racketeer number that will rivet the interest once the spectator has adjusted himself to the strain on his credulity. It poses a slightly extravagant but sturdy romance against a killer-diller background of cops-and-robbers, in not too literal a sense, that frequently reaches white heat without ever shooting quite as straight as some of its pivotal characters. These are the paroled convict, reporting "honestly" to his board while engineering a lawless scheme to open a crooked dog track; the district attorney's impressionable daughter, who is conveniently a student of sociology, and a considerable number of lesser figures on both sides of the statutes. Precisely how Johnny Eager could masquerade as a trusty taxicab driver part of the time and operate as the big shot of the underworld, with palatial offices at the track for his headquarters, the rest is something to puzzle over. However, if you can get around that one and still accept the authorities as something scarcely one cut above the intellectual fiber of the hookworm, the film will blast you right out of your ennui with its torrid love, chilling action, eventual —but too late—regeneration of the head hoodlum and the philosophical by-play and humor scattered through the whole thing. It is about as good a gangster picture as any of them that came off the line after Joe Von Sternberg's "Underworld," 'way back yonder. Maybe better.

Taylor and Turner Do All Right

The title role is a little out of the groove of Robert Taylor's usual assignments. He is a tougher guy in this one than Tyrone Power was in that other Johnny named Apollo, but a thug you sort of like in spite of yourself. Lana Turner's role of the sheltered blonde, who succumbed to fascinations she could not quite define even to herself—as such young women sometimes do—has a part closely related to the one she played with Clark Gable in "Honky Tonk." She performs it with the same fine flair for armorplate innocence and looks like a million dollars in the process. Edward Arnold, as the district attorney caught in one of Johnny's best traps, has a role that is right down his gold coast and, as we have previously intimated, Van Heflin comes within an eyelash of stealing the picture from his corkscrew boss and everybody else involved. His philosophic drunk is a finely written part, played with the consummate skill of an artist in underemphasis. Robert Sterling, Patricia Dane, Glenda Farrell, Henry O'Neill and Diana Lewis are the others who help give the piece its high voltage. Mervyn LeRoy's direction knows all about this sort of thing.

No need to dissect Cass Daley, the eccentric songstress, and Dean Murphy, the White House's favorite mimic, again at this late point in their Capitol and Capital popularity. Both score the same old showstopping hits, Miss Daley with a grist of rowdy roundelays—including the "Lament of the Laundry Girl"—and Mr. Murphy with the finest bundle of character impressions Washington is ever privileged to enjoy. This Carmen Amaya is a fiery young person, with an amazing proficiency with the castanets and in bodily agility and precise tempo. Her dances are executed with a wild abandon that is something more than merely muscular. With her appear her two sisters, also dancers; a guitar virtuoso and a male master of ceremonies and singer. The three Hollywood Blondes and the Nelson Noveleties are nicely diverting. The Fox Movietone News and the "Toast to the President" overture, with Lew Davies and Bill Coyle doing the vocals, are the other auxiliaries of a bang-bang-up feature.

In Their First Costellar Film

LANA TURNER AND ROBERT TAYLOR
as the reformer's infatuated daughter and the hard-hitting paroled racketeer, in Metro-Goldyn-Mayer's production of "Johnny Eager," which yesterday opened its first Washington engagement as chief screen feature of the bill at Loew's Capitol Theater. Edward Arnold and Van Heflin are foremost among the others in roles of prime importance

Palace

Good as is "How Green Was My Valley," the cognoscenti are somewhat taken aback to find it so commercial a commodity. It requires a "Gone With the Wind" or a Mickey Rooney-Judy Garland triumph to do three weeks at F Street's Palace, but here's a film cursed with the label of artistic success that, by golly, everybody likes. So, it's being held for a third week.

"How Green Was My Valley" is, as you must have heard long since from word-of-mouth and printed remarks, the screen adaptation by Philip Dunne of Richard Llewellyn's best-selling book. It concerns the change of a quiet Welsh mining community into a sprawling, turbulent area. Told chiefly through the eyes of an aging man as he recalls his boyhood, its central figures are members of a single family. How several of the boys disagree with their father on the principle of unionism, how the sister marries a moneyed man whom she does not love, how an understanding minister keeps his patience at the bigotry of his charges, all these things and many more contribute to a whole which finally states: "Nothing really dies; all people and things live in memory."

Directed with acute perception by John Ford, this mood is convincing from beginning to end. The acting is particularly commendable—never is a character out of focus. As the youthful observer, Roddy McDowell scores the juvenile triumph of the season.

Columbia

Markedly "different" in appeal and approach, J. P. Marquand's "H. M. Pulham, Esq.," has reached film form to widespread acclaim. It resumed its downtown run yesterday morning at the Columbia.

While in outline the underlying motif of "H. M. Pulham, Esq.," is familiar, it is told with a freshness of invention and sincerity of feeling that make it exceptionally convincing film fare. Robert Young plays a conservative Bostonian in his forties, who receives a phone call from the girl he was going to marry 20 years before. He arranges to call upon her the next day. Before the meeting he reflects on the happiness of their former association and uncovers a question that has been gnawing at his mind for years: Should he have married the girl, a young lady of different background and interests?

She, it turns out, has been considering much the same thought and looks forward to their meeting as a solution to a vexing possibility. There is nothing sad nor reluctant in the conclusion they reach.

Robert Young plays the title role, neatly, straight-forwardly. Hedy Lamarr acts the interesting Marvin Myles, other half of the duo. Ruth Hussey's conception of the woman Pulham did marry is a model of discretion, while Van Heflin and and Charles Coburn are admirable in their supporting roles.

Others in the cast include Fay Holden (Mrs. Hardy), Bonita Granville, Douglas Wood, Lief Erickson, Phil Brown, Sara Haden, Charles Halton and David Clyde.

HEDDA HOPPER

Reeling 'Em Off for the Camps

Hollywood, Cal., Jan. 29.—Darryl Zanuck told me that the studios have made 200 reels of pictures for Washington, on 65 different subjects, all of them for Army camps, except two, which the Government thought so good they're being shown in theaters. They're about to start on a film showing our gliders and parachute troops.

JOEL McCREA

Now that Glenn Tryon is directing some of those streamlined comedies for Hal Roach, he was reminiscing about the time he worked for Hal as a comedian. They were doing a picture on location near Kernville, Calif., when Hal came to watch the company work. He was driving one of those sleek foreign cars, and said, "Look! Real German silver on the headlights!" Then because Glenn was so impressed, Hal asked him to ride home with him, and when they were coming through a fertile valley, Tryon giggled. Hal said, "What's so funny?" "Oh, nothing." But as they started down the steep grade, Hal laughed. Glenn asked him the same question, and Hal replied, "Well, only a few years ago I helped grade that blankety-blank mountain with a pair of mules." Glenn said, "Well, when I laughed, I remembered that only last year I helped harvest that thousand acres back there!"

Remember those fine English boys in "Goodbye, Mr. Chips?" Well, ever since that picture, Director Sam Wood has been keeping in touch with them. Seven of them have already given their lives to their country, and Avery Gluher, of the Royal Air Force, has brought down his ninth plane.

In "I Married A Witch," Joel McCrea starts out as a 50-year-old man in 1690, ends up a young man in 1942. Plays his great-great-grandfather, great grandfather, grandfather, father, and himself. That's what I call keeping it in the family.

Producer Sam Bischoff has an option on "Six Weeks of Happiness," a picture made in Budapest, and is hoping Bob Sherwood will make it into a play before they do a picture of it here.

When Irene Dunne came on the "Sheltered Lady" set wearing a smart new cloche on her head, Greg La Cava cracked, "It looks like something that came down in an air raid—or off Hedda Hopper!"

Richard Travis pulled off a sweet bit of acting on his recent visit to his home town in Arkansas. Shortly after he reached there, a drunkard attacked his father. Dick, with appendectomy stitches still in his side, bluffed the guy out of his father's flower shop.

Leon Errol sold his interest in a tire-retreading business only a year ago . . . Guy Kibbee amuses himself between shots on "Scattergood at the Races" by marking up slogans for service men. His pet so far is, "That girl on your lap may tell a Jap—so don't be a sap—watch your trap!"

Bill Orr's kid sister has caught the Hollywood spirit—refuses to do more than two high school plays a season . . . Billy Gilbert says a critic is a fellow who goes to Heaven when he dies, but doesn't like it.

When Porter Hall received an irate letter from a friend, saying that for the past three years he'd sent him Christmas cards in care of Paramount, where Hall is under contract, he called the studio mail department and asked, "Do you know Porter Hall?" "Porter Hall? No, never heard of him. What does he do?"

Glenn Ford got a fan letter from Robert Sermon, of Old Bridge, N. J., who says, "I'm practically a dead ringer for you, and am frequently mistaken for you. This is to let you know I would be happy to substitute for you in personal appearances anywhere in the East, or with your girl friends." Now, there's cooperation for you.

LEONARD LYONS

Loose-Leaf Notebook

New York, Jan. 29.

In the final scene of "Watch on the Rhine," Paul Lukas draws a Luger from his pocket and loads it in full view of the audience—as an indication that he plans to go out into the garden and shoot George Coulouris. Before the curtain went up, on the command performance in Washington Sunday night, two Secret Service men visited Lukas and inspected that Luger. "I have a replica, made of wood, which I'll be glad to use tonight." Lukas volunteered . . . "No, this gun's all right," they told him. "But in which direction do you face, when you draw it from your pocket?" . . . The star assured them that he would not face the box in which the President sat.

HELEN HAYES

The National Theater, where the command performance was given, has 1700 seats. The President later confided that his seat was the worst—for it was a box, and half the stage was out of view . . . When the cast went to the White House for supper, after the show, the President told them of his dream-cottage in Hyde Park. Roosevelt had planned two bedrooms, separated by one bathroom—but his family persuaded him to install a second bathroom. His final, vain objection was based on statistics. "Study the insurance company reports," the President pleaded with his children. "You'd be surprised the number of deaths from bathtub accidents each year."

This week, in a house on the banks of the Hudson, a mission covering a distance of over 15,000 miles will be completed. It began in London, where Bunte Howard, the British actress, sent her child to Helen Hayes and Charlie MacArthur, for the duration. Bunte's husband, Jack McNaughton, also is of the London stage. He now is a lieutenant in the British Army, stationed in Singapore . . . Dennis McEvoy, the newspaper correspondent,, was in Singapore recently. There he met Lieut. McNaughton. "If you ever get back to the States," said McNaughton,, "give this to my child."' He gave McEvoy his swagger-stick, worn by all British officers. It bears the inscription of his regiment. And this week McEvoy will go to Nyack, and deliver that gift—after carrying it through Australia, the Philippines and Pearl Harbor.

Maxim Litvinoff will make his first public address when he attends as guest of honor the Overseas Press Club dinner on February 26. Johannes Steel, the commentator, went to Washington and arranged for the Ambassador's acceptance . . . Some of the book-publishers are interested in publishing a novel written by Madame Litvinoff in London, many years ago, but she expresses no interest. "That book," she confesses, "is simply awful" . . . A New Yorker went to the State Department to obtain assistance for a lady now being held in a concentration camp in Germany. She was arrested in Yugoslavia. He says she's Billy Mitchell's sister, Ruth.

Beverly Paterno, who signed an agreement to start her night club career this week at the Bagatelle, is reneging. She sent notice that, despite the advertisements, she prefers to cancel . . . "Jason," Samson Raphaelson's new hit, is becoming a favorite in the Pulitzer Prize stakes. There isn't a dull moment in it . . . Ursula Parrott flew 1800 miles to attend the premiere of "Porgy and Bess," which was co-produced by her former husband, John Wildberg. Ursula also invited her son, now at Harvard, to fly to New York and attend the premiere with her. They arrived early in the morning, bought the newspapers, and read the show's rave notices. They both had miscalculated the opening date, and arrived one day too late.

When Winston Churchill sat with Harry Hopkins, he repeated the long list of synonyms he originated, for the name "Adolf Hitler." . . . "Do you know what Hitler is thinking of right now?" said Churchill. "He's thinking of how he'd like to meet me alone, somewhere, some place. Just the two of us. And he'd say: 'Churchill, I've had enough How do I get out of it?'"

Alex Dreier, who was N. B. C.'s Berlin correspondent for two years, just returned to America. Reservations were arranged for him at one of the best midtown hotels. After two years in Germany, Dreier demanded an assurance from the desk clerk, before taking the room, that it had hot, running water . . . The producers of "In Time to Come," which closes Saturday, may take it on tour . . . A local industrialist, pleased at Donald Nelson's appointment as head of WPB, insists that this appointment, nevertheless, spoiled one quick way of defeating the Japs. "We could've licked them fast," he explained, "by enticing them to Washington, and letting them choke in the red tape."

Three Labor Disputes Settled

The National War Labor Board, continuing a record of speedy settlements of industrial disputes, announced yesterday that three controversies, involving 3040 workers, had been settled by mediation or agreement to accept arbitration.

The first, concerning 2400 employes of the Mack Manufacturing Co., New Brunswick, N. J., represented by the C. I. O. United Auto Workers, was settled after five days of hearings before Board Mediator Lewis M. Gill.

The second, involving 140 A. F. of L. machinists at the Western Machine Tool Works, Holland, Mich., was settled by Conciliation Commissioner John L. Connor, acting as special board examiner.

The third agreement was on the part of the Carolina Transportation Association, Inc., and the A. F. of L. Teamsters to submit their controversy over wage increases for 500 employes to a three-man arbitration board.

Meantime, the board yesterday concluded extensive hearings on the North-South wage differential controversy between the C. I. O. Aluminum Workers and the Aluminum Co. of America. The dispute, deriving from an earlier case before the former National Defense Mediation Board, will be considered by the war labor agency at its next executive session.

The board yesterday announced the appointment of Ralph T. Seward as administrative associate member, in charge of the agency's mediation work. Seward was the executive secretary of the mediation board and later an alternate public member.

George Kirstein was appointed executive secretary of the board, and Gill was named assistant executive secretary. Both were mediation officers of the former mediation board.

Ecuador Joins Unit Breaking Axis Ties

By the United Press

Quito, Ecuador, Jan. 29.—Ecuador tonight severed diplomatic relations with Germany. Italy and Japan, becoming the nineteenth American nation to join the anti-Axis front by such action.

The German and Italian Minister and the Japanese Charge d'Affaires were notified of Ecuador's action at 5:30 p. m. It was understood that Cristobal Gangotena, undersecretary for foreign affairs, informed the Axis representatives of the action.

Ecuador's Ministers to Rome and Berlin and its consul general in Yokohama were notified at the same time.

The Axis diplomats received the notification without comment, an official statement said.

Meanwhile at Rio de Janeiro plans were being completed for a steady flow of war materials and munitions from the United States to Brazil for defense against the Axis as American foreign ministers conference delegates began leaving by special planes for their homes.

Joint United States-Brazilian defense bases were already being set up at strategic points, and a Brazilian military mission was due to leave soon for Washington, independent of the conference.

(The Santiago, Chile, newspaper La Hora said last night that the national defense council had asked Foreign Minister Juan B. Rossetti to invite Argentine, Brazilian and Peruvian army chiefs to Santiago for continental defense talks.)

Arturo de Souza Costa, Brazilian foreign minister, planned to leave for Washington Monday.

Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles went to the summer capital of Petropolis to bid farewell to President Getulio Vargas.

Roosevelt Lauds Peru in Message

President Roosevelt has sent to President Manuel Prado y Ugarteche of Peru an expression of satisfaction in behalf of himself and the people of the United States with Peru's action in severing diplomatic relations with Germany, Italy and Japan, the State Department announced last night.

The President's massage, dated Wednesday, said:

"Your excellency's Ambassador in Washington has officially conveyed the information that your government has severed relations with with Germany, Italy and Japan.

"It is a source of the greatest satisfaction to me and to the people of the United States to learn that the government and the people of Peru have by this action reaffirmed in an unequivocal and practical manner their position in the struggle against the forces which are endeavoring to execute a long-planned program of world conquest.

"It gives me pleasure at this time to express to you my profound appreciation of the outstanding part which you and your government have played in the development and strengthening of the concept of practical and effective inter-American solidarity which has found its highest expression in the achievements of the meeting at Rio de Janeiro.

"I am also glad to reiterate my firm confidence that our two governments, particularly during this period of emergency, will continue in every way to cooperate together in measures designed to further the economic and political defense of the Americas."

Navy Plane Budget Raised 4 Billions

with Knox in support of the big Navy appropriation measure.

Leaving the subcommittee hearing, the Secretary told reporters that with completion of its expansion program the Navy will "have supremacy of the seas all over the world."

Asked to comment on the Battle of Macassar Strait, he said only: "I'm very proud of what our Asiatic Fleet is doing."

Subcommittee members declined to discuss his confidential testimony but predicted the United States would master production problems this year and be prepared to strike hard next year. Committeemen said there are adequate facilities for construction of additional fighting planes and the main problem is one of providing trained workers for three-shift capacity.

In moving to set up the outlay for new planes, Overton said he had in mind not only added bomber power and protection of costly surface vessels, but replacement of any losses that might occur.

Partial Text of Churchill's Commons Speech

London, Jan. 29.—The following is a condensed text of Prime Minister Churchill's speech today in the House of Commons:

By the Associated Press

No one can say that this has not been full and free debate. No one can say that it has not been a necessary debate. Many will think it has been a valuable one.

In no country in the world at the present time could a government conducting war be exposed to such stress. No dictator country fighting for its life dare allow such discussion.

Even in the great democracy of the United States the Executive doesn't stand in the same direct, immediate, day-to-day relations to the legislative body as we do.

During my visit to America events occurred which altered in a decisive way the question of creating a ministry of production. President Roosevelt has appointed Mr. Donald Nelson to supervise the whole field of American production.

All the resources of our two countries are now pooled in shipping, munitions and raw materials; and some similar office—I will not say with exactly the same scope but similar scope—must be created here if harmonious and complete working between Great Britain and the United States is maintained at this very high level.

There are only a few points with which I shall deal this afternoon, but they are important points.

First is the advantage not only to Britain but to the empire of the arrival of a powerful American army and air force in the United Kingdom. First, it meets the wish of the American people and leaders of the republic that the large mass of trained and equipped troops they have in the armies of the United States shall come into contact with the enemy as close and as soon as possible.

Secondly, the presence of these forces in these islands will impart greater freedom of movement overseas to theaters where we already are engaged and greater movement of matured and seasoned divisions of the British army and will avoid the difficulty of reinforcing theaters in which we are engaged with troops of another nation with all the complications of armament and command which arise therefrom.

Therefore we must consider it as giving us a latitude maneuver which we did not hitherto possess.

Thirdly, the presence in our islands of this force and the establishment of a broader bridgehead between us and the New World constitute an important additional deterrent to invasion at a time when successful invasion of these islands is Hitler's last remaining hope of total victory.

Fourthly, the fact that well-equipped American divisions can be sent into these islands so easily and rapidly will enable substantial supplies of weapons and munitions now being made in the United States to be sent direct to the other side of the world—to Australia and New Zealand to meet new dangers to the home defense which are cast upon them by the Japanese war.

Lastly, this whole business cannot do Mr. De Valera any harm and it may do him some good.

It certainly offers a measure of protection to southern Ireland and Ireland as a whole, which she could not otherwise enjoy.

I feel sure that the House will find these reasons, or most of them, solid and satisfactory.

The course of this debate has mainly turned upon the admitted inadequacy of our preparations to meet the full onslaught of a new and mighty military opponent who has launched against us his whole energies and fury in Malaya and the Far East.

I do not of course pretend that these may not have been avoidable shortcomings and mistakes, or that more foresight might not have been shown in making use of our resources . . .

While I take full responsibility for the broad, strategic dispositions, that does not mean that scandals, inefficiency or misbehavior of functionaries at the particular moment or in particular places . . . will not be probed and that they will be covered by the general support I give our commanders in the filed.

I by no means say that faults have not been committed in a minor sphere, faults for which the government is blamed.

But when all is said and done the House must not be led into supposing that even if everything on the spot has gone perfectly, which is rare in war . . . that this would have made any decisive difference to the heavy British and American forfeits which followed inexorably upon the temporary loss of sea power in the Pacific, combined with the fact of our being so fully extended elsewhere . . .

Our ability to defend the Malay Peninsula was seriously prejudiced by the incursion of the Japanese into French Indo-China and the steady building up of very powerful forces and bases there.

Even at the time when I went to meet the President off Newfoundland, invasion of Siam seemed imminent and probable.

It was due to measures which the President took as a result of our conversations that this attack was staved off for so long and might well have been staved off indefinitely.

In ordinary circumstances, if we had not been engaged to the last ounce in Europe and the Nile Valley, we should ourselves of course, have confronted the Japanese aggression into Indo-China with the strongest possible resistance from the moment when they began to build up large military and air power there.

We were not in position to do this.

Ought we not then in the interval—I want to argue the case quite clearly—have refused our aid in munitions to Russia?

Part of what we sent to Russia would have made us . . . far better prepared in Malaya and Burma tion and I believe the vast majority of opinion in all parts of the House and country indorses our decision.

But apart from Russia what . . . and would really have dazzled the eyes of Brooke-Popham . . .

We did not make such a reduc- about the campaign in Libya?

Firstly, we hoped to remove, and we probably have removed, the menace to the Nile Valley from the west . . .

Secondly, this seemed the only place where we could open a second front against the enemy.

There is no doubt whatever, although our offensive in Libya was on a small scale compared with the mighty struggle on the Russian front, it nevertheless drew important German air forces from the Russian front.

They were moved at the most critical moment of the battle and transferred to the Mediterranean theater.

Thirdly, this second front afforded an opportunity of a fighting campaign against Germany and Italy on terms most costly to them.

Singapore Reinforced

Should we have been right to sacrifice all this and stand idle, on the defensive in the western desert, sending all available resources to garrison Malaya and to guard against war with Japan which might never have taken place and which I believe only did take place through the civil government being overwhelmed by a military coup d'etat?

I come now to the battle raging in Johore. I cannot tell how it will go or how the attack on the island of Singapore will go.

But a steady flow of reinforcements, both aircraft and troops, has flowed into the island for several weeks past.

All the forces which have been sent were set in motion within a few days, some within a few hours of the Japanese declaration of war.

To sum up, I submit that the main strategic political decision to aid Russia, deliver an offensive in Libya and accept a consequential state of weakness in the then peaceful theater of the Far East was sound.

For this vote of confidence, on that I rest.

There, however, is one episode, tactical rather than strategic in character, about which many questions have been asked. The operation which led to the sinking of the Prince of Wales and the Repulse.

I have been asked very properly why the Prince of Wales and Repulse were sent to eastern waters if they could not properly be protected by aircraft?

The answer is that the decision to send these ships in advance to the Far East was taken in hope primarily of deterring Japan from going to war at all, or failing that, deterring her from sending convoys into the Gulf of Siam.

The suggestion that the naval staff desired to send an aircraft carrier and was overruled by me is as mischievous as it is untrue.

Unfortunately at the time, with the exception of an aircraft carrier in home waters, not a single ship of this kind was available through a series of accidents, some of very slight consequence.

All of them except this one with the home fleet were under repair.

Admiral Sir Tom Philips decided in view of the movement of Japanese transports with weak fighting escort toward the Kra Isthmus that drastic and urgent naval action was required.

Admiral Philips was fully aware of the risks he was taking.

Only after he left the harbor was he informed that fighter protection could not be provided.

His force was attacked not, as has been supposed, by torpedo or bomber aircraft flown off a carrier, but by very long-range, shore-based, heavy, two-engined bombers from a main Japanese airdrome 400 miles away.

In the opinion of the board of admiralty . . . the risks Admiral Philips took were fair and reasonable.

On behalf of His Majesty's government I make no complaint of the debate. I offer no apologies. I make no excuses. I make no promises.

Let every man act now in accordance with what he thinks is his duty in harmony with his heart and conscience.

464-to-1 Vote of Confidence Answers Churchill Critics

[The authoritative British Press Association and London papers, according to an Associated Press dispatch, predicted that over the weekend Churchill would announce appointment of Lord Beaverbrook to a new post as minister of production.

[Accompanying forecasts said Sir Stafford Cripps, Ambassador to Moscow, would be offered Beaverbrook's present job as minister of supply.]

Main points touched upon in Churchill's review of his administration were:

1. (U. S. troop arrivals)—Presence of American forces "constitutes an important additional deterrent to invasion at a time when successful invasion of these islands is Hitler's last remaining hope for total victory."

2. (Australia)—Australian demands for a fuller voice in conduct of the war have been deferred.

3. (Loss of the Prince of Wales and the Repulse)—The Prince of Wales, new 35,000-ton battleship and the battle cruiser Repulse were dispatched into the open sea without the protection of an aircraft carrier "because unfortunately, at the time, with the exception of aircraft carriers in home waters, not a single ship of this kind was available."

4. (Malaya and Singapore)—"We cannot tell how the battle of Johore or the attack on the island of Singapore will go," despite the fact reinforcements have been flowing steadily to Malaya since a few hours after the start of the attack. The government admittedly made mistakes in the Far East.

5. (Near East)—"If there's any place where we can fight them (Germany and Italy) with marked advantage, it is the western desert and Libya."

6. (Production minister)—He indicated he would appoint to full membership in the War Cabinet some coordinator of production such as Donald M. Nelson in the United States. It was suggested Lord Beaverbrook, present minister of supply, might get the post.

7. (Eire)—Referring to protests from Prime Minister Eamon De Valera of Eire at the A. E. F. landing in northern Ireland, Churchill said, "This business cannot do De Valera any harm and might do him good. It offers a measure of protection to southern Ireland and Ireland as a whole that she would not otherwise enjoy."

Although only one vote was recorded against Churchill—that of James Maxton, Laborite—two other independent Laborites, James McGovern and Campbell Stephen shouted "No" on the oral vote. In the final tally their votes were not recorded because both acted as tellers. Twenty-four members of the house, mostly independent Laborites, abstained from voting.

Churchill, in opening, said he would be "ready to profit to the full by the many constructive and helpful lines of thought which were advanced in the debate."

Contrasting Britain's freedom of speech with that of the Axis nations, he noted that "even in the great democracy of the United States the Executive does not stand in the same direct immediate, day-to-day relations with the legislative body that we do. The President in many vital respects is independent of the legislature. He is commander in chief of all forces of the Republic, he is fixed in a term of office during which his authority can scarcely be impugned."

The prime minister admitted that anxiety over the outcome of the Far Eastern struggle has increased with the growth of Japanese concentrations in threatened areas, but he said at the same time they were offset "by the continuous approach of the United States ever nearer to the confines of war."

He admitted that tanks and other supplies which the British sent to aid the Russians "would have made us far better prepared in Burma and Malaya.

At the same time, Churchill declared that in the long run, the decision of the government to aid Russia and to assume the offensive in Libya, accepting a consequential state of weakness in the then peaceful theater of the Far East, will "be found to have played a useful part in the general course of the war."

Head Of The ABCB

There are few if any more difficult jobs in the District service than that of chairman of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board. Subject to pressures from many sources, the board is always on the political firing line. It can be managed successfully only by public servants of courage, tact and alertness in enforcement of the law. That it has been so managed in recent years is a tribute to the conscientious service of Thomas E. Lodge, the chairman, and his associates, Agnes K. Mason and William P. Meredith.

The board works on the theory that the liquor industry must be kept under rigid control to avoid a fresh outcropping of abuses. So the total number of licenses issued has been held in check. Indeed, fewer liquor establishments were in operation in the fiscal year 1941 than in 1940, despite the increase in population. Regulations forbidding the establishment of new saloons and liquor stores near to churches and schools have been put into effect, along with various other sensible rules demanded by the public.

Administration within the board has also been greatly improved. The board survived a Congressional investigation without tarnishment of its reputation for fair and conscientious public service. For this good record Mr. Lodge is unquestionably entitled to a great deal of credit. His term expires next week. We hope that he will consent to remain at the head of the board for another four years. Since he has given a good account of himself in a most difficult job, it is to be assumed that the Commissioners will be eager to give him a new appointment.

That Price Bill

The President, according to report, will sign the price-control bill, despite its defects, and subsequently ask for strengthening amendments. Revision of the bill is certainly necessary. Revision is necessary not only to bolster up an intrinsically weak measure, but also to clarify textual obscurities and reconcile seeming contradictions. In particular, the sections dealing with farm prices raise a host of questions that would never have arisen if the Price Administrator had been given a free hand to control prices of farm products as well as other commodities. What, for instance, is likely to happen to the Department of Agriculture if it continues to sell stored wheat, corn and cotton at prices below the minimum ceilings set by the bill? If the bill becomes law, the department may soon find itself cited for lawbreaking.

The mere announcement that the Department of Agriculture intends to sell stored stocks of wheat and corn to feeders and processors, at prices approximating 85 per cent of parity, has brought a sharp drop in market quotations of grain. If the department is given a free hand to stabilize prices by operations of this kind, it can greatly aid the efforts of the Price Administrator to hold down living costs. But the terms of the price-control bill are far from reassuring that this can legally be done now. The bill states that "no agricultural commodity shall be sold within the United States pursuant to the provisions of this section (i. e. the section dealing with marketing practices) by any governmental agency at a price below the price limitations imposed by section 3 (a) of this act." Section 3 (a) is the one establishing minimum ceiling prices for agricultural commodities.

The bill further provides that neither the price-control act nor "any existing law shall be construed to authorize any action contrary to the provisions and purposes" of section 3. The House conferees on the bill interpreted these sweeping prohibitions to mean that no governmental agency could sell agricultural commodities below the highest of the ceiling levels specified in the bill, namely, 110 per cent of parity, the average prices of 1919-29, prevailing prices on October 1 or on December 15. Senator Brown, who headed the Senate conferees, was equally emphatic in asserting in the course of debate that the Commodity Credit Corporation would not be bound by the restrictions mentioned. Section 3, he contended, does not in any way affect prices of commodities now in existence and owned by Government marketing agencies. Senator Austin remarked, with evident skepticism, that he trusted this opinion was correct. We share that hope, but feel none too sure that the Department of Agriculture will be immune from attack, assuming the President signs the price-control bill.

Assuredly, if the farm bloc runs true to form, it will fight bitterly any attempts of the department to keep farm prices from skyrocketing by judiciously timed selling of surplus stocks. There is no denying that the price-control bill in its present form makes the department extremely vulnerable to legal assaults.

In full measure the felicitations of the entire country will go out to our President on his sixtieth birthday. No man has had so much responsibility to the people of the United States in the Nation's history. For we are engaged in our second war of independence. And Franklin Delano Roosevelt is our commander in chief in that struggle—a struggle which, because of the shrinkage of this planet, must now be waged all over the habitable globe. The American people, with the common sense which Theodore Roosevelt used to say was a President's great standby, know that victory depends in great part on the confidence they repose in their President. They have yielded that confidence without stint. And in their trust they are joined by the people in many other lands who are allied with our great and righteous cause and who look to the White House for leadership. Their struggle is coterminous with ours—the struggle of freemen everywhere against a massive irruption of that "crime without a name" which would fasten upon us all the chains of slavery. Some of our allies are brothers in arms only in their hearts. They are the silenced folk, but they will pray today with the American people and the fighting hosts of the United Nations that Mr. Roosevelt will be given strength for his tasks and wisdom for his judgments.

Mr. Roosevelt's shining attribute is that he has never shrunk from responsibility. Even the responsibility which comes to him from the embattled armies and the silent people across the seven seas is accepted without the slightest trepidation. It is a bold and inspirational hand, indeed, that grasps the tiller of the storm-tossed barque of freedom. Truly it can be said that when our civilization entered its darkest hour, Mr. Roosevelt chose to give to humanity what he might have sidestepped. The reason is that he sensed the true inwardness of our present convulsion in its embryonic days—what it meant for our country, for our civilization, for our world. That was the measure of his statesmanship. He is now in the very center of the whirling vortex where the steering is herculean. Accordingly, the task of his leadership is to be sure and steady in his direction of our war effort, to keep our martial ardor inflamed, and to strengthen the souls of the peoples of all the United Nations. Yet even all these giant demands upon him do not exhaust his notion of his historic duty. He is already looking beyond victory. He is thinking of the part he may be called upon to play in the repair of the ragged fabric of the civilization which our fighting armies are seeking to retrieve, and in helping the troubled world again to find an enduring path of peace and security. It is for such an undaunted man, stanch in his faith and in his bearing, that the American people wish well at this milestone in his lofty career.

End Of Rio

When the Rio conference of American foreign ministers convened on January 15, 13 of the 21 American republics were already at war with the Axis or had broken off diplomatic relations with those three powers. By the time the conference came to an end, yesterday, the number had risen to 18. Moreover, there was a strong possibility that Ecuador, now that her boundary dispute with Peru has been settled, would follow suit, and that Chile's concurrent action would occur soon after her presidential election, which takes place next Sunday. That would leave Argentina the only nation in this hemisphere still preserving the fiction of neutrality and still permitting German, Japanese and Italian missions to function within her borders.

Argentina's attitude seems to make the Rio conference less than a 100 per cent success. Yet this does not detract from the meaning and significance of what turned out to be the most important Pan American gathering ever held. Far more important than Argentina's intransigeance was the demonstration at Rio that the hemisphere is overwhelmingly united in opposition to the Axis. And even in Argentina's case there is the circumstance to be kept in mind that Dr. Ruiz Guinazu's obstructionist attitude went contrary to the expressed wishes of a large part of the Argentine population and reflected only the views of the minority government which, by a fluke, happens to be in power at Buenos Aires.

The fact is that the Rio conference, by any impartial standards, was an overwhelming success. It paved the way not merely for that break in diplomatic and commercial relations with our enemies by most of the nations that, before January 15, had refrained from such a move, but also for far-reaching and thoroughgoing cooperation in the military, economic and financial spheres. Hemisphere unity has thus been proved to be a reality rather than a banquet phrase. And, coming at a time when the war picture is by far from satisfactory from the standpoint of the United Nations, with this country and its allies receiving bad blows in the Pacific and North Africa, this demonstration of Pan-American solidarity against the Axis is particularly noteworthy and heartening.

Nelson Touch

Donald Nelson struck exactly the right note in his first appearance before a Congressional committee since he wrote his own ticket as head of the WPB. He was frankness itself. "I am ready to be the goat," he said. "I think the country expects it of me. I have everything to lose and nothing to gain." The encomiums which such candor obtained from the committee are an earnest that Mr. Nelson is well equipped on the political as well as the organizational side of his great task. It is vital to the successful prosecution of the war that the utmost confidence shall be maintained between the law-making body and a war executive who has been intrusted with Mr. Nelson's vast powers.

Nobody in this country, we dare say, is sharpening his knife for Mr. Nelson's scalp. No man ever entered upon his task with greater good will, for Mr. Nelson's failure would be catastrophic for the Nation, let alone himself. There is no more time available to the country to experiment with men who can really mobilize for war purposes the resources which we have relied upon complacently to overcome our enemies. If Mr. Nelson has everything to lose, so has the Nation. That is why this newspaper at the time of Mr. Nelson's appointment was so anxious that all the impediments should be removed which might jeopardize Mr. Nelson's success.

The impediments we have stressed hitherto are his absence from the Cabinet and the twilight zone between his office and that of the Federal Loan Administrator. Sufficient stress has been attached to the first impediment. As for the second, the inability of Mr. Jesse Jones to realize that from now on every minute must yield 60 seconds of distance run is a distinct handicap to Mr. Nelson. After all, Mr. Jones holds the purse strings in buying materials abroad. In this phase of his work Mr. Nelson, in other words, must wait upon Mr. Jones. They do things differently in Great Britain. Mr. Nelson's opposite numbers in the ministry of supply and the ministry of economic warfare each has its own funds for overseas purchases. That should have been the case with the WPB. When Mr. Nelson was writing his own ticket, he should have provided for the supervision of the Federal Loan Administrator's department along with the service procurement agencies. However, Mr. Nelson has got off to a good start; and none wishes him success more fervently than this newspaper.

Col. Knox Explains

When Secretary Knox declared on January 12 that Hitler is our principal enemy, that remark was immediately interpreted in China and elsewhere as meaning that this country planned to resist Japanese aggression in the Pacific only with the resources that were left after our main strength had been directed to fighting the Nazis. That was not what he meant, yet the interpretation given to his remarks nonetheless had an unfortunate effect. Wednesday, in a speech in Chicago, the Secretary of the Navy cleared up the point. He wanted to make it "emphatically clear," he told his listeners, that he regarded the war in the Pacific, the Atlantic, Russia, China, Malaya, Libya as "all one war, one world revolution, one bid for world mastery." And this happens to be the view of the Government and people of the United States. While American troops have been landed in North Ireland, American flying fortresses were battering away at Japanese communications in the waters washing the Dutch Indies, and American aid was being rushed to every theater of war. The volume of that aid is still, unhappily, far from what it ought to be and what it will be when our productive facilities are fully harnessed. This Nation is now acting on the assumption that the Pacific is a vital theater of the war which can be neglected only to our own deep hurt.

THIS FAREWELL

Having said goodbye, terror comes out somewhere
To harness breath and press the throat down hard.
And this becomes a terrible thick air
As doors between are swiftly shut and barred.

Now all is surely lost. You understand
The ice strung in the blood, the moving away
Of the loved form and mind, and the warm hand;
One suddenly shoved upon an empty day.

The faltering words to speak when you depart
Are unavailing. Nothing will atone
For the unmeasured ill which the choked heart

Letters To The Editor

Lynching Outrage

Of the 15 million Negroes of the United States, thousands of them are giving their lives in the service of the United States Army as well as other branches of the service. All of this is to preserve the "American Way of Life."

For an example, think of the thousands who are at this moment giving their lives in the Philippines for the "American Way of Life," under Gen. MacArthur.

The Negro has never been a slacker or a coward when it comes to fighting for the freedom of his country.

Shall we take the mob action at Sikeston, Mo., a few days ago as an example of the "American Way of Life?" When a Negro had already been shot three times, the mob then tied him to a car, poured gasoline on his body, and dragged him only through a residential section where Negroes live.

I believe that when a man is guilty of a crime, regardless of his color, he should be punished according to criminal law.

It is a disgrace to every Negro American as well as the cultured and civilized whites, for that portion of barbarous and uncivilized whites of this country to drag one of color through a residential section, thus trying to show the world and every section of this country that every Negro American is guilty of the crime committed by one insane Negro.

Only men just emerged from the cave age would take the supreme law of the land in their own hand. No cultured and civilized people or race would do it.

All the laws of this land are made by the white man. Surely they should abide by them.

The Negro was a faithful loyal person in the past. Do the white people expect him to be a true loyal subject in the future under these existing mob conditions?

Don't you think the American people should clean American houses before trying to clean the houses of Europe and the Far East?

Precious Time

It is heartening to see how everyone in our community is anxious to do his share, even though most are already over-tasked. Therefore, it is most important for those, who are in the lead to try and plan so that each one of the volunteers shall not have to waste unnecessary time, strength and money, because all three are now very important and needed in quantities to achieve a quick victory. All these can be saved by holding courses on civilian defense in the neighborhoods instead of making the volunteers go to out-of-the-way places, wasting an hour or more coming and going.

Mr. George Johnson, manager of the Wardman Park Hotel, and Mrs. Andrew R. Taylor, principal of the Beauvoir National Cathedral Elementary School, deserve credit and thanks for being so public spirited, helpful and kind as to offer free space for civil defense courses. Let's hope, that other managers of hotels, apartment houses, schools, and other public places will follow suit and save the volunteers of their neighborhood precious time, energy and money.

Congressional Pensions

Congress is composed of representatives from the 48 States to make laws for the Nation, but the interest of their respective States rather than the interest of the Nation is considered first. It is proper then, if these gentlemen deserve a pension, that it be paid by the State which they so gallantly represent and not by the Federal Government, whose interest to them is a secondary matter.

Pearl Harbor Apology Unnecessary

Hindsight experts in military and naval strategy—clouds of them—now will be passing judgment on the failings of responsible men in Pearl Harbor and Washington. It is true that our Army and Navy, men we thought were always on the alert, have let us down.

But let's be honest with ourselves and with them. These men acted even as you and I. Secure in the knowledge of our strength, I didn't think the Japanese would dare to tackle us like that. Neither did you. Neither did most of us. The commanding general of the Department of Hawaii was not the only shortsighted man in America. Let us admit it to ourselves. What those men did prior to December 7 on Oahu was only a reflection of what we thought here on the mainland. We all got what was coming to us.

Part of the trouble, as the Commission tells us, was that Japan violated treaties and international law while we did not. We gave them the benefit of the doubt, in spite of their reputation for national treachery. By using on them the same methods they used on us, we could have crushed them. We did not choose to do it. We should be proud of that, regardless of how foolish they made us look for a while. We may have to apologize to ourselves, for Pearl Harbor; but we don't have to apologize to the world, nor to history.

As a Nation conscious of our might, and with no desires for other men's lands, we have preferred to give the others the first draw, sure of our own ability to fight and win if anyone wanted to fight. By our own choice we elected to give anyone else the advantage of firing the first shot at us; we were sure in the strength of our democracy.

The quickness, coolness, valor and effectiveness of our men in battle have been proving that we were right. Even when taken by surprise, our soldiers, sailors and marines have been showing the old American fighting spirit.

I am sure that to the Japanese the attack on Pearl Harbor was an act of desperation and cunning. Treachery? Treaties? International law? Of what value such words? To Nippon it was a question of war and how to win it, not rules of a game. Unfair? To them there is no such thing as fairness or unfairness in war. They wanted to win. They intended to win, by any means they could devise.

Let's stop squawking about Pearl Harbor. Let's start boasting about it instead. With all his cunning and his spies, and his disregard for the rules of polite war-making, the Jap didn't have what it takes. He crippled us, but even crippled we still are better than he ever will be.

Our few faint-hearted Fannies tell us that the Jap is devilish, fanatical and sly, and we don't understand the Oriental mind. Maybe not. But so what? The Jap doesn't understand the American mind, either. Pearl Harbor proved it. Wake Island drove it home. Luzon clinches it.

And we have not yet begun to fight.

Self-Investigations Needed

I've been trying to lay off writing you for more than a year now, as I figure that my little say wouldn't make any difference, but I just had to break out into a rash after reading the report on the Hawaii or, rather, Pearl Harbor, tragedy. It's a black mark which will go down against the Army and Navy in future histories and will cause the readers to blush with shame and mortification. But "let him who is without sin cast the first stone."

I've just been reading the comments of some of our Congressmen in regard to the report. I note that most of them suggest that the Army and Navy commanders be court-martialed. Some want to start a Congressional investigation and crack some heads in Washington. Please note some of the remarks of those great Americans (?) who ran around over the country, before the disastrous event on the morning of December 7, crying that there was no danger from without, but all the danger was from within. And every time something was done to fortify the country against attack or to increase the safety of the country from foreign aggression, they'd howl that the President was taking another step toward war.

These same "Wrong Johns" with loud voices and little judgment are the ones who voted against almost everything that was done to make us safer from the ravages of pestilence and war. These are the boys who howled the loudest when an appropriation was being asked for to improve the defenses of Guam, Wake, Midway and the Philippines. These are the same boys who shed big salty tears about the waste of money put into defense programs, but the same old money-grabbers who were always willing to vote a few millions—aye, even billions—for political purposes. These are the great patriots who are now howling for the scalps of the men in charge at Pearl Harbor.

If they would just stop to think that if the men at Pearl Harbor had been reading that poppycock they had been putting out in regard to our Nation's welfare and safety, and had been influenced one iota by it, no one could have expected them to act differently. Suppose these Congressmen had been influential enough to have convinced the American people that their doctrine was the correct thing for the country, then where would we have been today?

Yes, Mr. Congressmen, we certainly do need an investigation, but not the kind that you would desire. Quite a number of you ought to give yourselves a thorough investigation and then go on and sock the culprit good and hard.

Tax On Alimony

Your editorial "Hints to Taxpayers" is timely and should help the Government as well as the people. In line with your suggestion, "By organizing . . . for the removal of inequalities" may I hasten with the following:

There is no more repugnant inequality than for a man to be taxed on alimony. Why should a woman, who in more cases than not has chosen to do the divorcing and who has often made a racket of it, be allowed to have any amount of what is often "blood money" tax free, whereas the earner of it, getting no benefit from it, must be penalized for his misfortune whatever its cause, not only by fate, but by the United States Government? Let divorcees receiving personal alimony over the minimum pay their own taxes.

The Post Impressionist

Passing Fare

Gastronomically speaking, it is becoming increasingly difficult to keep up one's social status, and at the same time keep down one's bicarbonate bill. I don't know why it is, but I don't seem to like most of the things that are considered really smart. This automatically puts me in class sub-B2 with all our friends who are in the groove socially. They go on being nice to me, and at parties somebody usually moves over to make room for me on the sofa, but not without announcing, "Look who's here, fellows. Bring out some old dog biscuits."

I don't like ripe olives. I don't like to be near one. As long as they sit quietly on a side table minding their own business I manage very well by effecting circuitous routes in order to avoid passing directly by them. I don't like to be rude, even to an olive (although I know a couple of old prunes I'd like to insult.)

But when some individual, usually an aunt of the hostess, sneaks up on me in a crowd and coos, "You simply must have an olive," shoving them under my nose with a circumspect smile, I want to take the entire lot and dump them in the fish bowl. (Probably one of those things that result from an overdeveloped thyroid.) Meanwhile the aunt of the hostess joyously deposits several of the detested fruit on my saucer and passes on to radiate happiness elsewhere. I then begin a still hunt for an umbrella stand.

In the event the home is not equipped with an umbrella stand (and it is appalling how many of our better homes are not) I utilize an empty vase. Those of the Ming Dynasty are especially well adapted, due to their generous proportions, although during the past few years I have achieved equal success upon occasion with Sevres, Delft, Bristol, Meissen, Staffordshire, a Doccia cup and saucer, a Strasbourg tureen, an Italian Majolica fruit dish, and an Etruscan bucchero jug.

I would not advise the novice to employ flower-filled vases. These are treacherous and require strategy. The hostess, all too often, will interpret a few surreptitious pokes as an attempt to rearrange the flowers. It is surprising the number of hostesses who resent this sort of thing.

A few weeks after a swank brawl I attended recently it was discovered that an olive which I had deposited, according to my usual procedure, in a rare old cloisonne vase, had taken root in a very bad cocktail which some fellow guest had disposed of in like manner. The last report was that the thing had sprouted for a full foot and was still going strong.

I have never cared much for crepes suzette since the night Uncle Llewellyn set fire to the living room while trying to entertain some important company. He borrowed a chafing dish, equipped with alcohol lamp, for the occasion, and with great ceremony rolled it into the room on mother's tea cart, carefully draped with her best linen cloth. He prepared the batter before their admiring gaze, throwing in many a gesture and flilip learned from Antoinne, who makes them at your table in his New York club. When it came time to add the brandy, Uncle Llewellyn deftly picked up the Courvoisier, gave it an impressive flourish, remarked, "Now watch closely," and disappeared in a burst of flame.

I fully expected him to reappear in the shape of some mythological animal, or to return with a beautiful girl in velvet tights, but when the excitement was over and buckets of water from the bathtub had been sloshed over guests and furniture alike, we found Uncle Llewellyn standing singed and bewildered in the corner by the grandfather clock. It was months before his mustache grew in again.

Caviar is another phenomenon for which I am unable to work up any enthusiasm. But there is somebody waiting in every telephone booth to insist that you can learn to like anything through application of will power, and to suggest developing a tolerance of caviar by taking a teaspoonful following meals, after the manner in which children are inured to codliver oil. This method is habit forming, however, and presents several negative aspects. Such as having your mind on something else when the delicacy (?) is passed, and publicly holding your nose to down a trifle, according to practice. It is simpler merely to take a small serving and then swap plates with someone who has gone to the bar. By the time he returns, if he returns at all, he won't remember what he had on his plate, if he remembers at all, and if he had a plate at all. It could have been a gibus.

I like cabbage pie! Now there's something a fellow can really wrap his bridgework around. Once a week I go to tea with some Russian friends of mine who live three flights up, on a side street, and keep a pet kinkajou. I climb the three long flights, and stand for a moment transported by the whiff of magic which floats through the keyhole. A crisp, brown, flaky smell. A warm, sweet, buttery, piquant smell, with a faint suggestion of bacon. Cabbage pie!

I enter, and sink into a large chair with a deep sigh of contentment. And then the pie is brought in on heavy blue and white china plates. Coffee is passed in containers resembling shaving mugs, and there is usually some queer pink cake, but after I have gone, and find myself walking into the dusk, all I can think of is cabbage pie. All I want to think of is cabbage pie. What else is there that matters?

Chilean Elections

By Ernest Lindley

The Axis Takes A Hand

AXIS AGENTS are making an all-out final effort to turn the Chilean Presidential election on February 2, according to authoritative American sources, who describe the intervention as on the biggest scale ever attempted in the domestic politics of a Latin-American state.

LINDLEY

The internal political situation was the chief cause of the hesitation of the Chilean government in agreeing flatly at the Inter-American Conference at Rio to sever diplomatic relations with the Axis. But full cooperation is expected if the election is won by Jose Antonio Rios, nominee of the coalition of "Popular Front" parties. He has had the edge from the start, and his prospects are reported to have improved daily.

But according to these American sources who have a fairly full knowledge of the facts, Rios is fighting a large Axis slush fund, a barrage of military threats from Japanese and other Axis diplomats, and subtle propaganda from Nazi, Spanish Falange, and Nazi-influenced French agencies, aimed to convince important business and ecclesiastical elements that their fortunes lie on the anti-democratic side.

THE INTENDED beneficiary of these interventions is Gen. Carlos Ibanez, long a stormy figure in Chilean politics. He was ousted from the presidency 11 years ago, after 4 years during which he sought to establish what many considered a Fascist type of government. A little more than a year ago he returned from exile in the Argentine, and is now the nominee of the rightist coalition of Conservative and Liberal parties.

Ibanez has the indorsement of the Vanguardia party, formerly known as the National Socialists, or Chilean Nazis. Although relatively small in numbers, this party is under Chilean Junker German leadership, and has been the fighting spearhead of Nazi interests almost ever since Hitler came into power. In September, 1936, it attempted a revolution to overthrow the government and prevent the elections later in that year, in which the Popular Front candidate, Aguirre Cerda, was successful.

The rightist coalition represents large landowners, "big business," old-line army politicians, and reactionary elements in the clergy. According to the information received here, its most powerful financial support comes from one Arturo Lopez Perez, whose fortune of 2 billion Chilean pesos is reputed to be one of the largest, if not the largest, in South America. Prior to the fall of France, he owned and operated numerous enterprises in Paris. But informed circles state that the Germans permitted him to remove almost his entire wealth from France, of which some tens of millions of dollars in cash and securities are understood to be deposited in the United States. Ostensibly pro-French, he is stated to have defended strongly, since his return to Chile, French collaboration with the Nazis. He and a few other relatively wealthy Chileans are reported to have been financing the Ibanez campaign to the tune of more than 30,000 pesos a day—approximately $1,200—an unprecedented sum in Chilean politics, but believed to be only a small forerunner of the amount to be spent in a final grab for votes.

AXIS DIPLOMATS are authoritatively reported to be intervening flagrantly. Important government officials, high army and navy officers, and leading business men, have been invited to the Japanese Embassy individually and in small groups, and warned of punishment if Chile lines up with the United States.

Washington authorities have what they consider convincing evidence that the Japanese have threatened not only to cut sea communications between Chile and the United States, but to bombard and bomb Chilean cities, and even to send troops to seize Chilean nitrate and copper mines—any or all of which the Japanese are reported to have said they would be able to do shortly, after "cleaning up" the South Pacific.

Both the Japanese and the Nazis are showing films of military operations in Europe and the Pacific to select audiences of army officers and business men, as well as circulating extravagant reports of the damage done to the American Navy and air forces. Propaganda from Spanish Falange sources and the French Havas News Agency, operating from Vichy, is stated to represent the Axis powers as the protectors of the Catholic Church against both the Russian atheists and Anglo-American Protestant agnostics."

IBANEZ himself claims to be friendly to "hemisphere solidarity" and the American cause. But all the influence the Axis can muster in Chile has been put behind him, and he has recommended abolition of the two-chamber Chilean legislature in favor of a one-chamber corporative assembly of Italian Fascist type.

The pro-democratic Popular Front had a substantial majority in the congressional elections last year. It is favored to win again, despite the financial power and aggressive methods of the rightist coalition and its Axis collaborators—or perhaps because of them, since the rank and file of Chileans strongly object to foreign interference in their domestic affairs.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

The Legislative Function

THE HOUSE of Representatives recently passed by an overwhelming vote a measure called the Smith bill to curb the power of the brutal and malignant union politicians who, with a total numerical strength of not much more than seven million workers, many of them unwilling captives, are trying to establish a Fascist or Hitlerian form of government. The bill then went to the Senate, where it is now being smothered, obviously under orders from the White House. Thus, again, although the lower house angrily revolted against the assumption of the legislative function by the President, the function of the legislative branch is being defeated and the citizens of the Nation are being sold down the river by their elected representatives in a treacherous betrayal of trust.

Meanwhile, President Roosevelt has moved into the situation to box up John L. Lewis in a trap of his own making and has made a deal with the bosses of the A. F. L. and C. I. O. whereby they and their power over the workers will be utilized for political purposes, but not necessarily for national defense, by the ruling power and personality.

Lewis made a false move when he tried to muscle into the commanding position in a reconciled and consolidated union organization embracing the A. F. L. and the C. I. O. He was quickly and publicly slapped down by Philip Murray, the president of the C. I. O., and is now discredited, although he is a resourceful and power-hungry dictator in his own union, the mine workers, and may not yet be counted out.

HE AND his family are tremendously ambitious and audacious, and as long as John has the treasury of 385,000 mine workers under his personal hand and his brother, Denny, has command of the C. I. O. Construction Workers, a union which is a sort of political and economic concentration camp for miscellaneous captives and helpless waifs, they will be dangerous, not only to the whole mass of workers, but to the very American people as a Nation.

As soon as Lewis had been publicly rebuked by Murray, the President, with his great sense of timing, moved in to recognize the A. F. L. and the C. I. O. as the controllers of "labor," although they both embraced only a very small minority of the total employed citizens and, as has been observed before, include countless mute and faceless captives who were driven into their corrals by man-hunting organizers of the subordinate internationals and locals, many of whom, like professional hunters of wolves and other wild vermin, receive a bounty of so much per head for the slaves they deliver.

This leaves Lewis on the outside, and confers on William Green, with his following of underworld criminals and trained picket-line thugs or goons, a nominal or apparent power which doubtless flatters that strange, bumbling consort of thieves and ignorant, brutal union gauleiters. That power, however, is illusory, not real.

THE PRESIDENT is using the bosses of the A. F. L. and C. I. O. for his own political purposes, which plainly and irresistibly tend toward a totalitarian state. Although the flattered bosses think they are cooperating, they are, in fact, only collaborating, in the present-day Parisian political sense of the word.

Meanwhile, the Senate has held steady and ignored that alarming situation which the House acknowledged in passing the Smith bill and not for any reasons of duty or patriotic statesmanship, but for purposes of collaboration, again in the Parisian sense.

The Senate refuses to challenge the President's assumption of its own constitutional duty and functions to enact laws for the preservation of the citizens' freedom and the power of the unioneers, under the President, is growing day by day as more captives are herded into the compounds of the unions and their treasuries and the private loot of unprincipled and utterly unregulated little Hitlers increases by millions of dollars.

No single man or woman in the United States, in or out of the totalitarian union movement, with its brown shirt vigilantes, knows within a hundred million dollars how much money the unioneers skim off the pay of the worker every year. It is well beyond a billion a year and the power of this money at the polls in cities, States and Congressional districts is approaching a point at which it will be sufficient to buy the election of Mayors, Governors, Legislatures, Congressmen and Senators obedient to the boss-unioneers who, in turn, would serve the political program of the President. At the end of President Roosevelt's reign, the unioneers might boss the next man or, if he were an efficient dictator, the dictator might boss or even liquidate them and centralize the whole power in himself.

The Senate is inviting this future in obedience to intimations that the President prefers to handle the union matter in his own way, and obviously for his own political purposes.

Vote Of Confidence

By Barnet Nover

Rio: A Great Milestone

AT RIO this week the United States received a resounding vote of confidence from its friends and neighbors to the south. That, reduced to its simplest terms, is the meaning of what took place at the historic conference of American foreign ministers which met in the Brazilian capital between January 15 and January 28.

NOVER

The conference differed in one vital particular from all previous Pan-American gatherings. In the past, the objective was always an agreement in principle. That objective had not always proved easy of attainment. One need only recall the history of the conferences at Buenos Aires and Lima and Havana to realize this. Yet this time the point at issue was not whether the American republics would talk alike or think alike but whether they would act alike.

BEFORE the Rio conference met, 12 Latin-American nations had already given their answer.

Beginning with Costa Rica, whose action anticipated that of our Congress by many hours, nine republics of Central America and the Caribbean had declared war on our enemies. Three others—Mexico, Colombia and Venezuela—had broken off diplomatic relations with the Axis powers. But at the time the delegates convened eight American nations were still clinging to their neutrality.

Some of them had postponed action because they favored a joint move by the New World as a collective entity as against individual measures by the respective powers. Other South American nations were not ready to act at all. And all of them had to take into account the possibility that a change in their relations with the Axis might increase their peril.

WHILE THE CONFERENCE was in session the Japanese moved closer and closer to the great British base at Singapore whose loss would constitute the greatest blow dealt to the anti-Axis forces since the fall of France. The Japanese also succeeded in securing new outposts in the Dutch East Indies and on the islands north of Australia. And in Libya the British, for the second time in less than a year, found themselves once more on the defensive.

True, the picture from the viewpoint of the United Nations, was by no means all black.

On Bataan Peninsula Gen. MacArthur and his handful of men continued to hold back an overwhelmingly superior force of Japanese. In the Strait of Macassar Dutch and American forces managed to inflict very heavy losses on a great Japanese convoy headed for Java. Above all Allied setbacks in the Pacific were offset by Russian victories against the retreating German armies on the Eastern Front. Yet, broadly speaking, the situation in which the United Nations found themselves during the fortnight of the Rio conference was sufficiently dark to enable wishful pessimists to discount the possibilities of an ultimate Allied victory.

TO WHAT AN extent Acting Premier Ramon S. Castillo of Argentina allowed such considerations to influence his government's stand at Rio is not clear.

It is no secret, however, that Axis agents throughout South America did everything possible before and during the conference to minimize the defeats suffered by Germany and Italy and exaggerate the victories won by Japan. And this propaganda was supplemented by direct threats to the various governments of the southern continent that a break in relations with the Axis would expose them to dire reprisals.

THE REPUBLICS of South America refused to be intimidated, however. It is true that because of Argentina's obstructionist stand a resolution favoring a mandatory break in diplomatic relations between the nations of this hemisphere and the Axis was sidetracked in favor of one merely recommending such a break. But that was a hollow victory for Acting President Castillo and provides scant comfort to Germany, Italy and Japan.

Of the eight South American nations that were still on the fence on January 15 all but two have climbed off the fence or are about to. And of the two that remain—Chile and Argentina—there is a strong possibility that the first will fall in line just as soon as the Presidential election is out of the way.

Should the left-wing parties win in Chile that would be a foregone conclusion. That, in turn, would leave Argentina alone in a far from splendid isolation. And if the Axis should attempt to use Buenos Aires as a base of operations for their propagandists, Fifth Columnists, spies and saboteurs it is doubtful if the other republics of this hemisphere would long tolerate such a situation. Nor are the Argentine people, among the most ardently anti-Axis on the continent, likely to take kindly to such a situation.

JUDGED BY any objective standards the Rio conference was an outstanding success.

It gave implementation to the doctrine of hemisphere solidarity in many ways. The almost complete severance in diplomatic relations between the New World and the Axis is but one aspect of this development. Equally important are the settlement of the Ecuador-Peru boundary disputes and the agreements to coordinate the defense, economic and financial efforts of the 21 republics.

All this would probably never have come about if the South American nations regarded the outlook facing the United Nations as hopeless. Their action at Rio was tantamount to the expression of the belief that, regardless of present difficulties, the chances of ultimate victory are far greater for the Allies than they are for the Axis.

We have reason to be grateful to our southern neighbors for this expression of confidence this manifestation of solidarity. We have also reason to be encouraged by what is viewed in the broadest aspect an impartial expression of opinion, backed up by forthright action, as to the way the war is likely to go.

Questioning Leaders

Churchill And Roosevelt Report

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT is to be congratulated on an immunity he enjoys. The occasion for this felicitation is a comparison of two events that took place last Tuesday, January 27. One event was in London, the other in Washington.

SULLIVAN

In London, Prime Minister Churchill made a speech in the House of Commons. He made the speech as a member of Commons, and its servant. His speech was in defense of his conduct of the war. He was subject to interruption and was interrupted by members who asked pointed questions, to which Mr. Churchill replied.

It was not a mere speech that Mr. Churchill made, it was the opening of a debate, which was to last three days. Throughout, question after question was asked, challenging statements Mr. Churchill had made, and criticizing his conduct of the war. These questions Mr. Churchill answered, or had members of his cabinet answer. Many of the answers were made by Mr. Churchill's associate and spokesman, Clement Atlee.

MR. CHURCHILL, in his opening, had asked that the debate be thorough. "No one need be mealy-mouthed," he said; "no one should be chicken-hearted." He was taken at his word. Indeed Mr. Churchill did not need to invite directness—his questioners and critics would have been candid anyhow. There were questions and criticism about his having more power than he could exercise well, about the competence of members of his cabinet, about some members being too political-minded. There were questions about every aspect of the war. Why was there no plan for land defense of Singapore? Why was the battleship Prince of Wales allowed to go into enemy waters without sufficient air escort? How many tanks and planes had been given to the Russians, and was the number enough, or too much considering the British need in other quarters.

That is what the head of the British government had to stand up to. It is what every Prime Minister must stand up to at all times. He must stand up, in the legislative body, in the presence of his critics and political opponents, facing their criticism and questions, called upon to reply, to explain, to defend his actions.

In Washington, on the same day, President Roosevelt met the only form of questioning he ever has to face. It was at a press conference. These press conferences have no statutory standing. They are held only because Mr. Roosevelt likes to hold them. At his will he can suspend them, abolish them. He does not need to answer any question he prefers to avoid. The questions are practically always mild, even ingratiating. The newspaper men know they have no formal status. They are present by the President's courtesy; they feel the obligation of guests. If, rarely, a question is asked that Mr. Roosevelt does not like, he has a schoolmaster's art of putting the questioner in his place. When, from time to time some two years ago, questions were asked about a third term, Mr. Roosevelt used to tell the questioner to put on a dunce cap and stand in a corner. Presidential press conferences are not the British House of Commons, decidedly not.

THE PRESS conference on this occasion began on a serious note. British Ambassador Lord Halifax had just been in to give the President a memento. It was a small octagonal frame into which were fitted bits of stained glass, fragments blown from the colored windows of the House of Commons when struck by a German bomb. The President showed us the article, then said he had no news. The press conference got under way.

Mr. Roosevelt answered amiable questions amiably. He was in what his friends call his "puckish" mood. While much of the information elicited, by questions in many fields, was serious and fairly important, the banter and laughs were rather more numerous than usual. A newsman remarked that Premier de Valera of the Irish Free State had expressed surprise that he had not been consulted about the landing of American troops on Irish soil. (The landing was on the part of Ireland not within the Free State.) Mr. Roosevelt uttered only one word. By the rules of press conferences, newspapers are not permitted to quote the President's words, within quotation marks—they can only paraphrase, describe. What word the President used on this occasion does not matter—it was a word anyone might use when he hears something that surprises him. It was not the word, but the tone and manner, that gave point and humor to Mr. Roosevelt's remark. By implication and facial expression he conveyed a faintly derisive wonder whether Mr. de Valera was not taking in a lot of territory. That got a laugh. Then, remembering international comity, and perhaps, also, American politics, Mr. Roosevelt said the Irish are a dear people, Mr. de Valera a fine fellow, an old friend of his. There was a laugh when Mr. Roosevelt said the newspapers should refer to the southwest Pacific as "ABDA," standing for America, Britain, the Dutch and Australia—and a newspaper man asked if ABDA was an abbreviation of "abracadabra."

It was all genial and entertaining, and not to be criticized. Yet it would have been more informative had the questioning taken place in Congress, in the circumstances of Mr. Churchill in the House of Commons. If our House of Representatives had opportunity to question the President, information would be elicited which would give the public a large and clearer picture of many matters than the public now has.

The Gallup Poll

Conscription Is Likely to Win Easily In Canadian Plebiscite, Survey Finds

By Dr. George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

Princeton, N. J., Jan. 29.—The Canadian government is proposing to hold a Nation-wide plebiscite on the Dominion's most controversial issue of the past two years—conscription for overseas service. The exact date of the voting remains to be fixed, but if the plebiscite were held today there is every indication that conscription would win by a substantial majority.

A Dominion-wide sampling referendum by the Canadian Institute of Public Opinion, affiliate of the American Institute, showed in December a majority of 60 per cent in favor of drafting for overseas duty. At that time, the following question was put to the voters of Canada:

"If you were asked to vote in the next few weeks on the question of selective service for overseas duty, would you vote for it or against it?"

Results were:

Would vote for	60%
Would vote against	30
Undecided	10

If the vote is confined to those with opinions, the division of sentiment is 67 per cent in favor, 33 per cent opposed.

The question which the government proposes to place on the ballots in the plebiscite refers only inferentially to conscription. It reads: "Are you in favor of releasing the government from any obligation arising out of any past commitment restricting the methods of raising men for military service?"

More Polls Planned

The Canadian Institute plans a series of further surveys on the issue to record the trend of sentiment up to the time of the plebiscite. Today's results are, therefore, of a preliminary character, although they indicate clearly how the dominant sentiment is running.

The development of modern sampling polls makes it possible to hold a Nation-wide referendum on any public issue in a few days' time and to reveal the facts about public opinion with a high degree of accuracy.

The reliability of the sampling poll process is so well established today that the United States Bureau of the Census is now proposing a yearly census of population based on the sampling principle.

Quickly Settled in U. S.

Accurate knowledge of public opinion has often made it possible to speed up the democratic process. In the United States the conscription issue was quickly settled in 1940. One important reason was the fact that the public's views on this issue were known to Congress and the country through many sampling referenda conducted on the issue by the Institute.

Army Opens Officer Schools, Cuts Preenrollment Period

Officer Candidate Schools of the Army have been opened to qualified enlisted men from 18 to 45 and the period of service before enrollment in schools has been reduced from six months to three, the War Department announced yesterday.

Specially qualified graduates of candidate schools may be permitted to take advanced training to fit them for early promotion, the announcement said. In addition, exceptionally qualified graduates, who are over-age for duty as second lieutenants, may be given further training to enable them to be commissioned in grades suited to their age.

Civilians May Enlist

New age limits, the War Department said, were established "to coincide with the new enlistment and induction ages." Civilians not now in the Army, it added, may enlist and attend a replacement training center "with the knowledge that at the end of his training he can compete with his fellows for an opportunity" to attend a candidate school.

Courses at the schools are for three months, with the result that a soldier may receive a commission after only six months' service. The first three months will give the soldier his basic military training and also will "determine whether or not the individual possesses the characteristics for leadership in battle."

The War Department also announced that 175,000 Negroes will be inducted during this year, based on the increase in Army strength and the percentage of colored to white registrants. One additional Negro division will be organized.

It is probable, the War Department said, that due to present housing shortages in military camps, the increase in induction of Negroes will be light in the early months of the year but will increase during the late spring.

The War Department said also that approximately 20,000 enlisted men on clerical and housekeeping duties already have been replaced by civilian employes, some of whom were women. These soldiers were thus released for combat duty.

Replacements in All Branches

Civilian replacements have been employed by all branches of the service, but chiefly by the Quartermaster, Medical, Ordnance and Signal Corps and the administrative offices of the Army. Women have replaced men as typists, stenographers, office machine operators, clerks, switchboard operators, messengers, cooks and kitchen workers.

The latest report shows 18,595 civilians hired and 10,000 enlisted men sent into the field. Other enlisted men will be replaced when civilians can be trained to take over their highly specialized duties.

Chilean Elections

The Axis Takes A Hand

AXIS AGENTS are making an all-out final effort to turn the Chilean Presidential election on February 2, according to authoritative American sources, who describe the intervention as on the biggest scale ever attempted in the domestic politics of a Latin-American state.

LINDLEY

The internal political situation was the chief cause of the hesitation of the Chilean government in agreeing flatly at the Inter-American Conference at Rio to sever diplomatic relations with the Axis. But full cooperation is expected if the election is won by Jose Antonio Rios, nominee of the coalition of "Popular Front" parties. He has had the edge from the start, and his prospects are reported to have improved daily.

But according to these American sources who have a fairly full knowledge of the facts, Rios is fighting a large Axis slush fund, a barrage of military threats from Japanese and other Axis diplomats, and subtle propaganda from Nazi, Spanish Falange, and Nazi-influenced French agencies, aimed to convince important business and ecclesiastical elements that their fortunes lie on the anti-democratic side.

THE INTENDED beneficiary of these interventions is Gen. Carlos Ibanez, long a stormy figure in Chilean politics. He was ousted from the presidency 11 years ago, after 4 years during which he sought to establish what many considered a Fascist type of government. A little more than a year ago he returned from exile in the Argentine, and is now the nominee of the rightist coalition of Conservative and Liberal parties.

Ibanez has the indorsement of the Vanguardia party, formerly known as the National Socialists, or Chilean Nazis. Although relatively small in numbers, this party is under Chilean Junker German leadership, and has been the fighting spearhead of Nazi interests almost ever since Hitler came into power. In September, 1938, it attempted a revolution to overthrow the government and prevent the elections later in that year, in which the Popular Front candidate, Aguirre Cerda, was successful.

The rightist coalition represents large landowners, "big business," old-line army politicians, and reactionary elements in the clergy. According to the information received here, its most powerful financial support comes from one Arturo Lopez Perez, whose fortune of 2 billion Chilean pesos is reputed to be one of the largest, if not the largest, in South America. Prior to the fall of France, he owned and operated numerous enterprises in Paris. But informed circles state that the Germans permitted him to remove almost his entire wealth from France, of which some tens of millions of dollars in cash and securities are understood to be deposited in the United States. Ostensibly pro-French, he is stated to have defended strongly, since his return to Chile, French collaboration with the Nazis. He and a few other relatively wealthy Chileans are reported to have been financing the Ibanez campaign to the tune of more than 30,000 pesos a day—approximately $1,200—an unprecedented sum in Chilean politics, but believed to be only a small forerunner of the amount to be spent in a final grab for votes.

AXIS DIPLOMATS are authoritatively reported to be intervening flagrantly. Important government officials, high army and navy officers, and leading business men, have been invited to the Japanese Embassy individually and in small groups, and warned of punishment if Chile lines up with the United States.

Washington authorities have what they consider convincing evidence that the Japanese have threatened not only to cut sea communications between Chile and the United States, but to bombard and bomb Chilean cities, and even to send troops to seize Chilean nitrate and copper mines—any or all of which the Japanese are reported to have said they would be able to do shortly, after "cleaning up" the South Pacific.

Both the Japanese and the Nazis are showing films of military operations in Europe and the Pacific to select audiences of army officers and business men, as well as circulating extravagant reports of the damage done to the American Navy and air forces. Propaganda from Spanish Falange sources and the French Havas News Agency, operating from Vichy, is stated to represent the Axis powers as the protectors of the Catholic Church against both the Russian atheists and Anglo-American Protestant agnostics."

IBANEZ himself claims to be friendly to "hemisphere solidarity" and the American cause. But all the influence the Axis can muster in Chile has been put behind him, and he has recommended abolition of the two-chamber Chilean legislature in favor of a one-chamber corporative assembly of Italian Fascist type.

The pro-democratic Popular Front had a substantial majority in the congressional elections last year. It is favored to win again, despite the financial power and aggressive methods of the rightist coalition and its Axis collaborators—or perhaps because of them, since the rank and file of Chileans strongly object to foreign interference in their domestic affairs.

Fair Enough

The Legislative Function

THE HOUSE of Representatives recently passed by an overwhelming vote a measure called the Smith bill to curb the power of the brutal and malignant union politicians who, with a total numerical strength of not much more than seven million workers, many of them unwilling captives, are trying to establish a Fascist or Hitlerian form of government. The bill then went to the Senate, where it is now being smothered, obviously under orders from the White House. Thus, again, although the lower house angrily revolted against the assumption of the legislative function by the President, the function of the legislative branch is being defeated and the citizens of the Nation are being sold down the river by their elected representatives in a treacherous betrayal of trust.

Meanwhile, President Roosevelt has moved into the situation to box up John L. Lewis in a trap of his own making and has made a deal with the bosses of the A. F. L. and C. I. O. whereby they and their power over the workers will be utilized for political purposes, but not necessarily for national defense, by the ruling power and personality.

Lewis made a false move when he tried to muscle into the commanding position in a reconciled and consolidated union organization embracing the A. F. L. and the C. I. O. He was quickly and publicly slapped down by Philip Murray, the president of the C. I. O., and is now discredited, although he is a resourceful and power-hungry dictator in his own union, the mine workers, and may not yet be counted out.

HE AND his family are tremendously ambitious and audacious, and as long as John has the treasury of 385,000 mine workers under his personal hand and his brother, Denny, has command of the C. I. O. Construction Workers, a union which is a sort of political and economic concentration camp for miscellaneous captives and helpless waifs, they will be dangerous, not only to the whole mass of workers, but to the very American people as a Nation.

As soon as Lewis had been publicly rebuked by Murray, the President, with his great sense of timing, moved in to recognize the A. F. L. and the C. I. O. as the controllers of "labor," although they both embraced only a very small minority of the total employed citizens and, as has been observed before, include countless mute and faceless captives who were driven into their corrals by man-hunting organizers of the subordinate internationals and locals, many of whom, like professional hunters of wolves and other wild vermin, receive a bounty of so much per head for the slaves they deliver.

This leaves Lewis on the outside, and confers on William Green, with his following of underworld criminals and trained picket-line thugs or goons, a nominal or apparent power which doubtless flatters that strange, bumbling consort of thieves and ignorant, brutal union gauleiters. That power, however, is illusory, not real.

THE PRESIDENT is using the bosses of the A. F. L. and C. I. O. for his own political purposes, which plainly and irresistibly tend toward a totalitarian state. Although the flattered bosses think they are cooperating, they are, in fact, only collaborating, in the present-day Parisian political sense of the word.

Meanwhile, the Senate has held steady and ignored that alarming situation which the House acknowledged in passing the Smith bill and not for any reasons of duty or patriotic statesmanship, but for purposes of collaboration, again in the Parisian sense.

The Senate refuses to challenge the President's assumption of its own constitutional duty and functions to enact laws for the preservation of the citizens' freedom and the power of the unioneers, under the President, is growing day by day as more captives are herded into the compounds of the unions and their treasuries and the private loot of unprincipled and utterly unregulated little Hitlers increases by millions of dollars.

No single man or woman in the United States, in or out of the totalitarian union movement, with its brown shirt vigilantes, knows within a hundred million dollars how much money the unioneers skim off the pay of the worker every year. It is well beyond a billion a year and the power of this money at the polls in cities, States and Congressional districts is approaching a point at which it will be sufficient to buy the election of Mayors, Governors, Legislatures, Congressmen and Senators obedient to the boss-unioneers who, in turn, would serve the political program of the President. At the end of President Roosevelt's reign, the unioneers might boss the next man or, if he were an efficient dictator, the dictator might boss or even liquidate them and centralize the whole power in himself.

The Senate is inviting this future in obedience to intimations that the President prefers to handle the union matter in his own way, and obviously for his own political purposes.

Vote Of Confidence

By Barnet Nover

Rio: A Great Milestone

AT RIO this week the United States received a resounding vote of confidence from its friends and neighbors to the south. That, reduced to its simplest terms, is the meaning of what took place at the historic conference of American foreign ministers which met in the Brazilian capital between January 15 and January 28.

NOVER

The conference differed in one vital particular from all previous Pan-American gatherings. In the past, the objective was always an agreement in principle. That objective had not always proved easy of attainment. One need only recall the history of the conferences at Buenos Aires and Lima and Havana to realize this. Yet this time the point at issue was not whether the American republics would talk alike or think alike but whether they would act alike.

BEFORE the Rio conference met, 12 Latin-American nations had already given their answer.

Beginning with Costa Rica, whose action anticipated that of our Congress by many hours, nine republics of Central America and the Caribbean had declared war on our enemies. Three others—Mexico, Colombia and Venezuela—had broken off diplomatic relations with the Axis powers. But at the time the delegates convened eight American nations were still clinging to their neutrality.

Some of them had postponed action because they favored a joint move by the New World as a collective entity as against individual measures by the respective powers. Other South American nations were not ready to act at all. And all of them had to take into account the possibility that a change in their relations with the Axis might increase their peril.

WHILE THE CONFERENCE was in session the Japanese moved closer and closer to the great British base at Singapore whose loss would constitute the greatest blow dealt to the anti-Axis forces since the fall of France. The Japanese also succeeded in securing new outposts in the Dutch East Indies and on the islands north of Australia. And in Libya the British, for the second time in less than a year, found themselves once more on the defensive.

True, the picture from the viewpoint of the United Nations, was by no means all black.

On Bataan Peninsula Gen. MacArthur and his handful of men continued to hold back an overwhelmingly superior force of Japanese. In the Strait of Macassar Dutch and American forces managed to inflict very heavy losses on a great Japanese convoy headed for Java. Above all Allied setbacks in the Pacific were offset by Russian victories against the retreating German armies on the Eastern Front. Yet, broadly speaking, the situation in which the United Nations found themselves during the fortnight of the Rio conference was sufficiently dark to enable wishful pessimists to discount the possibilities of an ultimate Allied victory.

TO WHAT AN extent Acting Premier Ramon S. Castillo of Argentina allowed such considerations to influence his government's stand at Rio is not clear.

It is no secret, however, that Axis agents throughout South America did everything possible before and during the conference to minimize the defeats suffered by Germany and Italy and exaggerate the victories won by Japan. And this propaganda was supplemented by direct threats to the various governments of the southern continent that a break in relations with the Axis would expose them to dire reprisals.

THE REPUBLICS of South America refused to be intimidated, however. It is true that because of Argentina's obstructionist stand a resolution favoring a mandatory break in diplomatic relations between the nations of this hemisphere and the Axis was sidetracked in favor of one merely recommending such a break. But that was a hollow victory for Acting President Castillo and provides scant comfort to Germany, Italy and Japan.

Of the eight South American nations that were still on the fence on January 15 all but two have climbed off the fence or are about to. And of the two that remain—Chile and Argentina—there is a strong possibility that the first will fall in line as soon as the Presidential election is out of the way.

Should the left-wing parties win in Chile that would be a foregone conclusion. That, in turn, would leave Argentina alone in a far from splendid isolation. And if the Axis should attempt to use Buenos Aires as a base of operations for their propagandists, Fifth Columnists, spies and saboteurs it is doubtful if the other republics of this hemisphere would long tolerate such a situation. Nor are the Argentine people, among the most ardently anti-Axis on the continent, likely to take kindly to such a situation.

JUDGED BY any objective standards the Rio conference was an outstanding success.

It gave implementation to the doctrine of hemisphere solidarity in many ways. The almost complete severance in diplomatic relations between the New World and the Axis is but one aspect of this development. Equally important are the settlement of the Ecuador-Peru boundary disputes and the agreements to coordinate the defense, economic and financial efforts of the 21 republics.

All this would probably never have come about if the South American nations regarded the outlook facing the United Nations as hopeless. Their action at Rio was tantamount to the expression of the belief that, regardless of present difficulties, the chances of ultimate victory are far greater for the Allies than they are for the Axis.

We have reason to be grateful to our southern neighbors for this expression of confidence this manifestation of solidarity. We have also reason to be encouraged by what is viewed in the broadest aspect an impartial expression of opinion, backed up by forthright action, as to the way the war is likely to go.

Questioning Leaders

Churchill And Roosevelt Report

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT is to be congratulated on an immunity he enjoys. The occasion for this felicitation is a comparison of two events that took place last Tuesday, January 27. One event was in London, the other in Washington.

SULLIVAN

In London, Prime Minister Churchill made a speech in the House of Commons. He made the speech as a member of Commons, and its servant. His speech was in defense of his conduct of the war. He was subject to interruption and was interrupted by members who asked pointed questions, to which Mr. Churchill replied.

It was not a suave speech that Mr. Churchill made, it was the opening of a debate, which was to last three days. Throughout, question after question was asked, challenging statements Mr. Churchill had made, and criticizing his conduct of the war. These questions Mr. Churchill answered, or had members of his cabinet answer. Many of the answers were made by Mr. Churchill's associate and spokesman, Clement Atlee.

MR. CHURCHILL, in his opening, had asked that the debate be thorough. "No one need be mealy-mouthed," he said; "no one should be chicken-hearted." He was taken at his word. Indeed Mr. Churchill did not need to invite directness—his questioners and critics would have been candid anyhow. There were questions and criticism about his having more power than he could exercise well, about the competence of members of his cabinet, about some members being too political-minded. There were questions about every aspect of the war. Why was there no plan for land defense of Singapore? Why was the battleship Prince of Wales allowed to go into enemy waters without sufficient air escort? How many tanks and planes had been given to the Russians, and was the number enough, or too much considering the British need in other quarters.

That is what the head of the British government had to stand up to. It is what every Prime Minister must stand up to at all times. He must stand up, in the legislative body, in the presence of his critics and political opponents, facing their criticism and questions, called upon to reply, to explain, to defend his actions.

In Washington, on the same day, President Roosevelt met the only form of questioning he ever has to face. It was at a press conference. These press conferences have no statutory standing. They are held only because Mr. Roosevelt likes to hold them. At his will he can suspend them, abolish them. He does not need to answer any question he prefers to avoid. The questions are practically always mild, even ingratiating. The newspaper men know they have no formal status. They are present by the President's courtesy; they feel the obligation of guests. If, rarely, a question is asked that Mr. Roosevelt does not like, he has a schoolmaster's art of putting the questioner in his place. When, from time to time some two years ago, questions were asked about a third term, Mr. Roosevelt used to tell the questioner to put on a dunce cap and stand in a corner. Presidential press conferences are not the British House of Commons, decidedly not.

THE PRESS conference on this occasion began on a serious note. British Ambassador Lord Halifax had just been in to give the President a memento. It was a small octagonal frame into which were fitted bits of stained glass, fragments blown from the colored windows of the House of Commons when struck by a German bomb. The President showed us the article, then said he had no news. The press conference got under way.

Mr. Roosevelt answered amiable questions amiably. He was in what his friends call his "puckish" mood. While much of the information elicited, by questions in many fields, was serious and fairly important, the banter and laughs were rather more numerous than usual. A newsman remarked that Premier de Valera of the Irish Free State had expressed surprise that he had not been consulted about the landing of American troops on Irish soil. (The landing was on the part of Ireland not within the Free State.) Mr. Roosevelt uttered only one word. By the rules of press conferences, newspapers are not permitted to quote the President's words, within quotation marks—they can only paraphrase, describe. What word the President used on this occasion does not matter—it was a word anyone might use when he hears something that surprises him. It was not the word, but the tone and manner, that gave point and humor to Mr. Roosevelt's remark. By implication and facial expression he conveyed a faintly derisive wonder whether Mr. de Valera was not taking in a lot of territory. That got a laugh. Then, remembering international comity, and perhaps, also, American politics, Mr. Roosevelt said the Irish are a dear people, Mr. de Valera a fine fellow, an old friend of his. There was a laugh when Mr. Roosevelt said the newspapers should refer to the southwest Pacific as "ABDA," standing for America, Britain, the Dutch and Australia—and a newspaper man asked if ABDA was an abbreviation of "abracadabra."

It was all genial and entertaining, and not to be criticized. Yet it would have been more informative had the questioning taken place in Congress, in the circumstances of Mr. Churchill in the House of Commons. If our House of Representatives had opportunity to question the President, information would be elicited which would give the public a large and clearer picture of many matters than the public now has.

The Gallup Poll

By Dr. George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

Princeton, N. J., Jan. 29.—The Canadian government is proposing to hold a Nation-wide plebiscite on the Dominion's most controversial issue of the past two years—conscription for overseas service. The exact date of the voting remains to be fixed, but if the plebiscite were held today there is every indication that conscription would win by a substantial majority.

A Dominion-wide sampling referendum by the Canadian Institute of Public Opinion, affiliate of the American Institute, showed in December a majority of 60 per cent in favor of drafting for overseas duty. At that time, the following question was put to the voters of Canada:

"If you were asked to vote in the next few weeks on the question of selective service for overseas duty, would you vote for it or against it?"

Results were:

Would vote for	60%
Would vote against	30
Undecided	10

If the vote is confined to those with opinions, the division of sentiment is 67 per cent in favor, 33 per cent opposed.

The question which the government proposes to place on the ballots in the plebiscite refers only inferentially to conscription. It reads: "Are you in favor of releasing the government from any obligation arising out of any past commitment restricting the methods of raising men for military service?"

More Polls Planned

The Canadian Institute plans a series of further surveys on the issue to record the trend of sentiment up to the time of the plebiscite. Today's results are, therefore, of a preliminary character, although they indicate clearly how the dominant sentiment is running.

The development of modern sampling polls makes it possible to hold a Nation-wide referendum on any public issue in a few days' time and to reveal the facts about public opinion with a high degree of accuracy.

The reliability of the sampling poll process is so well established today that the United States Bureau of the Census is now proposing a yearly census of population based on the sampling principle.

Quickly Settled in U. S.

Accurate knowledge of public opinion has often made it possible to speed up the democratic process. In the United States the conscription issue was quickly settled in 1940. One important reason was the fact that the public's views on this issue were known to Congress and the country through many sampling referenda conducted on the issue by the Institute.

Army Opens Officer Schools, Cuts Preenrollment Period

Officer Candidate Schools of the Army have been opened to qualified enlisted men from 18 to 45 and the period of service before enrollment in schools has been reduced from six months to three, the War Department announced yesterday.

Specially qualified graduates of candidate schools may be permitted to take advanced training to fit them for early promotion, the announcement said. In addition, exceptionally qualified graduates, who are over-age for duty as second lieutenants, may be given further training to enable them to be commissioned in grades suited to their age.

Civilians May Enlist

New age limits, the War Department said, were established "to coincide with the new enlistment and induction ages." Civilians not now in the Army, it added, may enlist and attend a replacement training center "with the knowledge that at the end of his training he can compete with his fellows for an opportunity" to attend a candidate school.

Courses at the schools are for three months, with the result that a soldier may receive a commission after only six months' service. The first three months will give the soldier his basic military training and also will "determine whether or not the individual possesses the characteristics for leadership in battle."

The War Department also announced that 175,000 Negroes will be inducted during this year, based on the increase in Army strength and the percentage of colored to white registrants. One additional Negro division will be organized.

It is probable, the War Department said, that due to present housing shortages in military camps, the increase in induction of Negroes will be light in the early months of the year but will increase during the late spring.

The War Department said also that approximately 20,000 enlisted men on clerical and housekeeping duties already have been replaced by civilian employes, some of whom were women. These soldiers were thus released for combat duty.

Replacements in All Branches

Civilian replacements have been employed by all branches of the service, but chiefly by the Quartermaster, Medical, Ordnance and Signal Corps and the administrative offices of the Army. Women have replaced men as typists, stenographers, office machine operators, clerks, switchboard operators, messengers, cooks and kitchen workers.

The latest report shows 18,595 civilians hired and 10,000 enlisted men sent into the field. Other enlisted men will be replaced when civilians can be trained to take over their highly specialized duties.

Stars Arrive With Dash for Birthday Balls

a day earlier to permit the celebrities to visit both cities.

Yesterday, between 5 and 7 p. m., they held a reception at Hotel Willard. This morning they are scheduled to throng the office of Commissioner John Russell Young in the District Building to receive an address of welcome, and then go to the White House for luncheon.

The evening activities will start at 6:15 at the Willard, where the Commissioners of the District will play host at a reception and dinner. The round of parties will follow according to this schedule:

Uline Arena, 9 p. m.
Mayflower Hotel, 9 p. m.
Wardman Park Hotel, 9 p. m.
Shoreham Hotel, 9 p. m.
Hamilton Hotel, 9 p. m.
Lincoln Colonnade, 9 p. m.
Earle Theater, 11:30 p. m.
Capitol Theater, 11:45 p. m.
Howard Theater, 11:30 p. m.

Commissioner Young yesterday issued an appeal to celebrants to refrain from moving around from party to party as in times past in order to keep traffic congestion at a minimum.

"These are different times," Commissioner Young said, "and that is why we are asking people to stay at the place where they start out."

Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt will visit the parties to be held at the Lincoln Colonnade and the Uline Arena. She will be escorted by Lieut. Col. Horace B. Smith, White House military aide; Thomas P. Morgan, jr., chairman of the reception and floor committees, and Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, executive vice chairman of the floor committee.

Among the stars to attend the parties are Dorothy Lamour, Rosalind Russell, Pat O'Brien, Michele Morgan, Gene Raymond, Jean Hersholt, Edward Arnold, Mickey Rooney and his bride, Ava Gardner; Judy Canova, Gene Autry, Betty Grable, Lieut. James Stewart, Bonita Granville, Jackie Cooper, Carol Bruce, John Payne, Brenda Marshall, William Holden, Wayne Morris, Ruth Hussey, Patricia Morison, Lucy Monroe, and Senorita Eros Volusia, Brazilian dancer.

Thousands of Washingtonians thronged to Union Station to watch the stars arrive. Most of them had arrived last night, with others scheduled to reach here early today.

The stars' presence lent somewhat of a military note. Wayne Morris arrived in his naval ensign's uniform. Jimmy Stewart is a lieutenant in the Army. Robert Montgomery has been in Washington for some time as a lieutenant in the Navy, following a tour of duty as a naval aide at the United States Embassy in London. Capt. Cy Bartlett, Hollywood writer on duty at the War Department, was on hand to greet the movie folk as they arrived.

President Roosevelt will celebrate the day with a birthday luncheon which will be attended by the stars and little 4-year-old Jerry King, of New York, a happy-hearted paralysis victim whose birthday is also in January, and who participated in the "March of Dimes" fund drive which has been a preliminary to today's events.

All four major networks, in a Coast-to-Coast hookup, will carry an hour-long program beginning at 11:15 p. m., during which the President will speak. There will be broadcasts from New York, Nashville, Quincy, Mass.; Detroit, Boston, Oklahoma City, Dallas and Hollywood.

Keith Morgan, national chairman of the celebration, announced in New York that approximately 12,540 parties would be held all over the Nation and that cities in Canada and in 16 South and Central American nations would join in the demonstration.

Only in Honolulu were plans for a celebration postponed because of martial law and the blackout.

A huge Presidential birthday cake which was a present from the American Federation of Labor's Bakery and Confectionery Workers Union, will be placed on the stage at Uline Arena and cut by Mrs. Roosevelt.

For the second night 2000 persons crowded the Fort Myer riding hall to view the President's Birthday Horse Show. But unlike the spectators of the night before, the crowd failed to get a glimpse of most of the visiting movie stars.

Due to a mixup, the stars were scheduled to appear simultaneously at Fort Myer and at the Baltimore birthday balls. Patricia Morison and Kathleen Coughlan, of Paramount, were the only Hollywood representatives to appear at the horse show.

Dr. A. L. Van Horn, director for crippled children of the Department of Labor Children's Bureau, yesterday stressed the importance of the work done by the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis which is sponsoring the birthday balls.

'Books for Buddies' Gong Out Today

First delivery to Navy and Marine stations of books collected in the "Books for Buddies" campaign will be made at 10 a. m. today from the Southwest Branch of the Public Library, Mrs. Philip Sidney Smith, chairman of the campaign, said last night.

Navy trucks will pick up the books, she said. They will go to five Navy and Marine stations in this area.

About 29,000 books have been given thus far in the campaign, Mrs. Smith said.

Edison Day Feb. 11

President Roosevelt set aside next February 11 yesterday as Thomas Alva Edison Day to honor the great inventor who was born on that date ninety-five years ago.

Struck by an automobile at Second Street and Massachusetts Avenue Northwest, Wednesday night, Walter James Hatton, Negro, 42, of 713 Smith's Row Northwest, died at Casualty Hospital yesterday.

Hatton was crossing Massachusetts Avenue at Second Street—not at the crosswalk, according to police—when he was knocked down by an automobile operated by Alex J. Ziady, 23, of Smithfield, N. C.

No charges were placed against the motorist, but he will appear before a coroner's jury at an inquest. The date of the hearing has not been set.

Senate Group Explains Vote Against Langer

By Robert DeVore
Post Staff Writer

The Senate Elections Committee yesterday made public its reasons for concluding that the record of William Langer, of North Dakota, disqualifies him from retaining his Senate seat, declaring that he "cannot avoid" the consequence "of acts of gross impropriety."

Reporting to the Senate on its 13-to-3 decision last December 16 that Langer was not entitled to be a Senator, the committee found that the charge of moral turpitude against the man who twice was Governor of his State "has been proven beyond all reasonable doubt."

In a two-sentence statement issued last night after he had read the report, Langer declared he was confident of vindication when his case is taken up for decision by the Senate, possibly three weeks from Monday.

Minority Report Considered

At the same time, Senator Murdock (Democrat), of Utah, said that the committee minority in the Langer case—Murdock and Senators Connally (Democrat), of Texas, and Smith (Democrat), of South Carolina—would meet tomorrow to consider the question of filing a minority report. A draft report in defense of Langer, prepared chiefly by his counsel, has been submitted to Senator Connally.

The committee asserted that the information contained in its report to the Senate "shows that the exclusion of Senator Langer from his seat would not be an indictment of the people" of North Dakota, as members of the committee minority and Langer's counsel have maintained.

Cannot Avoid Consequences

"On the contrary, the permission of Senator Langer to take his seat on the ground that the people of North Dakota approved of the misconduct now confessed would most assuredly reflect upon the moral standards of North Dakota," the report declares.

Langer, it stated, "'has not avoided, and cannot avoid, the consequences of acts of gross impropriety, lawlessness, shotgun law enforcement, jail breaking, violation of oath as an attorney, rabble-rousing, civil disobedience, breach of the peace, obstruction of the administration of justice and tampering with court officials.'"

It was the committee's contention that "only half-truths" were told the North Dakota electorate about the character and conduct of Langer, and that such information as the public was able to receive was converted to the Senator's political advancement "under the claim that he was oppressed, and was a martyr in the cause of the common people."

A careful reading of its report and the transcript of its extensive public hearings, the committee declared, "demonstrates a continuous, contemptuous and shameful disregard for the high concepts of public duty that every public official swears to uphold and defend under his Constitutional oath."

Finds Charge Proven

"Your committee finds that the charge of moral turpitude against the respondent (Langer) has been proven beyond all reasonable doubt, and respectfully recommends that the integrity of the United States be upheld by denying William E. Langer the right to be a United States Senator."

After reading the report and consulting with counsel, Langer made the following statement:

"I shall vigorously protect the seat in the United States Senate to which I have been fairly elected by my people.

"I have full confidence in the justice of my cause, with the knowledge of the falsity of the charges made against me, I confidently expect vindication on the floor of the United States Senate."

The committee proposed that the Senate first determine whether, as it contends, the Langer case is one of "exclusion" from the Senate, rather than "expulsion." The Senate is members holding that while Langmemb rehsolding that while Langer's oath was administered last January pending examination of the charges, he is nevertheless a member of the Senate and may only be expelled.

Counsel's Position Rejected

The Constitution requires two-thirds vote for expulsion. If the Senate accepts the committee's position. Langer may be returned to private life by a simple majority vote.

The committee rejected the position of Langer's counsel that the Senate lacks jurisdiction to examine into the qualifications of its members beyond the qualifications of age, citizenship and residence set forth in the Constitution.

In detailing the "most important" instances of alleged moral turpitude in the career of Senator Langer, the committee characterized as "irrational" and found "desperation" in Langer's declaration of martial law as the State supreme court was about to oust him as Governor of North Dakota in 1934.

The committee also detailed charges that Langer engaged the son and political friend of a Federal judge for the alleged purpose of influencing retrials of the conspiracy case; that he shared in the nearly $300,000 gross earnings of bond brokers in sale of bonds to State institutions, and that he received $25,000 for stock of little value from an attorney who represented the Great Northern Railway in a successful appeal for lower State taxes.

Citing Langer's testimony that he saw no "impropriety" in paying money to the judge's son and friend, the committee declared their actions "reprehensible." Bluntly, the committee called the bond deals and the stock transaction "briberies."

The report was signed by all members of the committee who voted to exclude Langer, except Senator Bridges (Republican), of New Hampshire, who is ill. The signers were: Democrats—Senators Green, of Rhode Island, committee chairman; George, of Georgia; Hatch, of New Mexico; Mead, of New York; Lucas, of Illinois; Stewart, of Tennessee; Chandler, of Kentucky, Tunnell, of Delaware, and Kilgore, of West Virginia; Republicans—Austin, of Vermont; Wiley, of Wisconsin, and Butler, of Nebraska.

Prejudice Charged

Letts Scans Papers for Viereck Bias

By Dillard Stokes
Post Staff Writer

Justice F. Dickinson Letts settled down in his chambers at the District Court yesterday to a long spell of reading—involving a stack of newspapers a couple of feet high.

When he has finished, the justice said, he will be prepared to rule on the demands for a change of venue for the German agent, George Sylvester Viereck. Viereck's counsels placed in evidence yesterday a huge bale containing copies of all four Washington newspapers and clippings from publications in other cities.

Viereck's lawyers claimed that 12 unbiased men can't be found in Washington to try their client on the indictment which accused him of using Congressmen and their franks for Nazi propaganda and concealing his operations when he registered as a foreign agent.

Agitation Charged

The lawyers, Emil Morosini, jr., and Daniel F. Cohalen, jr., of New York, blamed this condition on the newspapers, which they said have inflamed the public mind against the German agent. Accordingly, they asked the court:

Either to send the Viereck case to be tried in the Virginia or Maryland Federal courts or put it off indefinitely.

If both these demands are refused, to order Viereck tried before Justice T. Alan Goldsborough, who was accused of "prejudice against the Government" in a sworn statement last week.

To order all officers and agents of the Government to refrain from talking about the case to newspapermen until the trial is over.

Morosini did not discuss the third demand at the hearing yesterday, but Special Prosecutor Edward J. Hickey, jr., called it "frivolous and deserving of no further answer from either the Government or the court."

Viereck Is Blamed

Special Prosecutor William Power Maloney blamed Viereck's publicity on the German agent himself, saying Viereck "never was bashful before about attracting attention to himself."

It was Viereck who called himself a great authority on propaganda, Maloney said, and wrote a book on the art. And it was Viereck, Maloney added, who entered the employ of the Germans and registered himself as such. Out of the publicity naturally conferred upon such a character, said Maloney, Viereck's lawyers had constructed a "journalistic Tower of Babel."

Justice Letts commented that the court had an affirmative duty to see that the accused Nazi agent has a fair trial, and that he will have one. Gazing sadly at the "Tower of Babel," Justice Letts said that he would read over all the papers, determine in his own mind what they could do in the way of fomenting prejudice, and then announce his ruling.

Another Request Made

The Justice dealt promptly with one other request presented by Morosini. This set forth that Col. O. R. McGuire has been retained to act in Viereck's defense and that Col. McGuire is the husband of a niece of Justice Letts. Declaring that he "did not mean to question the integrity" of Justice Letts, Morosini said he felt that these circumstances would prevent the judge giving Viereck a fair trial.

If Justice Letts made rulings in favor of Viereck, Morosini explained there might be whispers that he was giving his nephew-in-law the breaks, and Morosini was afraid that to avoid this the judge would lean over backward, and lean too far.

Justice Letts said quietly that he believed he could trust himself to keep his balance and overruled the motion. The proceeding had not been a charge of "bias and prejudice" which could prevent a judge from proceeding further with a case.

Meanwhile, Justice Letts is considering what sentence to impose on Representative Hamilton Fish's secretary, George Hill, recently convicted of committing two perjuries before the special grand jury on Axis agents. When he is determining the sentence of a man who has been convicted of crime, it is the policy of the justice to receive any one who may be interested in the case or who may wish to offer information about it.

He has had a number of callers about Hill.

Lewis Sets Out To Build New Labor Empire

By Ben W. Gilbert
Post Staff Writer

John L. Lewis, former head of the C. I. O., has staked claim to a gigantic new labor empire with 2,500,000 potential new unionists and has sent out a field crew of 200 organizers to take possession, it was learned yesterday.

The new organizing drive, which is being supervised by Ora E. Gasaway, president of District 50 of Lewis' United Mine Workers, envisages the including of all workers in coal by-products, and dairy farmers, in the already powerful mine union.

At present, Gasaway said, District 50 has enrolled 60,000 members, including 5000 Michigan dairy farmers in the vicinity of the great automobile plants at Flint, and a cosmetics firm with a swank Fifth Avenue (New York) address.

Recalls C. I. O. Drive of 1936

To Gasaway, who has been one of Lewis' close associates for many years, organizing these groups is distinctly parallel to the time in 1936 when Lewis formed the C. I. O. to organize workers in the great steel and automobile mass-production industries.

"Then Green (William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor) said we could not do it, but in site of that, the job was done. And we'll do the job again this time."

Asked if the new organizing drive indicated that Lewis was going to take his half million mine workers out of the C. I. O., as he once took them out of the A. F. of L., Gasaway said:

"That is not the issue in the drive. John Lewis can quit the C. I. O. or can stay in, it won't make any difference. You know, he can sit back and wait until the rest of the C. I. O. comes begging to him."

Lewis was recently rebuffed by the C. I. O. executive board, at the urging of C. I. O. President Philip Murray, when he suggested that the A. F. of L. and the C. I. O. start labor-peace negotiations. Observers interpreted the rebuff as an indication that Lewis had lost the tremendous influence he once exerted in C. I. O. councils.

Gasaway explained that the incorporation of the dairy farmers in District 50 was based on the similarity between byproducts of coal and by-products of milk.

"The farmers came down here from Michigan and asked us to take them in," he said, "because they wanted to belong to a C. I. O. union headed by John Lewis. They know John Lewis always gets what he starts out after."

Negotiations are now under way to include another 22,000 New York State dairy farmers in the mine union, Gasaway said. District 50 representatives are in Utica, N. Y., for a meeting to be held today, he said.

Gasaway got out a huge chart prepared by the Koppers Co., a Mellon-interest coal and coke firm, to show how many by-products coal has.

"There is plenty of room for organizing here," he said, pointing to listings of paint products, roofing materials, cosmetics, gas, chemicals, dyes, photographic materials, paving materials, drugs, etc., on the chart.

A total of one million coal by-products workers and one and one-half million dairy farmers could be organized into District 50, he said.

Asked if he would try to take in other farmers, assuming dairy farmers are organized, he asked: "Why not? Once this thing gets started and farmers see that there are benefits to organization, there is no telling where it will go."

By organizing the dairy farmers, Gasaway said, both producer and consumer could be assisted at the expense of processor and distributor. Milk sheds which refused to offer farmers reasonable prices would be faced with competing milk sheds, he said, reminding the reporter that the mine workers had resources and funds needed to start such enterprises.

The organizing drive was originally authorized by the District 50 board in August of last year and has been "moving fast" ever since, he said.

District 50 was originally formed five years ago as a research organization which provided secure jobs to some of Lewis' closer followers, including his daughter, Kathryn, who is secretary-treasurer of District 50.

A native of France, he was assigned to the United States in 1907 after joining the Marist order. He was at St. Ann's as teacher, principal and director until his appointment as assistant general.

D. C. Unions Pledge Aid to Civil Defense

Ways in which members of Washington labor unions can be used to aid civilian defense were discussed yesterday at a meeting of chiefs of public works services at the District Defense Council.

P. Y. K. Howat, who heads the public works division, presided at the session, held at the District Building. John Locher, president of the Central Labor Union; C. F. Preller and Willy Arnheim brought pledges of aid from union members.

Col. Lemuel Bolles, director of District defense, said decontamination squads, demolition squads, rescue units and the volunteer fire auxiliary could use great numbers of skilled and unskilled workers.

In addition to filling in these regularly established divisions, the union men will be formed into bridge crews, water supply brigades, and highway emergency squads and the like—working with and supplementing work of already set up District and defense units in these divisions.

Emergency elevator repair squads also will be formed.

For these emergency services, labor leaders said, the men would not want or accept pay. "Say where they can help most and what skills are needed. The men will be there," Locher declared.

He pointed out that labor groups are raising $100,000 for civilian defense in Washington and said that when union members were told the first money would go to setting up a blood bank they replied, "Well, can't we give some blood, too?"

Supplies needed for emergency repairs "of any nature" will be supplied by Washington contractors immediately, it was declared at the meeting, with "the question of pay to be brought up later—if at all."

Plans for providing the metropolitan area with a water supply "in any event" are being worked out in a system that will hook with emergency lines the supplies of Washington, Alexandria and other surrounding counties. Creeks and rivers of the area are being surveyed and plans being made to secure and store huge supplies of chlorine, Howat reported.

Assistant public works chiefs attending the meeting were M. O. Leighton, water and sewers; J. M. Spears, highways and bridges; James W. Fletcher, decontamination squads; J. H. Thomas, highway and bridges, and Stanford E. Abel, demolition squads.

Old-Fashioned Soup Tureen Features Modern Contents

Mrs. Marcellus C. Hughes, right, is enthusiastic about being able to carry soup, eggs, vegetables and fruit home under the flap of her big purse, rather than in the old-fashioned market basket piled high. This is possible when she buys her dinner in dehydrated form, such as the vegetable noodle soup she is serving from her old-fashioned pink aster Spode tureen.

Mrs. Marjorie Child Husted, above, Director Home Economics Department, General Mills, Inc., passes on such foods as the dehydrated soup her company has added to their products. The vegetables and noodles come from carton as shown in picture, upper right. When made into soup the shavings taste like the original vegetables as fresh from garden.

Dehydrated Foods Fill Vital Emergency Needs

By Martha Ellyn
The Post Food Editor

IT HAS long been known that Secretary of Agriculture Wickard is interested in all new food forms that will aid in the national crisis. He told me recently of the surprise he had in seeing egg powder put to use for the first time in cookery.

Eggs are no longer a food bought by the dozen. Since science has discovered that eggs may be dried to form an extremely concentrated food that can be shipped easily, with splendid keeping qualities under ordinary conditions, Hattie, the Hen, may find her eggs going over distant waters to be made into many a delicious scramble, for our boys in service, or hungry refugees.

Martha Ellyn

Egg whites, if dried and stored in air-tight containers, keep well in any climate, while the yolks, if mixed with certain starches, and partially dried, form a highly nutritious food product that can be kept without the aid of refrigeration even in the tropics.

Confronted with the problem of packaging of food since tin is being used for war purposes rather than for the distribution of food, and the matter of space in transportation becoming more acute, all food processing that will contribute to both conservation and transportation takes on added importance.

After the Secretary and I had discussed egg powder and its merits, he asked me if I was familiar with the dehydration of vegetables. He didn't catch me off guard on that query for on my recent trip through the Middle West to learn what the food companies contributions are to present day emergency needs, I found in detail about experimentation in the dehydration of vegetables.

Giant Stirs in Sleep

Visiting with Marjorie Child Husted, director, home economics, department, General Mills, Inc., Minneapolis, I learned that a great giant has stirred in its sleep.

Dehydration of vegetables or the reduction of moisture content in vegetables, which received its impetus at the time of the last war, has taken on new proportions in view of the probabilities of feeding millions of people abroad, and in the feeding of our own military forces. Too, it is a logical process for food consumed by our own civilian population. Although 80,000,000 pounds of dehydrated foods were produced during the first war, most of which was sent to Europe, the production dwindled to almost nothing during the post-war years. The equipment and machinery were not completely successful.

By borrowing the knowledge and experience of quality control gained in recent years by the quick-freezing process of vegetables, dehydration has overcome many of its former problems. Then, too, equipment for its manufacture has greatly improved. The present product is definitely of high quality in flavor, color and appearance, and is excelled only by the freshly picked vegetables.

What Is Dehydration?

Since dehydration of food will no doubt have a great influence on our future eating I am telling Post readers the story concerning it as told to me by Marjorie Child Husted, known to many as "Betty Crocker."

"Dehydration is as logical a process for treatment of food as is our present process of drying food, Martha Ellyn," said Mrs. Husted. And she elaborated on dehydration as follows:

"Like dried fruits, dried vegetables are easy to ship because refrigeration is unnecessary. They take up less space in storing, and they are processed at the source of supply when they are at the height of goodness, as they retain their color and flavor-freshness. The vegetables are picked fresh daily and rushed to a centrally located dehydration plant, where they are processed a very few hours after they have been taken from the soil.

"In the dehydration process the vegetables are cleaned, peeled, inspected, balanced, then placed on large trays and run through the dryers. In the process most of the vitamins and minerals of the raw vegetables are retained. The vegetables are reduced to anywhere from 6 to 20 per cent of their original weight and result in a dry flake with a rather dull color. With rehydration—soaking in cold water or cooking—these flakes regain their original bright color and garden-fresh vegetable flavors.

Dewy Freshness Retained

"To show the extreme care given these vegetables and the precautions taken to gather them at the peak of their goodness, one of the men in the West Coast plant where we buy our vegetables, tells these interesting facts: 'To insure crisp, crunchy spinach and celery, we ask our growers to start their harvesting at daybreak. We even specify that tarpaulins be used to protect the loads from wilt damage and rapid evaporation of the early morning dew. Several hours of the morning sun has the tendency to wilt down the leaves and when shredding or slicing this wilting causes bruising. A crisp fresh spinach or celery leaf is necessary for cleaner slicing and minimum cellular fracture to assure a maximum retention of the natural flavor, aroma and esters. So important is early morning harvest of tomatoes that the growers in the Imperial Valley District will not permit any picking off their vines after nine in the morning. The first cars of freshly prepared vegetables immediately start their cycle of dehydration, retaining all their morning freshness!"

Mrs. Husted thinks that in the next few years we are destined to see a tremendous increase in the use of dried vegetables due to the improvement in the technique and machinery and also due to the demands of our national emergency. She said, "As the number of American expeditionary forces in foreign lands increase, and more people are needing food in other countries, we will be producing more of this type of food. Our civilian demands for dehydrated foods will no doubt be greater for canning. Dried vegetables because of the shortage of metal have 'come of age' and are here to stay even after this emergency because they are good, enconomical and easy to prepare."

Mrs. Husted's food company has recently released from its great mills a Vegetable Noodle Soup, with these new dehydrated vegetables as the basis of the soup. The product is a delicious home-made soup that can be made easily and quickly with only 20 minutes cooking. That's less time than vegetables can be prepared for making soup. All the hard work is done for you, and the soup is 99 per cent ready to cook.

Vitamin Enriched

The package gives you the dry ingredients—seven choice vegetables, seasonings and rich egg noodles that are vitamin-fortified, because of the restoration of vitamin B1 and vitamin G to the whole grain Durum wheat level. The 1 per cent effort necessary to make the soup into a 100 per cent product is the addition of 6 cups of boiling water and two tablespoons of butter to the contents of the package and let simmer for 20 minutes.

In these busy days, when so many outside interests claim the attention of the homemaker, business girl and men, too (who do their own cooking), it is reassuring to know that a wholesome, delicious meal can be assembled in a few minutes, with this new dehydrated product. It is an ideal food for school lunches and Mrs. Husted suggests using it for a homey family supper in the following menu:

Cheese Toasted Rolls
Cherry Carnival Dessert
Milk Coffee

With George Washington's Birthday approaching, we will be thinking about a suitable cherry dish to do honor to the patriot, who is credited with hacking down the cherry tree. The cherry tree episode may be fiction but the cherry dessert for which Mrs. Husted gives the receipe is no phantasy, for I ate this delicious dessert in her spick, span and ultra-modern kitchens where evolve many of the recipes you find tucked in the bags of flour coming from the mill's for which she works: Here is the recipe:

Cherry Carnival Dessert—Cream 1/3 cup shortening, add 1½ cups sugar gradually and cream thoroughly. Blend in 2 well-beaten eggs. Sift 1¼ cups kitchen tested flour and measure to 2¼ cupsful. Sift the flour, 1½ teaspoons baking powder, ½ teaspoon soda and ½ teaspoon salt together, and add alternately with 1 cup milk to the creamed mixture. Blend in 2 to 2¼ cups well-grained sour pitted cherries (No. 2 can) and ½ cup chopped nuts. Pour into greased and floured pan, 8 by 12 inches, and bake in moderate oven, 350 degrees, for 45 to 50 minutes. Cut into squares and serve warm with Hot Cherry Sauce. Makes 12 3-inch squares.

Hot Cherry Sauce—Mix ½ cup sugar, dash of salt and 2 tablespoons cornstarch together in saucepan. Blend ¾ cup cherry juice from No. 2 size can of sour cherries with 1 cup water. Boil until the mixture thickens and the starchy taste disappears (about 10 minutes), stirring constantly until the mixture boils, but only occasionally after that. Blend in ¼ teaspoon almond flavoring. Makes six generous servings.

If preferred, use only ⅓ of the freshly baked cherry cake to serve with hot cherry sauce as a dessert, and use the other ⅔ to serve the next day as a regular cake, the bottom dusted with confectioners' sugar or covered with a simple white icing.

Roast Beef Culinary Tribute To Any Hostess

Standing Rib Roast of Beef

Select two or three-rib roast. A standing rib roast can be served more easily if backbone is separated from ribs by sawing across ribs close to and parallel to backbone. The backbone may be removed completely after roasting, but the roast will hold shape better if backbone is held in place by skewers during roasting.

Season rib roast with salt and pepper and place fat side up in an open roasting pan. No rack is necessary as bones keep meat out of juices. Do not cover; do not add water. Insert meat thermometer so that the bulb reaches the center of the largest muscle. Be careful that bulb does not rest on fat or bone. Put in a slow oven (300 degrees F.) and roast until desired degree of doneness is reached. The thremometer will register 140 degrees F., for a rare; 160 degrees F., for a medium, and 170 degrees F., for a well-done roast. Allow 18 to 20 minutes per pound for cooking a rare roast; 22 to 25 minutes per pound for a medium, and 27 to 30 minutes per ound for a well-done roast.

Beautiful Furniture Easily Cared for With Little Effort

Beautiful furniture deserves excellent care. Never before in our history have we had more incentive to care for home furnishings than now. It is not a difficult thing to do to keep the fine finish which is on furniture.

If properly finished and properly cared for a mahogany surface will not show finger marks unless the fingers themselves are greasy and dirty. When this happens, wipe the marks off with a soft cloth wrung until just damp in mild soap suds, dry by wiping in the direction of the grain with a dry, clean soft cloth.

Ink stains will usually wash off mahogany furniture surfaces. This is because the finish seals the surface so that the stain is on top of the wood, not in it. Wipe it off with a soft cloth dampened in a mild soap suds. To dry, wipe lightly with a dry soft cloth in the direction of the grain.

A really good furniture finish is in the wood, not on it. This is one of the reasons why your choicest pieces, like those made of precious mahogany, need so little attention to keep them at their best. You cannot improve the finish by applying furniture polish and elbow grease. Instead, you may achieve only an uneven shine that varies as your enthusiasm and energy wane.

A Look Back Over 60 Years . . .

By Lee Carson
International News Service Staff Writer.

Franklin Delano Roosevelt will blow out the 21 candles on his birthday cake tonight with a wish that he and his nation will have the perseverence and the greatness to fight for the peace after the war is won.

Both the wish for the future and the candles give a positive clue to the man who at 60 turns a determined, self-assured face to a fight whose dimensions and portent have no parallel in history.

On his heroically proportioned head falls civilization's splitting headache and on his squared shoulders must drop the responsibility for whatever comes.

But the President today is the same poised, unharried and unafraid man who took over the reins a decade ago when the country was deeply and darkly suffering its greatest depression. The only change wrought by the years of crushing national woes and worries climaxed by war are the fine network of lines around his eyes, the sparser and whiter hair. Chronologically the President will be 60 tomorrow, but he is as well and forward-looking as he was at the beginning of his three-term administration.

Curiously and perhaps prophetically there has been a subtle, visible difference in the President since December 7. During the uncertain, nagging months prior to the Pearl Harbor bombing he seemed nervous, frequently was irritable and sharp. Dark hollows ringed his eyes, and the easy grin had a poor counterfeit in the forced, grey smile he turned on and off.

That Sunday in December wiped out all this. The confident manner has returned, heightened by a new firmness reflected in his face. The jutting chin is set in a resolved line and his chiseled, aristocratic features seem to have grown more massive and granite-carved.

His is the head of a warrior. Facing him across the cluttered desk in the Executive mansion is the big colored map of the world-wide battle he must win. In every corner of the map his is a name that is known and familiar as the name of no other American has been known. To millions it is the symbol of all their hopes, and to other hordes—of Japan and Nazi Germany—the name Roosevelt quickens fear and hatred.

As he talks of the unpredictable road ahead to the victory he is unwaveringly sure of, the President's eye travels to the far distant corners where the fight must be carried, lingers on the points far out in the Pacific, far north and far south where American soldiers are destined to give immediate battle. The peace that follows must be on an equally vast scale, and even in the thick of the battle it is this peace that the President now carefully scans.

Shoving aside for a moment the dreary, deathly business of conducting the conflict, the President's face brightens and his eyes shine as he talks of reconstructing the world, of the development of the Atlantic Charter, of free access to raw materials for everyone, of nations without border patrols, of universal trade, and a mankind renovated and rejuvenated.

He must carry the sword now, but Mr. Roosevelt looks forward eagerly to the day when he can break it over his knee and take up the tools to install peace on earth for all men, for all time. Great men, including his hero, Woodrow Wilson, have failed, but Franklin Delano Roosevelt has no fear of tackling this titanic job.

The record today interests the President only as a reference and a background of the present and future. After a momentous, precedent-shattering decade in the White House, his decisions have already been projected into history, but looking over the shoulder is not a habit of his. Even on this anniversary there is no reminiscence, no self-contemplation.

January 30 annually brings to life his personal fight against overwhelming odds. The Nation dances and cuts candle-lit cakes in order that other victims of infantile paralysis may walk, but the President never rejects on the lonely and awful struggle against an eclipse that shadowed his promising career 21 years ago. He says, and truthfully, that he is the least introspective man of his acquaintance.

The Nation's first three-time President is better equipped by temperament, more at home in his position than any man in American history. He has the physical ability to bounce back after terrific punishment, and the mental buoyancy to keep his chin well above the water at all times. Men around him have fallen away in fatigue and in physical collapse, but Roosevelt can look ill and weary one day and, after a night's rest, be clear-eyed and radiant the next.

Probably the worst hardship inflicted on the President by the war is the definite end of taking frequent short trips to Hyde Park, to the restful environment of the infantile foundation spa he founded at Warm Springs, Ga., out through the midland country, and out to sea in his sailboat or aboard the official yacht Potomac. Limited by the effects of his former illness, these jaunts were a source of intense pleasure and boundless release for him. The war and its relentless burdens and heightened personal danger necessarily close the log book of the President's travels. He will especially miss the rare opportunities to escape everything in his small sailboat.

The love of the sea and born aptitude for sailing was one of the many things that bound the President to Prime Minister Churchill in private as well as official friendship. Through their mutual interest in ships and in history, and in enjoying a good, thwacking practical joke, Churchill and Roosevelt built a strong foundation of friendship. In spite of the hectic days spent over planning the grand strategy during the Prime Minister's visit here, the two men found time for some very heavy "ribbing."

The speculation as to whether the two "colorful characters" would blend or clash could have been squelched long before the ample proof that Churchill and Roosevelt make up an indivisible two-man team by anyone who knows the President personally. When expediency is at stake, the President will get along with anyone. However, this conviction that any two people can get along together if they sincerely want to was unnecessary. The commanders of the two nations broke ground for an undying corporation during the dramatic mid-Atlantic meeting, completed the structure during the weeks "Winnie" occupied the best guest room in the Executive Mansion. If there is any division of command, it gives Churchill a slight edge as a war-wager, and the President the scepter of political authority.

After Churchill's departure the President looked wearier than he had since the beginning of the Nation's entry in the war and the end of the great debate. Churchill is a sporadic worker who follows no routine, frequently gets up in the middle of the night and works through until mid-morning, then sleeps for a few hours before beginning again.

The President has stuck, more or less faithfully, to a schedule during his years in the White House. He rises in the morning around 8, breakfasts and begins the day's work with the second cup of coffee in his bedroom. He usually knocks off at the office around 5 or 6:30 p. m., finishes up any leftover work after dinner, and retires around midnight. Trying to fit his hours to the clockless ones of his guest resulted in his working day and night, getting little sleep, or time to himself.

But the President recovered rapidly. The enormous decisions—decisions affecting virtually everyone in the world—were made and the course plotted. The future had been equipped with roads—if no sign posts. A man of action and decision—the President was relieved—if a little tired.

No one has ever heard him whine, and few are those who have seen the worry that gnawed him rawly during this past year before the war clouds he knew shadowed us were visible to everyone. As he struggled with the international situation which was pushing the war toward these shores, the President had to roll with two shattering blows.

His mother, the beloved and devoted dowager, Mrs. James Roosevelt, died. She was unquestionably a dominant influence in his formative years, a close companion, and friend throughout his life. Another woman who had stood staunchly at his side—Miss Marguerite Le Hand—was struck down by a critical illness, and is still under the care of physicians at Warm Springs.

It was "Missy" Le Hand who took many a burden, cleared away an untold amount of niggling detail. As his confidential secretary for many years, "Missy" was quiet, self-effacing, always there when she was needed. She lived in the White House, worked tirelessly to give her boss time and freedom for concentration on the great issues and decisions that have filled his career since the beginning. Fortunately unflustered, steady Grace Tully, Missy's first assistant, has been able to take over and fill the tremendously important shoes.

As the increasing pressure of war squeezed out all opportunity to continue keeping a first-hand finger on the Nation's pulse by touring around the country, talking to all its citizens, the President's indefatigable wife went into action. Almost constantly on the wing, friendly and sympathetic, Mrs. Roosevelt has done an able job of supplying him with valuable information on what the country is thinking, how it is feeling.

Buttons Make the Dress—If Not the Girl

To make your dress look like a couturier's model, take off inexpensive buttons and add distinctive ones like the ceramic roses shown above, which were designed by La Mode. It is these little important details that give verve to your dress, according to the New York designer, Sophie Gimbel.

Simple Line, Distinctive Detail, Designer's Formula for Chic

By Jane Driscoll
The Post Fashion Editor

IT IS THOSE little personal touches on a dress that make it expensive. Details often have to be overlooked in mass production. So if you want your dress to look like a couturier's model, watch for tiny details as tucking, flowers cut out and appliqued, and interesting buttons.

SOPHIE GIMBEL

New York designer Sophie Gimbel still makes clothes look like Paris creations—although she is no longer able to go to the former Parisian openings for her ideas. Simplicity of line is her creed. She likes the straight and narrow silhouette, cut in a way to show the figure. "Skirts," says Mrs. Gimbel, "should not, however, be so narrow at the thighs that they look unbecoming." Above all, this designer depends on the little personal touches to give her costumes feminine distinction.

No Longer Looks to Europe

Although Sophie Gimbel (in private life, Mrs. Adam Gimbel), no longer looks to Europe for inspiration, she finds no dearth of ideas in America. And furthermore, she believes top American designers are just as good as the tops in Paris. She pointed out that even in Paris there were only few designers who really had won wide recognition. So, why should we expect to hear of every American designer who achieves designing success.

Mrs. Gimbel believes we ought to respect the American designer's judgment more. "In Paris," she said, "designers made the same thing over and over again. The best designers were known for the simple, suavely cut dresses they made year after year. But—if an American designer tries simple clothes for two consecutive seasons, she is discredited."

For her ideas, Mrs. Gimbel goes to exhibits and museums in New York. Before each collection, she spends two or three weeks getting her ideas. She borrows dresses and takes patterns from them. "Some of my best ideas," said the designer, "have come not from women's clothes but men's attire. More care is usually taken in their tailoring. Just last year, the quilted jacket, which had so much success, was taken from a peasant's jacket."

Emphases on Jackets

This eminent designer places great emphasis on jackets this spring too, as a wartime measure. She feels that generally clothes should look the same, but jackets should accompany evening and daytime dresses. She pointed out that in event of an air raid, a woman does not need a coat if she wears a jacket with her long dress. The short dress in crepe with a jacket may appear to be an innocent little dress by day, but when the jacket is removed later on, a chiffon, lacy blouse confection is revealed that is both dressy and feminine.

These she believes, along with suits of every description, will make up the future wardrobe of every woman. Practical dark clothes with gay accessories now, and later on chiffon or prints were also suggested. Odd color coats with print dresses are a means of adding color. Coats lined one-half way up the inside (to conserve the pure silk print which is about gone) is another color idea.

Mrs. Gimbel especially stressed the necessity of wearing long dresses occasionally to give the men in uniform a lift. She thinks it is sad to see everyone dressed in black at night. Recently an Englishman in the service who was looking on at one of the New York fashion shows told Mrs. Gimbel he thoroughly enjoyed the event. It had been two years since he had seen an English woman in a long dress!

New Game for Valentine Party

NO "LOVELORN" guests at this Valentine party! Bashful or bold, every man has the key to a fair maiden's heart.

The name of this clever way to pair off your guests for the evening is "Hearts and Keys." Just cut out red hearts, label each one with a girl's name and make keys out of gilded cardboard.

Then, with red ribbon, fasten each heart to a key and put them all in a dressed-up box, with keys dangling through a hole in the top. When each man tugs on a key, out comes the heart of his "sweetheart" of the evening.

What next? A Valentine-making contest! Everybody goes sentimental with scissors, paste and paper doilies—creating a Valentine for "the one I love." A prize for the giddiest offering—and a "postman" to deliver them.

The outcome of all this romance of course should be revealed in a Valentine fortune game. So have on hand a stack of red paper hearts and label each with a prophecy: "You'll lose your heart to a blonde smoothie," "A trip to the altar this year," and so on. Everybody draws one, with lots of excitement.

You'll find at least 14 gay, romantic games and many more, fun for all types of parties, in our 40-page booklet, "Games for Good Parties." Includes fortunes, pencil and paper games, team games, hilarious trick, stunts, ice-breakers.

Send 15 cents (plus 1 cent to cover cost of mailing) for our booklet, "Games for Good Parties," to the NEW YORK OFFICE of The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth Street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

Skip Sweets If You Want To Lose Weight

By Ida Jean Kain

LIFE would be so much more pleasant if the high calories came in spinach, and the vitamins came in pie. But no, it has to be the other way around and a body can get more calorie mileage from a dessert course than from any other. For example, you could walk 5 miles in 40 minutes on a 3-inch wedge of cherry pie at 300 calories. But the trouble is, those who like pie invariably do not choose to walk 5 miles in 40 minutes.

All right, walk slowly, say 3¾ miles an hour. At this moderate rate you can burn up the pie calories in an hour and 10 minutes. How long would it take to walk off the calories if you top the pie with a scoop of ice cream? Practically all afternoon if you amble along slowly.

Excess Calories

Let's say you eat the pie and skip the walk—what happens? Nothing, unless those calories are in excess of your energy needs. But that's the catch. When the calories come at the end of a good meal, they usually are in excess, proof of which is on the scales. But if you leave off the vegetables and milk and some of the other protective foods, so as to have calories to spare for dessert, you would be on a deficiency diet. You can't do that.

The way to get around it is to become acquainted with some of the desserts that are not as high in calories. Any dessert that contains flour, sugar and fat is fattening. The less fat, the lower the calories. A 3-inch wedge of angel cake without icing (and it's good without icing) contains only 150 calories. The same size piece of sponge cake contains 200 calories. Add chocolate (fat) to the cake and the icing and you get 500 calories in a two-and-a-half-inch square.

There are lots of custard desserts and whips that are not high in calories. Banana custard contains 133 calories per half cup; banana whip 100 calories for three-fourths cup; baked custard, 133 calories for one-half cup, sherbet 100 calories per half cup, ice cream, one-half cup contains 200 calories; one small scoop 175 calories.

Pie generally contains from 200 to 300 calories for three inches. A single pie crust nine inches in diameter contains 600 calories, a double crust, 1200 calories.

If you are trying to cut calories to keep your weight within reason, make it a rule to take dessert only every other day, and on alternate days have fresh fruits, which are comparatively low in calories and are on the list of protective foods.

So you can keep tab on the calories, here's the score on pie—

Man Suggests Amendment to Rent Control Bill Requiring Persons Who Own or Control Housing Accommodations to List Them With Federal Registry

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am interested in housing (as who isn't?) and after reading "M. P. A.'s" letter of January 27 (advocating obligatory emergency listing of all rental property, but particularly rooms, with a central agency) an idea occurred to me that might be effective in bringing order out of chaos. I believe that provision for a central housing register should be incorporated into the rent control law. In fact, it should have been in the first place.

One of the provisions of this law, of which we have heard nothing from the administrator thus far, defines his power to "require a license as a condition of engaging in any rental transaction involving the subletting of any housing accommodations—." It seems to me this existing provision would effectively supplement the one suggested above,—giving the administrator a complete list of housing space for rent, including rents charged and accommodations proposed.

By fully exercising his power to license persons who own or control housing accommodations, the administrator would be in a strategic position to supervise,—without undue complications or difficulty,—the listing of such space-for-rent as is available. And a very slight amendment to the rent control bill could launch this systematic procedure, giving us that central housing register which your correspondent intelligently propounds. Sincerely, BUSINESS MAN.

Consider the Landlady's Economic Liabilities

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Reading the views of a few chronic gripers, who doubtless complain all the time about everything, one might get the impression from your columns of recent date that there isn't a decent landlady in Washington. Does no one ever write about his beautiful room, his kind landlady, or the reasonable rent he enjoys?

Says one complainant: "All the landlady wants is your money." Of course she wants your money. So does any other business operator. Hasn't she made an investment? Isn't she entitled to a return? The investment required to start and keep up a rooming house is not inconsiderable. I know, because I launched such a business two years ago.

Have these complainants any idea of the cost of furniture, bedding, linens, drapes, awnings and blackout shades? Do they realize that "running expenses" include such items as higher rate for electricity, bigger gas bills for hot water, heavy outlay for furnace oil, replacements and repairs—not to mention laundry, maid service, taxes, etc.

That $20 a month which "Local Nomad," (your correspondent of January 25) paid for her sumptuous accommodations in a private home in Atlanta, Ga., would hardly pay the services of a part-time maid here,—even supposing you could find the maid. And all this talk about room-with-bath! Just imagine, if you can, homes built to provide a private bath for every "roomer" now in Washington! I would be among the first to admit that there are many rooming houses here that are scarcely fit for human habitation; but I wonder, on the other hand, how well some of your complainants would fit into a high-type home environment.

As for you, Miss Haworth, I wish now to say what I have often thought: You must have half a dozen "super-minds" helping you. There is no other explanation of your consistently wise and sympathetic advice. K.

Navy Wife Praises Local Landladies

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Both my tenant and I have been reading, first with amusement and later with irritation, the battle of words between landlady and tenant that has been waging in your column. My tenant is a Navy wife who, during the last three years, has lived in every type of rented quarters, up and down both coasts. Says she: "I have never found anywhere better landladies than those in Washington. But no matter where I have lived, I have met with fair and reasonable treatment. When occasional disputes have arisen, it has been due to misunderstanding, not meanness. The tenant should realize that he is depriving the home owner of certain privileges of privacy, and that, on both sides, the comfort and wishes of those outside the family circle must be considered."

Needless to say, this navy wife is an excellent tenant; one of the best I have ever had However, not one tenant has ever moved from my home in resentment. I count them all as my friends, who continue to visit me occasionally. The illogic of tenants who present their cases to your column truly amazes me. There is "M. P. A.," (January 27) who assumes that the "For Rent" signs she sees in windows and on drugstore bulletin boards means that the advertisers have not listed their space with the Defense Housing Registry.

As a matter of fact, my sister is, at this moment, advertising an unfurnished apartment both by signs in the window and the neighborhood drugstore. But before she placed either sign, she telephoned the Registry a detailed account of her place. But suppose she had not. Since she is offering the apartment for rent, what does it matter how a prospective tenant learns of it?

Then there are the "high standards" set by "Local Nomad," as reported in your column of January 25. Standards which she maintains (she admits) by submitting to every personal indignity in order to claim an address with "snob appeal." It might do her good to investigate what she calls "the sort of environment I have never known,"—an environment in which she will find no basement laundress charging fancy prices for the smallest service

Heigh-ho. Perhaps if the tenant as well as the landlady were to take up the practise of the Golden Rule, living conditions for all of us here would greatly improve. Sincerely, D. W. D.

New Patterns Show Trends Of Today's Life

Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

There's motion in the designs of the new fabrics that are coming along, maybe reflective of the world we live in. At any rate these patterns have a vibrant refreshing quality about them and they seem to make the familiar static motifs look a little lost and bewildered. These new designs are of feathers blowing, flowers and leaves bowed by the wind, ribbons flying, birds on the wing. Nearly all the leading fabric manufacturers are carrying these patterns, but the really surprising part about it is that the public likes them, sensing instinctively probably that they interpret our times with a tender poignance. These manufacturers shake their heads quizzically at some of the patterns they thought were going to be high-style numbers—they just can't yet understand why they turned out to be best sellers.

The other important trend in the current fabric story is the Pan-American note. The Peruvian fabric designs that were dramatically spot-lighted by the William Pahlmann exhibit are interpretations of this theme, and in their wake will come many more. In addition there are many South American and Mexican materials coming through, and a number of textile experts from the United States are in South America now and others have recently returned—their task was developing this source for interesting fabrics and colors.

The new materials that are being featured include chintz, of course, along with many novel textural cottons . . . with shortages of almost every other fiber, this will undoubtedly be a cotton year, decoratively speaking.

Conversation Tip

If at parties a pundit you'd be acclaimed,
Or at a salon hold oral sway,
Don't worry about your banal thoughts—
It doesn't matter at all what you say,
Just as long as you speak from a husky throat,
In an importan,t authoritative way.

Today's Social Notes

(From the Truthtown Torch)

Truthtown notables, long accustomed to limousine life, are patriotically adapting themselves to the tire shortage. Most of them are using taxicabs for such informal travel as shopping and business, and several of the more adventurous have boldly boarded street cars and buses.

Mrs. Rufus Rossiter Antelope is organizing a movement to foster bus and street car travel. Those joining will wear buttons bearing such slogans as "Ride the bus to help the U. S." and "Ride the rolley, the Japs to volley."

"These buttons," explained Mrs. Antelope, "will put street car and bus riding on a patriotic basis, and will save explanations to friends who happen to encounter you in these public vehicles."

Mrs. Clancy Percheron is organizing a bicycle class for dowagers. Ellsworth Spindle, the noted stunt cyclist, will give lessons to the group each Tuesday morning in the ballroom of the Plush Sofa Club.

Mrs. Bartholomew Beetle, eccentric dowager and perpetual thorn in the flesh to the ultra-conservative set, attempted unsuccessfully to organize a walking class. The first meeting, held yesterday morning at the statue of Gen. Prance, was attended only by the volunteer instructor, society ornithologist Prof. Orlando Birdsong, Mrs. Beetle, Mrs. Bridgeport Billow, chairman of the local Sacrifice for Defense committee, her chauffeur, Jiggs, and several strange women in frowsy clothes.

"The trouble with movements of that kind" explained Mrs. Billow last night, "is that they always attract so many fanatics, crackpots and other unorthodox persons."

Home Defender

Ethelbert Vanderpuffer, who with Mrs. Vanderpuffer, is spending the winter at his town house, is serving as air raid warden of the Orchid Heights District. Despite his gout and his recent stroke over the proposed 1942 tax bill, Mr. Vanderpuffer faithfully makes his rounds of inspection in a taxi. He has obtained permission, however, in event of extreme cold weather to have his valet, Peacock, sub for him.

President to Entertain 'Cuff Links Gang' As Nation Celebrates His Birthday Tonight

While the Nation as a whole makes merry in his honor tonight, the President himself will be sitting down to dinner with a group he calls "The Cuff-Links Gang," a semisecret organization composed entirely of old friends of the Chief Executive and the First Lady . . . I say semisecret because, while the group's personnel is well known, what goes on at its annual session has long been blacked out . . . There have been extensive rumors to the effect that the gathering gives vent to a "gridiron dinner" of sorts in which everyone present comes in for a few gentle jibes.

The group is made up chiefly of a few of the President's friends who went through the 1920 campaign with him when he strove unsuccessfully to become Vice President of the United States. Following that campaigns, the men who worked with him received gold cuff links bearing his and their initials . . . and thus the Cuff-Links crowd came into being . . . A crowd that reassembles each time the President's birthday rolls around.

Among the many pre-Birthday Dinner cocktail parties on this evening's calendar is the one the Nelson Rockefellers will give at the 1925 F Street Club . . . Their guests will include the group they are to entertain later at the all-star dinner at the Willard Hotel . . . From 6:15 until time for that dinner, incidentally, a hostess committee headed by public-spirited Mrs. John Allan Dougherty will be in action every minute, seeing that the stars meet everybody else of importance, and that everybody else meets all the stars . . . Well, it looks as if it's going to be fun, anyway.

Mrs. John Allan Dougherty

Largest private party on tonight's calendar is the dinner planned by Mrs. Edward Beale McLean at her new home at 3308 R Street . . . Around 40 carpenters have been working all week to get the house, which is a kind of junior Union Station, ready for tonight's fete—which will be the first given by the hostess since she moved from the old Friendship a few days ago . . . At one of her dinners there a former U. S. diplomat surveyed the varied crowd and propounded a question to the charming woman who was his dinner partner. "Do you think such big parties as this are in good taste?" he asked. The lady in question smiled sweetly and replied, "I'm sorry, Mr. Minister, I didn't hear a word you said."

Mrs. Woodrow Wilson Holds Spotlight

I don't know of any woman who has retained an aura of glamour longer or to better advantage than Mrs. Woodrow Wilson . . . Not by design, and certainly not by choice, the widow of the wartime President is still a center of attention wherever she happens to be.

A group of Washington women, assembled the other day to work out plans for a benefit, paid high tribute to her popularity. It seems they were making a list of prospective sponsors and had included the names of all the Cabinet ladies, all the wives of Ambassadors and six Senate hostesses . . . Plans also were made to have present at the event a couple of best-seller authors, one Metropolitan opera singer and a couple of top-line actresses . . . Still the layout lacked something, even if all the persons mentioned accepted . . . "Oh, I wonder," said the chairman finally, with a dreamy look in her eye, "if it would be possible to get Mrs. Woodrow Wilson to come?" . . . Nobody seemed to know, and everybody remembered that Mrs. W. has a private telephone number and is difficult to reach. But they all agreed there would be no doubts as to the success of the fete, if she could be persuaded to attend.

Mrs. Woodrow Wilson

Mention of "the Met" a few lines back, and also of Mrs. Wilson, reminds me that she and Mrs. Jesse Jones were in New York together for the Red Cross benefit performance of the Metropolitan opera on Tuesday evening . . . Mrs. Henry Blair entertained at a dinner at the Plaza for Mrs. Wilson and Mrs. Jones before the opera . . . Other Washingtonians on hand for the latter were Miss Mabel Boardman, Norman Davis and Mrs. J. Borden Harriman.

Washington's Best-Known Celebrities Turn Out to Meet Those From Nation's Film Capital

Society Meets Stars Here for President's Birthday Celebration

By Patricia Grady

Washington may be the town of celebrities, but they are certainly the least self-conscious celebrities one could find anywhere. Yesterday they swarmed to the small ballroom of the Willard at the invitation of Mrs. Alben Barkley, Mrs. Walter George and Mrs. Robert La Follette to "meet the stars"—Hollywood celebrities here for the Birthday Ball festivities tonight.

Mrs. Henry Wallace, unmoved by the glamourous personalities around her, impatiently scanned the entrance to the ballroom. "I'm waiting to meet Jimmy Stewart," she announced. 'You know, he looks so much like my son, Bob." And when the uniform-bedecked Mr. Stewart arrived—he was the real sensation of the afternoon—the wife of the Vice President took her place at the end of the queue of those clamoring to meet him. "He's a nice boy," she said, after greeting him, "but not nearly as much like Bob as I thought he would be."

"I'm mad about that Henderson man," enthused Rosalind Russell. Incidentally, she wore a broad-brimmed pink hat swathed in veiling that was the envy of every other less dramatically chapeaued woman in the room. She asked "that Henderson man"—Leon Henderson of bicycle fame—if he would get her some rubber tires. "And he gave me this and told me to conserve it," she laughed, holding up a rubber band that the always-prepared Mr. Henderson had pulled from his pocket.

Both Senator and Mrs. Scott Lucas had a busy afternoon. While Mrs. Lucas was smiling for the cameramen on the arm of Gene Raymond—he was formally dressed in tails for a dinner he was going to in Baltimore last night—Senator Lucas had his hands full getting the autograph book signed which his young son, Scott had intrusted to his care. Senator Lucas got Rosalind Russell's signature when he promised her that in return for it he would have the picture, which was taken of the two of them, introduced into the Congressional Record.

Husbands Fail To Appear

Though none of the husbands of the three hostesses put in an appearance, Mrs. Walter George said that if her Senator-husband, who was home nursing a cold, knew that she was posing for pictures with the genial Pat O'Brien, she was sure he would get out of his sick-bed immediately. Mrs. Thurman Arnold was escorted by her son and had with her, her houseguests, Mr. and Mrs. John Hauer, of Texas. Mrs. Hauer, a recent bride, is Mrs. Arnold's niece and the Assistant Attorney General's wife was taking great delight in seeing that she met the great and near-great of Hollywood and the Capital. "It's wonderful to have someone with you from out-of-town," admitted Mrs. Arnold, "It gives you a chance to insist that you meet the stars without it looking like you're a celebrity-seeker—which of course you are."

J. Edgar Hoover monopolized Dorothy Lamour's attention and devoted a lot of his time to Patricia Morrison. "We're old friends," said Miss Morrison of the head G-man, "I made my first picture in a story he wrote."

"I want to meet Jackie Cooper's wife," volunteered Mrs. Claude Wickard. But when she was assured that so far as was known the young Mr. Cooper was still a bachelor, she whispered, "I was thinking of Mickey Rooney, but don't tell my daughter, Ann, that I got them mixed up. She'd never forgive me." Mrs. Wickard went on to reminisce that at last year's birthday ball, Ann had given her an autograph book to have signed by the stars. "I was afraid to ask them," she confessed, "but I told Jesse Jones about it and he took the book around and had everyone sign it."

Club Roundup

Mrs. Moore Is Prompt 'Answerer;' Clubs in Occupied Countries 'Carry On'

DYNAMIC Mrs. T. V. Moore, of Miami, Fla., has one cardinal principle—she never lets a letter get cold on her desk. Her mail is answered the day it arrives.

"If there's any delay, it's on the other side," said the alert extension secretary for foreign and territorial clubs of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, who was in town last week for the federation's four-day conference.

Since the war started, Mrs. Moore has written to all the foreign and territorial clubs of the federation except those in Germany and Japan.

MRS. T. V. MOORE

"Not a chance," she remarked, "of getting answers from those two countries."

With emphasis on relief and wartime work, the clubs in Athens, Greece, are still going strong. In fact, members have trebled their war efforts, according to Mrs. Moore.

Word from Oslo, Stockholm and Copenhagen reveals that the clubs in the occupied countries are "carrying on." The club in Copenhagen was organized in Ruth Bryan Owen's home, when she was United States Minister to that country, according to Mrs. Moore.

And despite the impending threat of a Japanese invasion, the Federation of Women's Clubs in Sydney, Australia, continues to gather at 5 for a cup of tea and linger until 9 for intensive defense work.

Down in Kingston, Jamaica, the American branch of the General Federation of Women's Clubs has built and bought a new blub house since the war started. "The Buenos Aires club also has moved into new headquarters. That club's motto is stay normal as long as possible," said Mrs. Moore.

In discussing the part that club women play in building up friendships in foreign countries, Mrs. Moore said "where women are friends, men do not fight."

Mrs. Davidson Elected

IF Mrs. Richard Porter Davidson has her way, Opportunity House will be the most active settlement house in the District defense program.

Elected president of Opportunity House last night at a special meeting of the officers and board of directors, Mrs. Davidson succeeds Arthur Clarendon Smith, who recently resigned the post.

MRS. RICHARD PORTER DAVIDSO

Mrs. Davidson reports that already at Opportunity House a number of classes are in progress—knitting, sewing, cooking, home-making, etc. Also, there are formative plans for a day nursery, classes in carpentry and science. Nine voluntary teachers have joined the staff since Mrs. Davidson went on active duty at the house.

Before taking over the work at Opportunity House, she worked diligently with the A. W. V. S., having set up and run the information desk for them ten months.

Granddaughter of the late Mark A. Hanna and the niece of Ruth Hanna McCormick Simms, Mrs. Davidson is remembered in Washington as Betty Hanna. That was previous to her marriage to Maj. Richard Porter Davidson. Once she was very active with child welfare, running successfully a large clinic in the Northeast section.

For four years, Mrs. Davidson ran 48 hot soup kitchens for the underprivileged children in Moore County, N. C. Up on her farm in New York State she continued her work for underprivileged children.

Welles Congratulated

DON'T give up, Mr. Sumner Welles! The Washington women are backing your able work at the Rio de Janeiro conference. Only yesterday, Mrs. Thomas Burke, Latin-American chairman of the Peoples' Mandate Committee, and Miss Mabel Vernon, director, cabled you congratulations.

If the cable delivery boy found you, you've read already this congratulatory message:

"The Peoples' Mandate Committee is deply gratified and encouraged by the reported agreement between Peru and Ecuador. Believing adherence to the principle of peaceful settlement is essential to the advancement of Pan-Americanism, we appreciate the great service which has been rendered by the National Mediation Commission. We trust complete adjustment may be speedily consummated. To you and those who have won this victory for American principles, we extend our congratulations and thanks."

Thors to Speak

THE Minister of Iceland, Thor Thors—he will make the speech of the day—and Mme. Thors will be guests of honor at the Newspaper Women's Club tea, Tuesday, at 5 p. m. in the Clubrooms, 1604 Twentieth Street Northwest.

Other special guests will be the Danish Minister and Mme. de Kauffman and Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, former American Minister to Norway.

Mrs. Kriel to Speak

MRS. WALTER KRIEL, State president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs of Maryland, has accepted an invitation to be the guest speaker of the Silver Spring Woman's Club at its meeting Wednesday. For the present, Mrs. R. C. Jacobson, assistant publicity chairman, will handle all news for the club.

To N. Y. for Parley

OFF TO New York to attend a conference of the Birth Control Federation of America on "Planned Parenthood, U. S. A." are Dr. Dorothy Boulding, Mrs. Prentiss Wilson, Mrs. Montgomery Blair and Mrs. Lester Buchanan, board member of the Washington Mother's Health Association. Also, Dr. Agnes McNutt and Mrs. Bernice Wickam.

A. A. U. W. to Gather

Coming from all sections of the United States, the women comprising the national board of the American Association of University Women will meet at their national headquarters here from tomorrow until Wednesday.

Their deliberations will center on the role of university women in the supreme national crisis: the immediate needs of woman power for the essential branches of national service—military, industrial and civilian; the facilities to prepare members to meet such of these as will contribute more decisively to victory and the establishment of a just and lasting peace.

D. A. R. Board Meeting

Although 1000 new members were approved at the recent meeting of the national board of the Daughters of the American Revolution, a special board meeting for the admission of members has been called for Monday, Mrs. William H. Pouch, president general, announced today.

The huge number taken in recently came from applications covering a period of only two months, Mrs. Pouch pointed out. Hundreds of additional applications are flooding Washington headquarters of the society, it was stated. Of the number admitted were new members from every State in the Union, with 51 from California, 41 from the District of Columbia, 28 from Georgia, 64 from Illinois, 49 from Indiana, 37 from Kansas, 43 from Michigan, 43 from Massachusetts, 96 from New York, 16 from Washington State, 53 from Texas, 34 from Kentucky, 21 from Louisiana, 22 from Mississippi, 37 from Ohio and an approximate representation from each of the remaining States.

A regular meeting of the board of management will be held Tuesday.

Doings of the Day

MRS. WILLIAM O. DOUGLAS, wife of the Justice of the Supreme Court, is guest speaker on the radio program, "What's Right With Washington," sponsored by the Washington Council of Church Women. Choosing as her subject, "Finding Employment for the Handicapped People of Washington," Mrs. Douglas will be heard over WWDC at 12:30 o'clock. Just as a matter of policy, Mrs. Henry A. Wallace doesn't accept any invitations to pour tea—she's asked by too many clubs and friends—so the Y. W. C. A. will provide a substitute to preside over the tea table at their reception from 4 to 6, honoring Mrs. Lawrence H. Shepard, newly appointed secretary of the Washington Y. W. C. A. However, Mrs. Henry Olivah Strong and Mrs. Bancroft Davis will be on hand to assist at the tea table. The Art and Archaeology League of Washington presents exhibit of marionettes, 8:15 o'clock at Gunston Hall.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

½ Million More Join Retirement System

The half million Federal workers who will be brought into the Civil Service retirement system by the new Ramspeck - Mead Act already have started to pay for the privilege. A deduction of 3½ per cent from their pay checks has been made effective January 24, the day the President signed the bill. On July 1, the deduction will jump to 5 per cent for the million and a half employes who will then be covered by the system. To give agencies time to get replacements for employes who are 70 and over and who are eligible to retire under the act, an executive order probably will be issued extending the compulsory retirement date.

Immigration and Naturalization Service already has started its move to Philadelphia. Several truckloads of files left yesterday . . . Public Buildings won't get the new temporary building "T" at Fourteenth and Constitution Avenue. The building was given to the War Department after PBA was all packed up and ready to move . . . PBA won't be moved either to the building under construction at Suitland, Md. Navy already has been assigned the structure . . . Edward Cooper, a friend of Senator Wheeler who has been working with his Senate Interstate Commerce Committee, has been appointed assistant secretary of Federal Communications Commission.

Two of the most mild-mannered and shy officials in the Federal service were World War I aces. They are Charles Fahy, the Solicitor General, and Robert A. Lovett, the Assistant Secretary of War for air. Both men were members of the first American squadron that bombed the Germans in World War I. They were efficient flyers in those days—they had to be—and today they are generally placed in that little group of top Federal administrators. Lovett is immensely wealthy but when he came here more than a year ago he severed all his business relations and now he draws a Federal pay check twice a month like any other Federal worker.

Handicap Overcome

A one-armed stenographer, who passed a Civil Service exam, is looking for a Federal job. She should be placed as she can operate a typewriter with one hand better than most people can with two . . . More than a million persons have been placed in War and Navy departments alone since the emergency by the Civil Service Commission . . . Treasury's division of Foreign Funds Control has set up a school to train boys and girls how to be stenographers. It is in the Printcraft Building.

SUGGESTION FOR UNCLE SAM: The employe who is being transferred from Washington with a decentralized agency is entitled to travel first class on a railroad from Washington to the new location at Government expense. But Uncle Sam won't pay transportation costs of members of the employe's family or any other dependents. While the employe travels first class, members of his family will probably have to get to such places as Chicago and St. Louis the best way they can. So here's the suggestion, since the Government won't pay transportation costs of dependents, it should give the employe an amount in cash equal to the first-class transportation rate. The employe then would be able to spend that amount any way he chooses.

Archibald MacLeish has demonstrated his belief in freedom of the press despite the fact that he considers some articles "unfair and unjustified." The C. I. O.'s United Federal Workers of America publishes a news letter at his Library of Congress. Several days ago this letter carried a vicious attack on a Library official. The union found him "wholly unsatisfactory" to deal with. Luther H. Evans, acting librarian, forbade distribution of the letter in the library after he read the attack.

MacLeish made Evans revoke his order, explaining that "I am certain that their (the employes) sense of justice will not permit them to accept as true, unfair and unjustified attacks on their colleagues." The librarian went on to say that there are the "most compelling reasons for assuring the freest possible circulation of opinion, both critical and otherwise, at this time." The union has been invited to confer with Evans.

Getting Away From War

A Washington woman recently had heard so much about war she took up bridge and then attended a bridge tournament. Overhearing a conversation in which Churchill was mentioned, she thought of S. Garton Churchill, famous bridge expert. She eavesdropped to get some pointers. Imagine her feelings when she learned they were talking about the Prime Minister.

He Understood Only Too Well

An underworld character, known to police as a pickpocket, walked into police headquarters here. "Understand you're looking for me. Well, I know the town's 'hot,' so I want to let you know I'm here on personal business only." Impersonal dectectives personally escorted him to the first outgoing train.

War Curbs Joys of Graduation

D. C. Exercises Will End Today; Many Uncertain As to Future Plans

Washington's first high school students in almost a quarter of a century to be graduated amid wartime conditions yesterday received diplomas as the District's senior and junior high schools began mid-year commencement exercises which will be concluded today.

The uncertain future ahead of the boys who received their diplomas from the senior high schools curbed to some extent the joyousness always associated with commencement and was evident in their plans for future educational activities. Many of them, approaching draft age, were undecided whether to continue their education.

Some of the schools held brief exercises, influenced no doubt by the spirit of the times; others went ahead with the customary commencement program replete with speakers, musical flourishes and light interludes.

Anacostia High

Eastern High

Betty Ruth Amer delivered the valedictory address for the 164 students who received diplomas from Eastern High School at morning exercises presided over by Bernard Charles Boswell, president of the graduating class. Special awards were presented by Principal Charles Hart and the seniors received their diplomas from Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, president of the board of education. Honor students announced at the exercises included Miss Amer, Evelyn Emilan Barrick, Lois Winifred Heinzman, Doris Jeanne Jones, Jeanette Karp, Regina Maria Maio, Norma Patricia Schmidt and Wanda Claude Watkins.

Jefferson Junior High

Tops among the 95 students who received certificates of graduation from Jefferson Junior High School last night was Gladys Schwab, the class valedictorian. Other honor students were Robert C. Lawrence, Virginia E. Beach, Rose Belmont, Emma P. Moy, Virginia Moy, Pauline Pincus, Dorothy E. Scherr, Miriam Simony, George Blake, Edward Stacy Fritter, John Masarick, Charles H. Seek, Catherine O. Faunce, Alexander Antwarg, Sidney Atkin, Raymond L. Cogswell, William O. Green, jr., Morris H. Kolker, John R. Lokey, William L. Weddington, Irma L. Witten, Mike J. Pappafotis, Josephine Corman, Lorraine Mamakos, Sally E. Maupin, Jo C. Rose, Betty D. Stone and Larry Prosice. Class officers were R. L. Cogswell, president; M. J. Pappafotis, vice president, and W. L. Weddington, secretary-treasurer.

Anacostia Junior High

"The Significance of Liberty in America" was the theme of the commencement program at Anacostia Junior High School which yesterday afternoon awarded diplomas to 66 students. Special awards were presented by Principal John Paul Collins, and Dr. Carroll R. Read, first assistant superintendent of schools, handed out the diplomas. Valedictorian was Norman Marshall Sawyer and other honor graduates were Nancy Noble and Evelyn Marion Stefanek. The class officers are Walter Clifford Bunyea, president; Virginia Elizabeth Cowan, vice president; Vivian Leona Armentrout, secretary, and Gloria Lavenia Jarboe, treasurer.

Eliot Junior High

Eliot Junior High School awarded diplomas to 106 graduates, but did not select a valedictorian. Three honor students were designated, however: Jane Graham, Jane B. Payne and Charles F. Dettor. Class officers are Rocco A. Colandreo, president; Shirley L. Miller, vice president, and Shirley M. Orr, secretary-treasurer. The commencement program was held at 2 o'clock.

Gordon Junior High

Neither of the graduating classes at Gordon or Hine Junior High Schools had officers. The former school graduated 104 students and the latter awarded diplomas to 84, both during afternoon exercises.

Langley Junior High

Margaret T. Ford was the valedictorian of the class of 88 students who were graduated yesterday afternoon from Langley Junior High School. Other honor students were Betty B. Miller, G. Jean Taylor, Patricia L. Joyce, Mary G. Reggie, Eleanor L. Tersi, William D. Crockett, Eric F. Rhodes, Gale M. Grant, Audrey L. Hill, Barbara J. Manzon, Patricia I. Prince, Elizabeth J. Talbott, Leon I. Maxson, jr., and Roberta J. Robinson. Class officers were W. D. Crockett, president; Barbara Manzon, vice president; Patricia Joyce, secretary, and David M. Trump, treasurer.

The graduating class, of which Ina Friedman was valedictorian, included 150 students with these officers: S. L. Berlinsky, president; Mary Ann Spicer, vice president; Dorothy Faye Brenneman, secretary, and Doris Jeannette Volland, treasurer.

Stuart Junior High

William H. McColley, who was valedictorian of the graduating class of 97 students at Stuart Junior High School, also received the D. A. R. award for boys at yesterday afternoon's exercises. Castro Performs Brilliantly As Symphony Guest Conductor

Pan American Union presents the National Symphony Orchestra on Thursday night in a concert conducted by Juan Jose Castro, with Marisa Regules as soloist. Program: Three Chorale-Preludes (Bach-Castro), Variations Symphoniques (Franck), An Outdoor Overture (Copland), Arrabal from Sinfonia Argentina (Castro), La Huella and El Gato (Aguirre-Anermet), Ballet Suite from Panambi (Ginastera).

A compliment to the Republic of Argentina was paid by the Pan American Union last evening when the distinguished Argentine composer, Juan Jose Castro, was presented in the Hall of the Americas as conductor of the National Symphony Orchestra in a special concert for a capacity audience of invited guests. An Argentine also was the talented piano soloist, Marisa Regules, and part of the program was devoted to compositions from the same country by Senor Castro, Julian Aguirre and Alberto Ginastera. In the musical offerings Aaron Copland represented the United States and the European composers were John Sebastian Bach and Cesar Franck. Whether one regards it from the viewpoint of performance or material, it was the best concert ever given at the Union.

BROWN

Juan Jose Castro is a conductor with a podium manner well compounded of authority and energy, of poise and emotional fire. He conducts not as an academician, but as a highly sensitized musician with an instinct for both rhythm and color. So alert is his sense of movement and form that one cannot imagine him giving a perfunctory or dull reading of any work. He does not stand outside the music, but inhabits it. His quality as a composer was first disclosed in his excellent transcriptions of three Bach chorale preludes, instrumented with a fine perception of color values and dynamic masses.

Marisa Regules gave a brilliant performance of Franck's "Variations Symphoniques" in matters of fleetness, power and interpretation. She has surety on the keyboard and a command of piano sonority, together with rhythmic flexibility and impetuosity. She was accorded prolonged applause which ceased only when she played a dance by Senor Castro as an extra number.

The second part of the program began with Aaron Copland's breezy and boisterous "Outdoor Overture," which has his characteristic verve. It epitomizes the holiday spirit of a crowd at a picnic or a circus, and the themes have a folk feeling.

"Arrabal," from the "Sinfonia Argentina," made one wish to hear more of Senor Castro's own music, for the excerpt was tantalizing with hints of his imaginative resources and his versatility. This movement has an elemental fervor akin to Stravinski's "Le Sacre du Printemps" and invokes much the same atmosphere with its incisive and propulsive rhythms, while there is a lyric interlude suggesting a poetic potency in the composer.

Of lighter content were Julian Aguirre's "La Huella" and "El Gato," piano pieces orchestrated by Ernest Ansermet with scintillant effect. They have piquances of rhythm and melodic tangs in their brief compass.

The concert closed with four numbers from Alberto Ginastera's ballet, "Panambi," which won the Teatro Colon prize not long ago. Only 24 years old, Ginastera is the focus of many hopes in his native land, and one understands why much is expected from him when one listens to this sample of his quality. His orchestration has brightness and bite, variety of color and vitality of movement. His use of native phraseology is neat and well placed, and he has a flair for the subtleties of rhythmic effect.

Citizens Fight 'Drafting' of Kramer High

Fort Davis Group Holds Anacostia Needs School More Than U. S. Does

Emphatically declaring all available school space in Anacostia is needed for educational purposes, members of the Fort Davis Citizens Association last night opposed a proposal that the Federal Government take over the Kramer Junior High School now under construction.

A resolution to this effect was introduced by Robert Swain, who pointed out that schools in that area are already operating under double shifts, all schools are crowded, particularly the Anacostia Junior-Senior High School, which the Kramer School, would relieve.

Astonished by Proposal

Members expressed themselves as frankly astonished at reports published in yesterday's papers that the District Commissioners had offered the projected Kramer School, now only 15 per cent completed, to the Federal Government for war work. They also reviewed with dismay a situation in which the school for which they have worked so arduously is at the moment frozen in priorities.

They applauded the stand of Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, who opposed the proposal to divert the building from its intended use.

In other resolutions last night the members indorsed the three-token-for-a-quarter proposal before the Public Utilities Commission; asked for a sidewalk on the west side of Alabama Avenue on Fort Davis Park; traffic stop signs on Alabama Avenue at Pennsylvania.

Conduit Road

Bus and streetcar passengers have increased 70 per cent here since June, 1940, the Conduit Road Citizens Association was told last night by E. D. Merrill, president and general manager of Capital Transit Co.

During the same period, Merrill said, streetcars and buses have been increased by 35 per cent. He added that the firm has ordered 500 new vehicles, and is expecting delivery by the middle of the summer.

Walter D. Cunyus, deputy air-raid warden, reported satisfactory progress in the area civilian defense activities. Two new committee chairmen were chosen: Grady P. Oakley, police, and R. H. Blatter, fire. Mr. and Mrs. R. G. Hudson were inducted into membership.

Time of His Life

Thief Caught With 3 Clocks On His Hands

When a 39-year-old man wakes up today, he probably will wish he never had seen an alarm clock.

Yet, last night, he had such a yen for them that he couldn't resist taking them from a counter in a drugstore at Thomas Circle Northwest.

In fact, he made three trips.

The first time he entered the store, he left with a clock, without paying for it.

He came back and left with another.

The third time, the manager and police were waiting for him.

He picked up another clock but he didn't leave with it.

He was taken to the Second Precinct Station and charged with being drunk.

Cafes to Save Sugar by Cutting Out Free 'Seconds' on Coffee

TOUGH ON THE SWEET TOOTH—Adelaide Pohlen, restaurant operator, informs Watson Rulan that he is allowed but one teaspoonful of sugar for his cup of coffee

The old free-and-easy days with ample sugar bowls and the luxury of that free second cup of coffee for restaurant patrons are over as far as the Washington Restaurant Association is concerned.

Meeting the last three days for a special course in food conservation, the restaurateurs have decided to take all sugar bowls off their tables and serve but one spoonful of sugar to a cup of coffee.

If the customer wants a second cup of coffee he will have to pay for it, because the second cup would require a second spoonful of the precious energy-food.

These decisions were made at the suggestion of George Wenzel, lecturer for the American Menu Makers Service, Inc., as a means of meeting the tight sugar-supply situation created by impending sugar rationing.

To ration the supply equitably, Wenzel suggested that waitresses be instructed to ladle the sugar out to each customer, or give the customer a paper sack containing the right amount of sugar or an already molded single lump of sugar.

Wenzel said this rationing would preserve the restaurants' quota of sugar because most of the sugar consumed by restaurants eventually winds up in tea or coffee.

Other marks of the Washington restaurant scene which probably will become things of the past before long are richly glazed doughnuts, the icing on French apple pie, and other rich desserts. Some restaurants are even thinking of eliminating deserts entirely, Wenzel said.

In his course, Wenzel also suggested that restaurateurs might eliminate baking soda in cooking vegetables, to preserve their vitamin content in the interest of defense, cut down meat shrinkage by low-temperature cooking, preserve fats by preparing French fried potatoes in hot shortening so that they can be cooked quickly.

Meanwhile, a prospect of relief for sugar consumers was held out yesterday by two members of President Roosevelt's Cabinet.

Claude R. Wickard, Secretary of Agriculture said that an increase in the production of sugar "is hoped for" this year to relieve the shortage which has resulted from hoarding, from supplying the United Nations, and from the cutting off of Philippine supplies.

Harold L. Ickes, Secretary of the Interior, predicted a substantial increase in Caribbean sugar production and indicated he would ask the President to lift quota restrictions for United States territories and island possessions.

Puerto Rico could eventually provide 1,500,000 tons a year if all restrictions were removed, according to a release of the Interior Department on the subject.

GHA Finishes Year With $4651 On Credit Side

Group Health Association, a cooperative medical care plan for Federal employes, announced yesterday that it finished 1941 with $4651 on the credit side from a gross income of approximately $220,000.

Dr. Mario Scandiffio, medical director, reported that the clinic staff had 33 full-time employes at the close of the year, 14 of whom were physicians.

Cameron G. Garman, retiring president, emphasized that G. H. A. "had maintained a sound financial position while at the same time providing an increased volume of services to members and raising basic salaries of employes from 20 to 25 per cent."

Laundries Plan to Save Tires, Gas

Two-Way Campaign Outlined Involving Rerouting and Public Education

A double-barrelled campaign to save tires and gasoline for the "duration" has been launched by Washington laundries, Robert J. Seidel, public relations counsel of the Laundry Dry Cleaning Owners Association of the District, announced yesterday.

First phase of the campaign which is already in effect involves rearranging routes, enforcement of a daily mileage maximum on each truck and equipment of trucks with speed regulators and governors to guard against wearing out tires prematurely by fast driving.

Second phase of the program will be announced to laundry customers in a newspaper advertising campaign to be started Monday, Seidel said.

Seidel stated that the educational program is important in view of the threatened break-down in laundry service which may develop if laundries do not receive adequate priority ratings on truck tires. A breakdown in deliveries would be a serious public health-problem, he said.

The advertisements will make the following five pleas for public cooperation:

1. Housewives should place calls for service 24 hours in advance to enable routes to be planned with a view to mileage economy.
2. Bundles should be ready when the routeman calls so that unnecessary idling of motors is eliminated.
3. Complaints should be telephoned to the laundry office to save the routeman's time.
4. All of the family wash should be sent at one time on a set day each week, thus eliminating needless trips.
5. Calls-back and calls for special delivery service should be eliminated.

D. C. Man Convicted In New Mexico Oil Case

Albuquerque, N. Mex., Jan. 29 (AP). L. B. Houf, of Wichita, Kans., and Harry F. May, of Washington, D. C., were convicted by a Federal jury today of using the mails to defraud Florida purchasers in the sale of New Mexico oil and gas leases.

Federal Judge Colin Neblett deferred sentence. Both defendants denied the charges.

—With Shirley Povich

Have a care, there, how you toss around that old bromide about a Chinaman's chance. It is no longer the perfect disparagement of the possibilities. This year of grace, 1942, finds a Chinaman with a chance to play ball in the big leagues and—take it from the Boston Braves—not a Chinaman's chance, either.

POVICH

He's Ping-Ho, known to the Braves' front office as George Ho, and he's an outfielder. After the Braves' scouting staff had surveyed the New York semipro field last summer, they picked the boy as the likeliest big league prospect in the territory. They rate him well enough already to move him directly to their Hartford Club in the Class A Eastern League.

Step right up and meet George Ho. The Chinese Ambassador did, yesterday, gave him an autographed portrait and wished him luck in his baseball career. George is an open-faced Chinese lad, bigger than the usual mold and the first cocky Chinaman we've ever known. Or maybe he was only showing the proper spirit when we asked him how he stood in the Army draft, seeing as how he is an American citizen, 21, and eligible.

"I will probably get an officer's commission to be an American flier when my mother is no longer dependent on my baseball salary," said George. "I would like a crack at those Japs," said George.

Did he have any army training or know anything about aviation?

"What's the difference?" he said. "You don't need any training to dust off those Japs."

GEORGE HO

Ping-Ho played his first baseball on the Brooklyn sandlots before moving with his parents into the heart of New York's Chinatown, where his dad was secretary of the On Leon Tong. It was when he was banging semipro pitching for extra base hits last summer that Boston scouts in the vicinity were reminded of the Braves' own weak- hitting and began to vision aid from China in the form of the stocky Chinatown lad.

They called him to Boston last month to sign his contract but they forgot to guarantee him safe return to New York. The date was December 8, the day following Pearl Harbor, and on a New York-bound train at New Haven, repercussions of that bombing caught up with George-Ho. A burly policeman put the grab on him, led him off the train as a suspicious Japanese.

"They put me away in the clink," said George, who tossed American slang around like the kids on the next block, "and I had an awful time trying to prove I was a Chinaman, not a Jap. That cop wouldn't believe me and said I was a Jap if he ever saw one, and I had to spend the night in the cooler. I showed him the clippings from the Boston papers where I had signed a contract with the Braves but the cops said it looked like a Japanese trick. They wouldn't let me go until Charles Bossfield, the Hartford manager, identified me, and they were still suspicious when they let me out."

George Ho doesn't have even dim memories of South Canton, China, where he was born. He was four years old when the Ho's took their little family to America. But he understands why there were probably no Chinese ball players before him. "Chinese children don't have any toys that even look like balls. In China, they have nothing that rolls. Only blocks and reeds and poppycock birds and such things as nature can give them. Chinese children are too concerned with getting their bellies a little bit full and having a place to sleep away from the elements. There's no money for store toys."

He broke down willingly to confess that George isn't his real name. "There's no Chinese name for George. When my mother had a manchild, that's me, my father wanted an American name for me. He saw in an American newspaper the picture of King George V of England and he said I would be as handsome as the King, so he named me George. My Chinese name is Ping-Ho. In China, Ping means powerful. For a Chinaman, I am powerful. Five feet nine and 165 pounds."

Washington was merely a stop-off on George's trip to Richmond, Va. He's got a girl down there, a Chinese girl named May Woo, with whom he's smitten. He produced her picture, and with justifiable pride, because she is an eyeful in any feminine society. "She's my best girl," said George. "Pretty, huh? She's China's Lana Turner. I like her Southern accent, too."

On the Line

—With CONSIDINE

New York, Jan. 29 (INS).—What's on your mind?

BOXING?—Ever look at a guy and say to yourself, "nothing but hard luck could possibly happen to a bloke like that"? That's Gus Lesnevich. The lightheavyweight champ, who fights Bob Pastor tomorrow night for a crack at Joe Louis' title, still has the apologetic unctiousness of a ham and egger.

CONSIDINE

His title suggests that he's the best 175-pound fist fighter in the world. But his pocketbook, his seamy air and the awful breaks he gets yell loudly that he's just another unlucky stiff. He the kind of guy whose first name is usually preceded by the adjective poor.

A few years ago when life came back into the 175-pound division, and there was a buck or two to be made after the long drought, Lesnevich was in Australia, and not doing too well, either. He came back just in time to meet Billy Conn after Billy got good, and he took a beating in a poorly attended fight. But in his plodding way he put up a good enough battle to warrant a rematch. The rematch was scheduled for Miami. Conn came down with boils. Then it was scheduled for Detroit. Driving into Detroit with borrowed dough, in a borrowed car, Lesnevich heard on his borrowed car radio that the fight had been called off again.

After that he was in a car accident that killed one of the passengers and took what little dough he and his stout but not very stylish manager, Lew Diamond, could scrape together. Conn licked him finally in a fight that didn't draw even the deadheads. In his next two fights, poor Gus cracked up his hands so badly he was in dry dock for eight months. He came back to beat Tami Mauriello in a match that made him the 175-pound champ. But even this, his great moment, had its drawbacks. A torrential downpour kept the customers away in droves, and he hardly made expenses. And when Harry Balogh lingered fondly over the final announcement, like a man rolling a good cognac over his tongue, the crowd thought Mauriello was the "Winnah and Neeyew champiyun." When it turned out to be poor Gus, they booed him dizzy.

Now, as he tries to branch out into the heavyweight division, where the dough is, he runs into a nasty little snarl which may see his title sorely tarnished if he loses, even though the title isn't at stake tomorrow night. For Pastor is threatening to come in against him light enough so that he can put in a verbal claim on Gus' Ersatz crown if he wins. You think you've got troubles?

BASKETBALL?—Gigantic West Texas State's defeat at the hands of Long Island University on Wednesday night produced as thrilling a sports event as a fellow could hope to see. The score, 58-56, the fact that there was an extra period, and the fact that the winning basket was scored spectacularly with three seconds left of that extra period, give you a hint as to the hectic goings-on at the jammed garden.

Ned Irish's biggest crowd of the season, 18,117, sat in on the terrific contest, and in the perpetual din it was difficult to distinguish between the piercing yips of the undergrads and the hoarse squawks of the pasty-faced Broadway gamblers who have suddenly and generously granted this 50-year-old American game their patronage.

Texas lost, presumably to the better club. But we'd go to see those elongated Southwesterners every night in the week. Their incredible size alone is a lure, but it tells only a portion of their story.

RACING?—Jack Fitzgerald, veteran racing authority, writes from Florida that the season there has been "unbelievably good," though hotels, night clubs and business concerns down there are wringing their hands in anguish. Business is supposed to be off from 20 per cent to 30 per cent—but more sugar is being fed into the hungry maw of the Hialeah "Tote." Maybe there's a connection there.

Market Wise has burned up a lot of favorite players' money in his first two 1942 starts. But he's coming along, Fritz says, and shapes up as the early choice for the $50,000 Widener. War Relic, another conqueror of Whirlaway, isn't far behind Market Wise in training. Challedon and Pictor haven't looked like much, and not too much is expected of Mioland and Porter's Cap, except by Charley Howard, who shipped them across the country from Santa Anita the day he learned there was no hope of opening that California show-place (but few wins) this season.

Fits rates Alsab and Bless Me as doubtful starters in the Flamingo. Al Sabath has his heart set on winning the Derby, and wants to take no chances with his $700 wonder horse. Col. Bradley's colt is a little on the lame side.

Men Outscore Women Riders at Fort Myer

Hughes' Black Caddy Tops Wife's Hi-Ho On 'Scurry' Course; Whitney Hack Wins

By Anne Hagner

Setting an unbeatable pace with three clean performances in a row, the team of gentlemen riders sponsored by The Post captured the men versus women jumping competition of the President's Birthday Horse Show in the Fort Myer Riding Hall last night.

Low scorer for the evenings of the show and winner of the $25 defense bond offered by The Post, was Samuel E. Bogley, Maryland rider, with Ringmaster, whose faultless round last night, coupled with only two faults in the opening session, outpointed his teammates for the added prize.

Other members of the quartet were Maj. F. H. Jayne, of the British imperial army attached to the embassy staff here, on the United States Government's High Time; Maj. Charles B. MacLellan, jr., whose Smacko turned in a great performance, and Gordon Wright, famed New York horseman who rode Mrs. Elizabeth Correll's Lew Dunbar, of Scarsdale, N. Y., for a clean score.

Mrs. Hughes' Score Perfect

On the women's team, Mrs. Fred J. Hughes, jr., was low scorer with a perfect score, while Mrs. W. Haggin Perry on Thunderboy, Margaret Cotter on Rocksie and Sara Bosley on Prince Tex earned a total of seven faults, making their total for the two nights 20 to the gentlemen's 12½.

Lieut. Hughes, whose Black Caddy was a member of the winning team on the opening night of the show, bowed out when his temperamental stallion took a serious dislike to one of the broad fences in the ring.

A 4-year-old friendly battle for honors blossomed into a family affair for the first time last night as Lieut. Hughes' Black Caddy whirled around the difficult "scurry" course in the sensational time of 29.1 seconds to defeat Mrs. Hughes Hi-Ho before 2,000 spectators.

Although Lieut. and Mrs. Hughes were opponents in hundreds of show rings prior to their marriage last June, this is the first time they have met in real competition since that time.

Hi-Ho's performance had society and sporting folk yelling with excitement as she almost flew over the eight big fences, but a bigger treat was in store for them as Lieut. Hughes, saving his round for late in the class, cut corners and twisted with such amazing agility that he knocked 2 seconds off his young wife's time.

Ring Is Crowded

Forty-one road hacks answered the call for the walk-trot-canter class, and the ring was so filled with horseflesh that the temporary paddock was removed to give them room to spread out. First went to Mrs. M. E. (Liz) Whitney on her grand little hack, Cherry Bounce, who went with typical brilliance to win the trophy over Springsbury Farm's Highland Ace. Mr. and Mrs. W. Haggin Perry's Ragnarock was third with Edward Hall's 4-year-old hunter prospect, Recruit fourth.

Again in the green jumper's outing, so many horses turned up that it seemed the class might stretch on into the dawning, but Capt. David Wagstaff's remount horse, Rum-

Willie Hoppe Honored by Philly Writers

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Jan. 29.—Willie Hoppe, world three-cushion billiard champion, was named the "most courageous athlete of 1941" tonight at the thirty-eighth annual banquet of the Philadelphia Sporting Writers Association.

Nearly 1000 guests cheered the perrenial titleholder as he accepted the plaque.

Capt. Colin P. Kelly, jr., Army aviator, who gave his life to sink a Japanese battleship during the early days of the war, was honored posthumously when the writers voted a special association "award for valor" in his name.

The New York Yankee's Joe DiMaggio received the association's award for the "outstanding athlete of 1941."

Toastmaster Cy Peterman, of the Inquirer, announced Hoppe was chosen for the top award for his achievement in fighting off an attack of pneumonia during the 1941 world's championship tournament and going on to win the title.

Col. John Thomas Taylor, representing the United States Army public relations office, accepted the award for valor in Kelly's name.

A roar of applause swept through the banquet room as DiMaggio stepped up to receive his plaque.

Sports stars by the dozens and officers of all branches of the armed forces attended.

Breadon Raps Twilight Ball On Behalf of 'Little Woman'

Cards' Boss Says 'Mom' Would Not Like Late Games; Favors 14 Under Lights

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, Jan. 29.—Sam Breadon, a gentleman with consideration for the little lady who leans over a hot stove all day, is convinced "Mom" won't like twilight baseball.

She isn't going to have dinner ready at 4 or 5 o'clock, Sam says, and she isn't going to be toiling in the kitchen holding the evening meal until 8:30 or 9 o'clock either.

"I can't see where twilight games would go here at all," the president of the St. Louis Cardinals asserted today.

"What time would you start the game? Four o'clock? That wouldn't do and it really wouldn't be a twilight game. And a late start like that would delay dinner far past the usual hour. The housewife would object to that.

"If you'd start the games at 5 or 6 o'clock the fans wouldn't have time to get home for dinner before the game. If they waited until after the game, the kitchen would be kept busy until 9 or 10. Can you imagine the uproar that would cause in our homes?"

Breadon believes that 14 night games for each club will take care of the situation without resort to twilight contests. He is not in favor of more than 14 games under the lights, however, because he fears the attendance won't hold up.

Service Men To See Yankee Games Free

By the Associated Press

New York, Jan. 29.—The New York Yankees announced tonight that they would admit service men in uniform free to all their games next season.

"Regardless of what other clubs may do, soldiers, sailors and Marines will be admitted free to Yankee Stadium during the coming season on any day they may desire, whether it is a weekday, Saturday, Sunday or a holiday," said President Edward G. Barrow.

As far as was known, the Yankees were the first major league club to announce this sweeping policy. Last year service men were admitted in groups by special arrangement.

In Pittsburgh, William E. Benswanger, president of the National League Pirates said:

"We will go along with some such plan. Just what it will be I cannot say now because we haven't had opportunity to make a thorough study. But we let the boys in during the last war and we will do so again."

Geo. Washington Meets Virginia, St. John's Next

Coach Bill Reinhart is currently engaged in grabbing his George Washington courtmen whenever they are free from examinations for a little practice in preparation for the Colonials' next two tests, Virginia at Charlottesville next Tuesday and St. John's of New York in Madison Square Garden February 9.

The G. W. five has been idle since the Maryland game last Saturday in which they clinched the Metropolitan Washington college court championship by the early date of January 24.

The Colonials look to be much better than Virginia on paper and are looking beyond the Cavaliers to their annual date with the Johnnies. The game will give Matt Zunic, one of the District's outstanding ball players of all time, an opportunity to carry his bid for All-American honors before the New York sports writers. Matt, who is averaging nearly 18 points a game against classy opposition, has already earned flowery phrases through the Near East and South.

Louise Suggs Upset Victim In Miami Golf

By the Associated Press

Miami, Fla., Jan. 29.—Georgia Tainter, attractive Fargo, N. Dak., lass, gave the dope bucket a mild beating today by ousting Louise Suggs, of Lithia Springs, Ga., Southern women's champion, in the semifinals of the Miami Biltmore Tournament.

Miss Tainter, regarded from the beginning as the only player with much chance to halt Miss Suggs short of the finals, won, 4 and 3. She played the first nine in 36, one over women's par, to take a three-up lead that Miss Suggs was never able to overcome. Miss Suggs had a 41 on the front nine.

Miss Tainter's opponent in tomorrow's 36-hole final will be Dorothy Kirby, Georgia State champion from Atlanta. Miss Kirby played the steadiest golf of the day while winning her semifinal match from Mrs. George Wilcox, of Miami, 7 and 6.

The Atlanta player rattled off a string of seven 4s that left Mrs. Wilcox little chance. Miss Kirby had a 36 for the first nine.

RAY ELIOT

New Mentor Is Graduate Of School

Played Game Under Zuppke as Lineman, Also Performed in Baseball as Catcher

By the Associated Press

Champaign, Ill., Jan. 29.—Ray Eliot, who had $8 in his pockets and the ambition to play under Bob Zuppke when he came to Illinois as a freshman 13 years ago, today was named Illini football coach.

Hed line coach last season, Eliot's promotion ended a long and controversial chapter in Illinois' football history—one marked by ouster moves against Zuppke and highlighted by the old Dutchman's sudden resignation last November after 29 seasons as Illini mentor.

Eliot, who overcame the handicap of poor eyesight to star for Zuppke as a lineman and also as a baseball catcher, was chosen Tuesday night by the university's athletic board. The choice was conveyed to President A. C. Willard and the university trustees are scheduled to formally approve Eliot next month.

A native of Brighton, Mass., Eliot worked his way through Illinois, being graduated in 1932. He spent five years at Illinois College in Jacksonville and during the last four he served as head football coach, his teams winning 23 games, losing only 3 and tying 1. In 1937 he joined the Illini coaching staff. He is married and has one daughter.

Salary Is $8000

Selection of Eliot, whose salary will be $8000, ended a search begun last November after Zuppke's resignation. During recent weeks the field reportedly narrowed down to Eliot, Burg Ingwersen, head line coach at Northwestern, and James Phelan, former Washington mentor.

Eliot takes over the Illinois post at the lowest ebb in Illinois football history. During 1940 and 1941 Illinois lost ten straight Western Conference games. Since 1938 the football situation had been marked by controversy, with the trustees meeting last July and dismissing Wendell S. Wilson as athletic director and giving the 63-year-old Zuppke a contract only for 1941.

Then, four days before Illinois' final game last fall, Zuppke resigned. The same day the trustees named Doug Mills athletic director. Zuppke was retired on a pension of $4000 annually. He termed the selection of Eliot a "wise choice."

Eliot said "this is a dream come true."

He would say nothing about the membership of his staff at this time.

Cleveland Omits Bonus Clauses in Players' Contracts

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, Jan. 29.—Deciding not to bring the players in on this season's war-created attendance gambles, the Cleveland Baseball Club mailed contracts today without the expected bonus clauses.

"We think the fellows would rather know in advance just what they'll get," explained Vice President Roger Peckinpaugh. "It would be tough on their personal planning—it might even be tough on their performance—if their income depended on attendance."

Although bonus provisions are out, the contracts contain the customary war clause which says, in effect, that a player's salary stops when he joins the armed forces.

Cadets Halt Tide Spurt Near End

Johnnies Boast 13-Point Margin But Tire in 4th Period at Eastern

St. John's High basketball forces saved just enough out of a 13-point lead to trip Eastern for the second time this season yesterday, 35 to 33, in a spectacular clash at the Tide gym.

In their second victory in 18 hours—they downed Gonzaga Wednesday night—the Johnnies tired badly after a fast start and just managed to halt a devastating Tide rally. Thus they did in regulation time what it took two overtimes to do earlier this year.

Eastern elected to start its second team, a costly move. Before regulars could be rushed in, St. John's led, 11 to 2, and was never headed thereafter. After one period their advantage was 16 to 6, and at the half it was 26 to 13.

Scoring eight straight points as the third quarter started, Eastern cut its deficit to 26 to 21, and going into the last eight minutes it was only 27 to 21. Jesse Newberry's three quick points sliced that to 27 to 24 soon afterward, and in the final period the Tide was on the short end of 31-to-28 and 34-to-32 counts.

Paddy McCarthy's 11 points barely stole scoring honors for the winners, 10 being registered by Eastern's George Pigott.

'Angel' Tillet, The Original, Crushes Ernie

By Oscar Elder

There was nothing angelic about the manner in which Maurice Tillet, alias the French Angel, disposed of tough Ernie Dusek in the feature match of the wrestling show at Turner's Arena last night. By flopping Dusek on the mat after 34 minutes of gruesome goings-on, Tillet kept intact his record free of defeat in six years of commercial groaning.

Billed as the Original Angel, so as not to be confused with any of the various and sundry phoney "Angels" who haunt the Nation's sweatshops, the Frenchman packed more than 2000 fans into the arena, and Promoter Joe Turner contributed a percentage of the gate to the infantile paralysis fund.

Maurice, who appears to be composed of one part foghorn and two parts Gargantua, settled down to business at the bell and enveloped Dusek in a bear hug on the ropes that would have crushed less sturdy ribs. From there he went into a headlock that grounded Ernie, who wriggled out with finesse and gave a healthy yank on the Tillet proboscis which caused Mr. Angel to emit a mighty sigh of dismay.

Leg-Lock Works

The next step was a fast round of slugging that rocked both boys repeatedly. Then Dusek grabbed with a leg-lock that nearly proved the undoing of his 277-pound opponent. This grip seemed to be Tillet's weakness, and Dusek was able to get it several times. However, the Angel always managed to drag himself to the ropes in order to force Referee Casey Berger to break the hold.

Then came another gory session of fisticuffs—and then the finish. Dusek had the Angel pressed on the ropes and the referee stepped in to break the hold. As they parted, Tillet gave Dusek a shove that floored him and then dropped on with a body press to take the match.

In the dressing room afterwards, Dusek gave his foe a left-handed compliment when he grunted that he'd rather be mauled around by most of the circuit's villains rather than have Tillet slap him around.

Maurice, who says he gave up a law career after taking a degree at the University of Toulouse, was pleased about the whole thing. He now wants to battle the Swedish Angel, whom he feels has stolen his stuff in appropriating the "angel" tag.

Other Dusek Wins

Emil Dusek took the semiwindup when Pat Fraley had to capitulate after receiving a hand injury. The match had been going 26 minutes when Dusek attempted to toss Fraley into the crowd. Pat hung up on the ropes and then fell heavily to the mat, possibly fracturing a finger.

Gino Garibaldi was awarded his match against Cowboy Luttrell when the Texan was disqualified for repeated use of illegal strangle holds. This match gave the fans a torrid 21 minutes, and they have taken Luttrell to their collective hearts as a villain whom they can enthusiastically hate.

The two-man team of Ace Freeman and Maurice La Chappelle decisively put away the duo of Herbie Freeman and Stanley Pinto. This was one of the best dual matches of the year and the winners, who complement each other like Scotch and soda, downed Freeman and Pinto in 17 and 20 minutes, respectively.

Dawson Rolls 469, Record High for Alley

Harry Dawson burned up the Mount Rainier Recreation drives last night, totaling the highest set ever rolled over the alleys. Starting with a 140 game, Dawson followed with 147 and 182 for a splendid 469 set that upped Hugh Crawley's old mark by 27 sticks. Dawson's Pincus Grillsmen won two from Saur's Service, but the Maryland Electric quintet was the best as a team, posting highs of 690-1817, but dropping two to White Horse Inn, with Micky Johnson's 163-402 leading the winners.

ARCADIA

Bernice Johnson, of Agriculture, with 132-344, and Wilda Tucker, of Interior No. 2, with 344, were the best pinswomen in the Ladies' Federal League at Arcadia, with the former team taking three from ICC, as the latter won a sweep over RFC No. 2. Treasury rolled high team set of 1512 and took three from FBI, as Treasury No. 1 whitewashed OEM No. 1.

TEMPLE

The Temple Minor League at Ollie Pacini's drives was paced by Bill Clark, Ivins Biscuits, with a 165 single, and Buddie Keller, Standard Brands, with a 385 set. Standard Brands also won further honors with team highs of 640-1732. Pincus Grill won three from Senate Inn and Bombard & Weiman took three from Local 67. Bill Greiner's 364 and Pete Diprepo's 361 won free entries in Ollie Pacini's handicap Saturday.

BROOKLAND

A 159 single by Dutch Diegelman, Brookland Hardware, and a 414 set by Cliff Hollis, DePerini Delicatessen topped the Brookland Merchants League with Hollis' quintet rolling 1840 for high set as Brookland Garage totaled 668 for a record high team game. University Delicatessen, Modern Way Movers, Hite's Shell, Rice's Unity Craftsmen and Washington Oil Burner scored sweeps over opponents. Near high sets were chalked up by Carl Loeffler, with 406, and Karl Gochenour, with 404.

College Athletics to Increase, Say 3 Coaches, Now in Marines

Bierman, Hanley, Hanson All Majors Now; Compulsory Physical Ed. Suggested

By Jack Munhall

There'll be no decrease, but rather an increase in all college athletics during the war. If you doubt it, tell it to the Marines, 'cause that's where we got it, from a trio of Marine majors who really know.

Bernie Bierman, Pat Hanley and Ray Hanson, veterans all of World War I and buddies for 20 years in the coaching ranks, are off on a new adventure together, reunited in a common cause.

The "Three Minnesota Musketeers" ran the gantlet of a press interview yesterday at the Navy Department, after introduction by Brig. Gen. Robert Denig, director of the Division of Public Relations for the Marine Corps, who said the majors were at present "unassigned."

Bierman, famed for his national championship football team at Minnesota, declared that the war will prompt a noticeable increase in college athletics of all kinds. With this, Maj. Hanson, for 16 years head football and basketball coach of Western State (Ill.) Teachers, and Maj. Hanley, late of Boston University and before that at Northwestern, heartily agreed. Like Bierman, Hanson and Hanley were born in Minnesota.

Not as Good

"College football will be sustained at all costs," Maj. Bierman predicted." Of course, the quality won't be as good as before, but there'll be more and more boys playing football as well as other sports." Bierman suggested that all colleges inaugurate compulsory physical education programs.

Maj. Hanson, a hero in World War I where he received the Navy Cross, the Purple Heart and the Star Medal decorations, is not so widely known in nearby sports circles. But among basketball followers, he is known as the inventor of the "ten-second rule," an innovation he made in 1935 over the protests of James A. Naismith, founder of the court game. Maj. Hanson coached many a Western State Teachers five to the "Little 19 Conference" title in competition among small Middle Western teams, including the basketball powerhouse Bradley Tech.

Pat Hanley, not to be confused with brother Dick, the ex-Northwestern coach, was head football coach of Boston University when he answered the Marine Corps call to arms January 19. Before that he had served under frere Dick as line coach of the Northwestern eleven.

Will Be in Service

Questioned about brother Dick, Pat replied:

"Don't worry about him. He'll be in the Marines with me in a few days. But doggone it, I won't be able to order him around as I've been planning.

"When Dick reports to Quantico the first week of February he'll be a major, too, instead of a captain. He just recently received that promotion."

In regards to the proposed freshman rule, the majors all thought it would some day be necessary in all of the colleges. Major Hanley said it would be the salvation of Eastern football next season, while Hanson and Bierman declared that while Western schools might not at first adopt it, they would be forced to later on.

"Large schools, such as those in the Big Ten with enormous enrollments, will be able to hold out longer than the small ones," said Bierman. "But you can easily see what will happen to college teams that usually have football squads of only 27 or 28 men. They'll have to use freshmen or fold up."

Major Bierman, a veteran of the "banquet" or "rubber chicken circuit," as he calls it, will get no rest from that, even in his new role. He revealed that he is scheduled to begin a good-will swing soon.

McClelland In Eagle Goal Box Tonight

Craig McClelland, veteran goalie of the Washington Eagles, who was booed to the echo last Tuesday night as the champions dropped an 11-3 decision to the New York Rovers, will return to Riverside Stadium a hero tonight when the Eagles engage the third place Johnstown (Pa.) Blue Birds in an Eastern Hockey League game at 8:30 o'clock.

The veteran Blue Birds have won five games and tied another in seven starts against the Eagles thus far.

McClelland transformed the jeers of Washington fans of last Tuesday night to cheers from partisan Baltimore fans the following night when he turned back the aggressive Baltimore Orioles with one of the finest goal tending jobs of the year, 4 to 1.

McClelland tonight will be bidding for a grand slam of Eastern League opposition—having defeated every team in the circuit save the Blue Birds during his relatively brief stay here. In order to gain this end he must outduel a fine goalie in Frank Ceryance, Johnstown's brilliant net minder.

Brooklyn Wins Over Bruins On Ice, 5 to 4

By the United Press

New York, Jan. 29.—The Brooklyn Americans took advantage of the absence of Boston's potent "krauT" line to score a 5-4 decision over the Bruins tonight before 9286 fans in a National Hockey League game at Madison Square Garden.

Each team scored in the first period but the Americans scored three straight goals in the second period. Bill Mosdel, Buzz Boll and Mel Hill doing the scoring. The Bruins scored one on a tally by Hollett.

The visitors rallied early in the concluding period on goals by Art Jackson and Eddie Wiseman, but Boll again scored for the Brooklynites with the clincher at 5:25 on an assist from Hill.

Leafs Beat Montreal

Toronto, Jan. 29.—Climaxing a mediocre game with a wild outburst of scoring in the third period, the Toronto Maple Leafs rammed in four goals in three minutes to defeat the visiting Montreal Canadiens, 7-3.

Sweeney Schriner put the Leafs one up in the first period, and although John Quilty tied it up at 18:26 in that stanza, the Leafs beat Paul Bibeault, Montreal goalie, with two long shots from the sticks of Wally Stanowski and Pete Langelle in the second.

The Canadiens made a strong recovery in the third and pulled up to a 3-to-2 count on Charlie Sands close-in goal at 2:19. They were pressing hard at the halfway mark when a fierce free-for-all fight broke out, involving every man on the ice.

When the smoke had cleared, each club had three men in the box and the Leafs started to roll. In 167 seconds they had four goals, Langelle picking up two more. Schriner getting his second and McCreedy scoring the last.

Howe Stars, Wings Win

Detroit, Jan. 29.—Syd Howe celebrated "Syd Howe Night" here tonight, scoring both of Detroit's goals to give the Wings a 2-0 National League victory over the fourth-place Chicago Black Hawks. The veteran Detroit center was feted by 7164 fans at special ceremonies preceding the game, then went out and scored in the second and third periods to give the Detroit club its third victory in five games with the Black Hawks this season.

Enterprise Wins

Mr. and Mrs. George P. Greenhalgh's well matched pair, Looter and Ginnico, handed in a beautifully timed round to capture the pairs of hunters class over Mr. and Mrs. Perry's Hydrogyro and Ragnarock, who placed second.

Looter made his first appearance indoors and went like a veteran performer, taking his fences in the manner of a tried campaigner. Nor had Ginnico been indors before, but he has a two-year age advantage over his young stablemate.

Capt. David Wagstaff and Enterprise, who had been knocking at victory's door all during the show finally crashed into the blue ribbons with the big English-bred mare in the open jumper's event which she won with only one fault over Arlington Hall School's Commanche, ridden by Susan Rienhart. It was Capt. Wagstaff's second blue ribbon of the evening, as he had scored earlier with Rumboogie.

To keep Fort Myer's colors flying, Maj. Charles B. McClelland, jr.'s, Smacko was third, nosing out Gordon Wright on Mrs. Elizabeth Correll's Lew Dunbar, from Scarsdale, N. Y.

In that class, Mrs. Hughes and Hi-Ho stood an excellent chance to repeat their go-as-you-please jumping triumph of the first night of the show as they went clean over six fences. Then Hi-Ho made an unusually broad jump over a double oxer, galloped to a sudden halt at the paddock fence and sent her owner to the ground. Mrs. Hughes landed on her feet unhurt, but the spill automatically eliminated her mare.

MEN VS. WOMEN—Won by men's team, 0 faults, total of 12½ faults; second, women's team, 7 faults, total for two nights 20 faults.

Men's low scorer—Samuel E. Bogley's Ringmaster, 2 faults. Women's low scorer—Mrs. Hughes, jr.'s Hi-Ho, 3½ faults.

Staunton Five Wins Verdict Over Episcopal

Special Dispatch to The Post

Alexandria, Jan. 29.—The second one-point loss on a record which otherwise lists four triumphs this season was suffered by Episcopal High quintet here today when Staunton Military Academy came from behind to win, 36-35.

Tom Hamill and Luke Burnett, amassing 12 and 8 points, respectively, starred for the hosts as they set the pace until the last quarter. At intermission their edge was 17-14. Then the Cadets found the range, jumped on top and held on to win.

Jack Muse, of Staunton, tied Hamill's scoring mark, and only two points back was his teammate, Hawkins.

Hogan, Snead Favorites for Today's Tourney At Del Mar; Buffet Extravaganza Cancelled

By the Associated Press

Rancho Santa Fe, Calif., Jan. 29.—Three hundred golfers are ready to begin play . . . a record gallery attendance is expected. . . . Samuel Jackson Snead and Benny Hogan are hot favorites to win most of the $5000 purse money.

In other words, the stage is set for the start tomorrow of the sixth annual golf tournament featured by Bing Crosby.

But 2000 hungry hearts, which is a conservative estimate, were saddened tonight when they learned that the customary barbecue on closing night will not be held.

It was quite a blow, because this was no ordinary barbecue. It was an extravaganza in buffet. It was also a stampede of appetites and a brilliant study of man at his ravenous best. Or worst.

It ranks now as the only barbecue in the world that became so popular it developed into a menace to national safety.

That's why it was called off. Defense authorities in this San Diego area feared it was liable to exceed the 5000-crowd limit ban. It might have, too.

Started as Gesture

The squire of Crosby acres started the affair as a nice little gesture for the visiting golfers and the tournament family. One year he held it at his ranch and set plates for about 200. Four hundred came and the ranch wasn't large enough.

The next year the host ordered 400 steaks and moved the party to what he thought would be sufficient space—his rambling race track at nearby Del Mar. Blessed if 800 didn't show up, including 400 who waived the formality of invitations.

Ordered More Steaks

The amazed Mr. C. and his brother Larry went ahead and ordered more steaks last year. Approximately 1800 attended and the steak supply was shy again. At the height of the festivities, when everyone was having a great time and one middle-aged gentleman was seen leaving the grounds with a case of sweet milk—and sweet milk it was—under his arm, there was a commotion at the front gate.

It was Mr. Crosby, having a tough time getting into his own barbecue.

It's probably just as well the Army stepped in and canceled the affair, or contest. Someone might have been crushed this year.

Willie Makes Good

Miami, Fla.

Dear Boss,

I thought I was a cinch to win that reducing bet I made with Art Brown and John Manfuso. I was going along in fine style, weighing my calories with the precision of a toolmaker—no cream or sugar in my coffee, no white bread, no potatoes, no desserts, etc.

But today, Willie showed up. Now Boss, I have heard that some people and diets just don't mix. I had a slight gnawing feeling in my stomach and the sight of Willie was enough for me. I rushed down to the hot lunch counter, ordered a beef stew with plenty of potatoes and topped it off with apple pie a la mode.

HAIGHT

Willie probably doesn't know it, but he was an accessory before the fact that I lost a similar bet last year. This second appearance of Willie in Florida when I'm on a diet could be a coincidence but somehow I'm beginning to suspect that either Brown or Manfuso or both have something to do with it.

If Willie had not taken up a certain profession, I might have forgotten a boyhood warning by my father to keep away from him. However, I've been trying to do just that down through the years.

Willie's father ran a livery stable in our neighborhood. But he never had a more fractious colt in a stall than he had in this boy. Willie simply had too much energy for a little town like Washington, D. C., and he had more tricks up his sleeve than Houdini and Thurston. The older heads in our neighborhood used to hear of another episode in the youthful career of Willie and say, "That boy will end up in the gutter somewhere."

He took little or no interest in the livery stable beyond teasing horses and dropping hay on the heads of the hired help and he was hardly out of kindergarten before the teachers at Dennison School had him stamped as Peck's Bad Boy No. 2. And he could fight, despite his lack of size.

If memory serves, Willie's energy and ingenuity got too strong for school when he was in the seventh grade. Anyway, one day we were playing "duck on Davey" in the alley and Willie came up and announced proudly that he had quit school.

The next morning, with a couple of other boys, I stopped to count white horses as a funeral went by. There was something familar about the driver of the white hearse so I stepped off the curb to make sure that my eyes did not deceive me. Wearing a silk hat that came down over his ears and a long black coat rolled up at the sleeves and with his feet dangling, sat Willie as straight as if he were wearing a corset.

From that beginning, W. W. (Willie) Chambers only parlayed himself into "One of the biggest undertakers in the world." Too bad that he already has buried most of the neighborhood folks who once shook their heads and said, "That terrible Chambers boy. He's headed for the penitentiary."

Even if he does scare me into eating, Willie is the last man the uninformed would take for an undertaker. He has a fog-horn voice and a laugh that would wake up the dead and a sense of humor that is contagious.

When he visited with me in the pressbox this afternoon, Willie had a thin, rather pale man with him. Willie said he had a certain amount set aside to play on the races.

"Who is your thin-man friend over there?" I asked.

"Oh, that fellow," replied Willie. "He's my betting insurance. If I lose I'm going to get even by burying him when I get back to town."

Always your ace,
MIAMI HAIGHT.

Frank Stranahan In Florida Finals

St. Augustine, Fla., Jan. 29 (INS).—Louis Broward, of Jacksonville, Fla., and Frank Stranahan, of Toledo, Ohio, tonight were slated to meet in the final round for the championship of the Florida winter golf tourney.

Broward gained the finals with a 3 and 2 defeat of Joseph Shemield, of St. Augustine, in a match that saw the two linksmen on even terms at the tenth hole. Shooting a subpar 35 for the first 9 and with a 3-up lead at the turn, Stranahan went on to take a par on the fifteenth and eliminate Powell Crichton, of Bronxville, N. Y., 4 and 3.

Favorite First Fiddle Wins Seminole Purse at Hialeah Park

Mulrenan's Colt Returns $3.90 Ticket

Winner Chalks Up Best Time of Meet For 6 Furlongs; Notes Runs Second

By the Associated Press

Hialeah Park, Fla., Jan. 29.—After being backed down to odds of $3.90 for two, Mrs. E. Mulrenan's First Fiddle, a former member of the C. V. Whitney establishment, won today's Seminole purse as if that was a liberal price. Stepping the fastest six furlongs of the meeting, the Royal Minstrel colt was clocked in 1:11 3-5 as he crossed the finish line eight lengths in the van, merely galloping.

Mrs. Louis Lazare's Notes was an easy second, three lengths in advance of the almost neglected Florizan Beau, representing S. E. Pershall.

The first three to finish, in addition to Curious Roman, Grey Wing, Bold Question and Sergeant Bill, were nominated for the $25,000 Flamingo stakes. However, First Fiddle made his opposition appear decidedly inferior on this occasion.

First Fiddle, in his previous outing, had finished a good third behind Bright Willie and American Wolf in the Hialeah Stakes. He found no such contention today, except for the first couple of furlongs, during which Flying West had him headed. But Nick Wall sent the favorite into a long lead after the preliminary stages and the fiddler played a merry tune for form players, who have not been going too well at the meeting. Notes, which took up the chase after Flying West retired, had weak opposition for the runner-up award.

Race Course to Give Proceeds to War Charities; Challedon and Alsab Present

By the Associated Press

Miami, Fla., Jan. 29.—The aristocrats of the American turf, 14 sleek thoroughbreds with total winnings of $1,500,000, will prance before thousands at Hialeah Park tomorrow as their contribution to a war benefit day program.

The country's "name horses"—Challedon, Mioland, Our Boots, Alsab and the rest—will take part in a parade of stars designed to stimulate attendance on a day when all proceeds will be given to war relief societies and other charitable organizations.

They'll promenade just before the running of the $2000 President's Birthday Handicap, and horsemen here consider the procession a preview of such major Hialeah stakes as the $50,000 Widener, the $25,000 Flamingo and the $10,000 McLennan.

To Divide Profits

The track will divide all its profits for the day equally among the American Red Cross, the Army Relief Society, the Navy Relief Society and the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis.

W. L. Brann's big bay, Challedon, tops the group in money winnings with $322,235. Charles S. Howard's Mioland is second with $224,450 and the Woodvale Farm's Our Boots third with $115,182.

Five of the more prominent Flamingo and Kentucky Derby eligibles, led by Mrs. Al Sabath's sensational Alsab, will be in the turf star parade.

Alsab, winner of $110,600 and the 1941 juvenile champion, likely will get another look at his leading rival, B. F. Whitaker's Requested.

Requested won $49,950 last year and was out of the money only twice in 16 starts.

The other star 3-year-olds are the Greentree Stable's Devil Diver ($65,339); Manhasset Stable's Amphitheater ($23,375), and Bless Me, pride of Col. E. R. Bradley's Idle Hour Farm, winner of four out of six starts and $5285 as a 2-year-old.

Howard's Porter's Cap, Louis Tufano's Market Wise, Glen Riddle Stable's War Relic, Mrs. Parker Corning's Attention, Brann's Pictor and A. T. Jergens' Meissen round out a group which sponsors claim is the greatest collection of money-winners ever asssembled at one track in racing history.

Selections at Hialeah

Dear Al:

After a couple of years of making it tough for the customers by naming the races after the time they were supposed to be run, the program now lists the events as the first race, second race, etc. It was confusing to try to find the fifth race when it was identified only as the "4 o'clock race." Jockey Don Meade was visiting in the pressbox yesterday and says he hopes to return to saddle action next week. His wrist injury, suffered in a spill, is responding to treatment. By failing to win here last Wednesday Market Wise missed a chance to get in the charmed circle of horses which have won $100,000. To date the $500 bargain colt has $99,190 to his credit. Owner W. L. Brann decided against allowing Challedon to show his stuff in the "Parade of Stars" here. Challedon is high strung and Brann thought it best to keep away from the track. Jackie Westrope had a hard time getting started with his saddle work after coming to Hialeah following the calling off of the Santa Anita meeting. He finally rode a winner aboard Santo Domingo last Tuesday. When Westrope led the list of jockeys in 1933 he rode 301 winners, the only time a rider has had as many as 300 firsts since Vincent Powers turned the trick in 1908 with 324. The record is held by Walter Miller who rode 388 in 1906. Two claims for $2500 were made this week. Perfect Rhyme went to L. Thomas and Paul Kelly took Perifiox for that figure. Count Traumer, a 2-year-old which made his debut here this week, is by Count Gallahad. This sire never raced but was out of the mare Anita Peabody. Because of his blood lines Count Gallahad is getting his stud chance. Bill's Anne, owned by E. K. Bryson, Mr. Big at the Belair track, was named for the daughter of Bill Boniface, Baltimore Sun racing writer. Tell Alan Clarke the time is getting short. I want him to make sure Walter Haight, the colt, is nominated for the Kentucky Derby. Now for the winners.

BILL.

First race—The entry of CANANEA and CANICULA seems the best in the day's opener. The first named is the best of the two but either could do the job. FREE AIR and TEA CLIPPER to take care of the other money positions.

Second race—RANGE DUST was passed along as a good thing. Packs a lot of weight but may be ready for this sprint. OLD WHITEY and INCONCEIVABLE to battle it out for the place and show awards.

Third race—WAKE is tossed in this with a feather assignment and will have Mehrtens to do the booting. I'm going to string along. LAURANA LYON likes the long route and is dangerous. STAND ALONE belongs in the cash circle.

Fourth race—BRIGHT TRACE deserves the call in this field. Gets a modest weight package and will be ready for the best. TONY WEAVER belongs close in this company. OLD ROSEBUSH for the minor award.

Fifth race—EIRE ran second in excellent company and figures to be a keen factor if not the winner of this event. NEW TRICK is a fair sort and is favored by the weights. BOSSY SERVANT for the show end.

Sixth race—PEEP SHOW, winner of two in a row, may make it three straight in this field. Showed a keen liking for the mile route last out. LIBERTY FRANC'S last was a beaut. SCOTCH TRAP may forget to quit.

Seventh race—DISPLAYER, in present form appears the best of these gathered for this 7-furlong test. THE CHIEF is rounding into form and is a threat despite 120 pounds. LIGHT REIGH for the minor cash.

Eighth race—BOSTEE, with 101 pounds, gets my call in the day's finale. WHISCENDENT belongs close. HERE NOW is a possibility at a long price.

Best bet—EIRE.

Oaklawn Club Racing Meet Is Approved

By the Associated Press

Little Rock, Ark., Jan. 29.—The State racing commission announced today it would not disturb the license issued to the Oaklawn Jockey Club for February 23-March 28 racing meeting at Hot Springs, and that the meet "will be held as per schedule."

The announcement followed conferences between Commission Chairman J. H. Highfill, of Blytheville, and Gov. Adkins, who had been asked by the Hot Springs and Brinkley Ministerial Alliances to suspend all racing activities in Arkansas.

Adkins announced last week he favored abandonment of all racing for the duration of the war, and would ask the commission not to issue any new permit. He said he did not know whether he had the authority to revoke the Oaklawn license.

In a recent article on tying wet-flies, we suggested tying them on hooks snelled with nylon to avoid the breakage experienced with old silkworm gut-snelled wet-flies.

We now have been informed by E. I. duPont de Nemours & Co., that for 1942, tackle manufacturers will offer hooks snelled with nylon. It is hoped that fly manufacturers will also tie wet-flies snelled with nylon on tapered-shank hooks.

Being a nonfiliment, nylon snells do not fray, split, nor do they get brittle like natural Spanish gut. Hooks snelled with nylon can be used for all types of bait fishing, have much less sheen than natural gut and are virtually invisible in water. They do not require soaking before using and that is an important point with snelled wet-flies.

The old gut-snelled flies were lost by snapping off in casting, because more often than not, an angler, in changing flies, never took the time to soak them.

The development of nylon snells relieves tackle manufacturers of dependence on imported material, especially gut taken from Spanish silkworms, the supply of which is extremely uncertain. One does not need to worry about purchasing old, brittle, dried-out gut, because nylon has long shelf life.

"Gen." Harvey Samis, of Easton, Md., headed an army of about 100 sportsmen this week on a raid against crows on Poplar Island in the Chesapeake Bay. Poplar Island is the home of thousands of crows.

Farmers on the Eastern Shore have been complaining for some time that the crows, when on the mainland during the greater part of the day, eat everything from the eggs of song and game birds to crops, before returning at dusk to their island roost.

The army of crow-shooters, upon arrival on the island early in the afternoon, scattered in small groups and hid in brush blinds until the black devils came in on the first flight. For an hour or more until dusk, the hunters' gun barrels were hot from the shooting. It was estimated that 1500 to 2000 crows were destroyed.

Samis said the crows are more numerous than ever this year. Hunters had been conscripted from both the Eastern and Western Shores of Maryland and many came from Delaware to enjoy the sport.

Jack Miner, Canada's pioneer game conservationist, declares more wild ducks and geese are destroyed in the egg by crows than are shot by all the six million or more wildfowlers of Canada and the United States. Jack should know, for he has lived on his sanctuary since 1904, which he established at that time. Jack's sanctuary at Kingsville, Ontario, has served as a breeding ground for wildfowl in increasing numbers ever since.

It is on the breeding grounds where crows get in their most destructive work and create havoc with the nesting birds.

The Outdoorsman, of Columbus, Ohio, has an interesting booklet on methods of calling, decoying and shooting crows, by James W. Stuber, dean of crow-shooters in Ohio. Get in for some of this fascinating and beneficial pastime that has no closed season or bag limits.

A restocking project involving the liberation of between 150 and 200 deer has been planned for February and March, according to Carl H. Nolting, chairman of the Commission of Game and Inland Fisheries. He announced yesterday that orders for 110 deer have already been placed and that trapping operations have been started in the deer park area of the Mariner's Museum grounds near Newport News, Va.

The deer now on order will be shipped from Wisconsin before March 15, while the animals obtained from the Mariner's Museum grounds will be transported to other sections of the State for liberation as they become available.

Areas restocked with deer are closed to hunting until the animals have a chance to become established. As soon as the newly formed deer herds become sufficiently large, deer hunting will be permitted in areas now closed.

Sometime ago we reported the possibility of a round table discussion regarding field trials held after April 1. This date has been set as a deadline by Maryland State game officials for spring field trials.

This discussion has not been called, but it is interesting to learn that Maryland game officials intend to ease up on existing regulations inasmuch as these meets are held over liberated pen raised birds and not existing wild game birds. From a conservation standpoint, the survival of these liberated birds add to the game covers of the State.

The National Capital Field Trial Club submitted a request to hold trials on April 10 and 11 for which permits have been granted without comment.

Kelleyni Out Of Catholic Ring Line-up

Forced to forfeit in the 135-pound class because of Bernie Kelleyni's absence due to a cut eye, Catholic University may stage a pair of 145-pound bouts with Miami University tomorrow night at Brookland to round out a full eight-bout program.

Coach Eddie LaFond, directing operations from a sick bed via Joe Bunsa and Dave Bernstein, two former pupils and star ringmen, hoped to have Rookies Andy Bain or Johnny Cifala ready for the light-weight assignment, but Bain is tied up with examinations and Cifala can't sweat enough weight off his 142-pound frame to make the class limit.

If Coach Billy Regan can supply another welterweight it'll be a fight between Cifala and Leon Wowak for the C. U. assignment. Both are ready, with Wowak having a slight edge because of his greater experience.

While the heavyweight brawl between Miami's captain, Red Cameron, and sizable Sneeze Kyczewski undoubtedly will be the evening's feature several other attractive bouts grace the card. One of them will be the 165-pound scuffle between the Cards' Charley Riehl, who has developed into a grade-A fighter, and Jack Larkin or Starr Horton. The last two are arguing over the regular position in Miami's line-up.

The 120-pound bout figures to be a toss-up between Jimmy Demos, clever Greek youngster who got a draw in the Southwestern Louisiana match in his first formal ring appearance, and Catholic's Price Welch.

Ted Mandris, Cardinal 127-pounder whose lack of condition and overanxiety cost him the nod in the Lock Haven match last week, hopes to break into the winning column against Chad Kaye, Miami hopeful who will be making his first start for the Hurricane.

Miami has two capable ringmen in Reddic Harris, 155-pounds, and "Tuffy" Sapp, 175-pound kayo artist. Harris played in the Hurricane backfield against Catholic's 1940 grid team.

Pastor Favorite Over Lesnevich in Garden Fight Tonight

Winner May Land Chance At Joe Louis

Promoter Jacobs Expects 10,000 Fans, Gate of $25,000; Pastor 5-to-8 Choice

By Sid Feder
Associated Press Sports Writer

New York, Jan. 29.—The top comeback kids of clout in 1941—Rapid Robert Pastor and Solid Gus Lesnevich—collide in Madison Square Garden at 10 p. m. (Eastern standard time) tomorrow night for the somewhat dubious pleasure of getting a crack at Joe Louis in a couple of months.

The winner will receive Mike Jacobs' first consideration when he comes to naming the Bomber's opponent for a heavyweight title tilt for the Army relief fund in March. But off Joe's most recent bit of sleep-producing, in which he sang a swift and sweet lullaby for Buddy Baer, it is doubtful if the chance for tomorrow's victor can be construed as much of a reward.

$25,000 Gate Seen

At any rate, this shindig gives Pastor an opportunity to prove to the home-town folks that he's capable of showinig them a ripsnortin' kind of rapid Robert, something he hasn't exactly accomplished in his local outings in recent years. And it gives Lesnevich, the light-heavyweight boss, a chance to move into the heavyweight ranks against one of the bigger set's leading citizens.

Promoter Mike Jacobs expects some 10,000 of the faithful to chip in to a gross pot of $25,000 for the privilege of being on hand.

Off his neat, if not gaudy, goings on of last year, Pastor is the betting boys' choice at five to eight to outgallop Gus this time. For, while the rugged Russian from Jersey, himself, was doing a fair job of flailing in winning the 175-pound championship, Pastor belted over such W. K. parties as Turkey Thompson (twice), Booker Beckwith, at a time that battler was the hottest thing around Chicago, and Al Delaney. Lesnevich, meantime, took the lightweight crown from Anton Christoford is and defended it against Tami Mauriello.

Pastor Favored on Speed

This corner strings along with Pastor's boxing skill and speed to keep Gus guessing over the ten-round route and prevent the Jersey Jolter from finding the range with his bigger guns, although most of Rapid Robert's trips to the post in the Garden in the past have left something to be desired—even in the opinion of James Joy Johnston, his manager and sincerest (and loudest) booster.

Maryland Ringmen Underdogs to Virginia

Unbeaten Cavaliers Present Fine Line-up; Basketball Game Also Set Tomorrow

Virginia will have the only unbeaten team in its boxing bout with Maryland University tomorrow night at College Park, but Coach Bobby Goldstein's Terps boast two unbeaten ringmen in three matches this season, Tom Jones in the 135-pound class, and Hotsy Alperstein in the 145.

The Terps will also be host to the Virginia basketball five

Jones has scored his victories over South Carolina, Coast Guard Academy and Western Maryland representatives by kayos and is touted as the finest sophomore ring prospect at the Old Line school in several years.

Alperstein, who carried the best pre-season reputation into the Maryland ring picture will meet Virginia's Bill Victor, while Jones will risk his knockout streak against the visitor's outstanding sophomore, Willie Barnett.

Meets Ken Rathbun

Jack Gilmore, Maryland's 165-pound representative who won a close decision over Carlos Ortenzi, the highly regarded Terror ringman last week in the feature of the evening, will run up against another top-notch college ringman this week in Kenny Rathbun, captain of the Cavaliers. Gilmore was out of condition last week, but will be ready for Rathbun.

Maryland gained an even break in its first all-varsity double-bill last week, and the odds point to another split tomorrow night. The Terp courtmen have shown a marked improvement in the past two weeks while Virginia has lost two players to the services and has been otherwise hit by illness and ineligibility. The Terps won, 35-34, in the first meeting at Charlottesville.

Virginia will rule the usual favorite in the ring match which follows the basketball game. The court game is listed for 8 p. m. and the boxing will follow immediately, about 9:20.

Frosh in Action

Maryland's frosh followers are also in for a big afternoon tomorrow. The young Terps will be host to Baltimore Poly at 3:30 on the court and the Virginia freshmen in boxing at 4:30.

The Terp varsity ringmen will present the same line-up which beat Western Maryland, 6-2, last week, while Virginia will present a slightly altered outfit over the one which defeated V. P. I. and North Carolina.

THE BOXING LINE-UPS

Maryland

120, John Cicala; 127, Judson Lincoln; 135, Tom Jones; 145, Hotsy Alperstein; 155, Pat Quinn; 165, Jack Gilmore; 175, Herb Gunther; heavy, Len Rodman.

Virginia

Western High Triumphs Over G. W., 23 to 17

Special Dispatch to The Post

Alexandria, Jan. 29.—Despite a desperate comeback late in the game, the Presidents of George Washington High lost their second basketball decision to a Washington school in two days today, bowing to Western High by a 23-to-17 count.

Tripped by Central in a three-overtime clash Wednesday, G. W. trailed by scores of 5 to 4 and 12 to 8 after each of the first two periods. Then they tied it up at 16-all, but couldn't withstand the Raiders' final drive.

Swanson Moore, Western center, got away with scoring honors with 8 points as teammates Jimmy Karas and Don Cross were held to 5 and 4, respectively. Best for the losers was Forward O'Brien, with five counters.

Hyattsville's Siderhoff New Scoring Ace

With a weak scoring effort against Landon, Friends School's "Cotton" Smith stepped down from the scholastic basketball point lead this week, allowing Bill Sideroff, of Hyattsville, to temporarily assume the throne.

Sideroff, who along with Rody Kidwell comprises Hyattsville's potent basket twins, crossed the 100 mark with three other local and nearby stars. His 117 points in nine games, the last six of which his team has won, gave him an average of 13 per game and also the lead in total points.

Sideroff's rise to the top climaxed a climb from far down the standings. In second place, on the other hand, is a scoring ace who has been constantly among the leaders—Wilson's Don Hillock. He crossed the 100 mark by one point, earning an average of 12.62 points per game.

Other 100-or-better scorers are Billy Noyes, of Woodward, with 111 and Jimmy Karas with 105, holders of fifth and sixth places, respectively, in the average column.

Beech Holds Workout Here; Fights Savold

Neville Beech, Picayune, Miss., heavyweight who meets Lee Savold Monday night in a ten-round main event at Turner's Arena, arrived yesterday and opened training with preliminary drills at the arena.

Beech was accompanied by his manager, Jack Lazarow, and a stablemate, Freddy Griggs. He shadow-boxed three rounds and worked a couple on the heavy bag.

The 22-year-old heavyweight scales 190 pounds, although his frame belies that poundage.

Speaking with a deep Southern drawl, Beech allows how he's been fighting two years professionally and holds victories over Tony Novak, Jay D. Turner and Jack Marshall.

In his drills yesterday Beech exhibited fast footwork and a potent sock in his left mitt. He appeared in good shape. He worked out after making the trip from Memphis, Tenn., by auto.

Beech will continue his training today at 2 o'clock. He will be followed by Savold, who is due in this morning. Savold has fought here before, holding a knockout victory over Claudio Villar, the Spanish heavyweight.

Griggs, Beech's stablemate, who resembles Billy Conn, is scheduled to fight Jabbo Kenner in a six-rounder on the supporting card. Griggs limbered up for two rounds yesterday.

Matchmaker Gabe Menendez plans to match the winner of the Savold-Beech fight with Villar, two weeks from Monday. Tickets are on sale at Turner's Arena, Fourteenth and W Streets Northwest.

Carolina State, Colored Champs, Meet Brooklyn

The highly rated Brooklyn College basketers, who will encounter the colored collegiate champions, North Carolina State College, tomorrow night at Turner's Arena, had a record of 11 victories and six losses last season, and are well advanced in the metropolitan district competition of New York this year.

Because of the national emergency Brooklyn has set aside the frosh rule and will carry five freshman players in its squad of 15, including Tom Luvin, Stan Eiskomitz, Bobby Ochshorn, Allan Mancus and Larry Finkelstein.

The juniors, with Marty Pauker, 6-foot 190-pound center, as the spearhead of the attack, carry the burden of Mentor Art Muiscant's offensive.

The North Carolinians won 21 out of 26 contests last season, and captured not only the collegiate championship, but also the runner-up honors in the national tournament for colored colleges at Cincinnati. In three years the Durham Tarheels, coached by Johnny McLendon, have won 61 out of 75 games.

Howard Loses West Virginia State Game

Willie Wells, rangy mountaineer center, featured the West Virginia State College attack as they defeated the Bisons of Howard University last night on the university court, 51-45.

The West Virginians, through the outstanding play of Wells and Bill Pleasants, held a 25-18 lead at the half, which the Bisons whittled down in the third quarter to tie the count at 41-all in the final minutes.

Buddy Hill, who scored 19 Bison points, aided by the spectacular efforts of "Soupy" Turner, set a pace which kept the crowd on edge. But in the closing spurt the Mountainers drew away, demonstrating a powerful reserve, which placed them well in front as the gong sounded.

Bill Terry to Scout Both Major Leagues; Senator Mead Represents Buffalo Club

Our Nats Without Southpaw Hurler; Landis Okay Sought

By Judson Bailey
Associated Press Sports Writer

New York, Jan. 29.—Bill Terry is going to spend a lot of time personally scouting both major leagues this season and plans to visit all the other training camps in Florida after he leaves the New York Giants . . . U. S. Senator Jim Mead will represent the Buffalo Bisons at the meeting of the International League here Sunday; he's vice president of the club . . . The Washington Senators do not have a left-handed pitcher on their club, while the Giants do not have a single left-handed thrower outside the mound staff.

Club owners hope Commissioner Landis will give them an okay next week on their plan for revising the system of optional assignments of minor league players . . . He got them to table it at the Chicago sessions until he had had time to consider the proposal, which is important to farm-club operations . . . The Cincinnati Reds' training camp roster is a 20-page booklet that answers every conceivable question about the Reds, including whether they are single or married, and how many children they have . . . Manager Bill McKechnie will take only 35 players to Tampa . . . The Brooklyn Dodgers have barred players' wives from their Havana training base this spring.

SENATOR JIM MEAD

One of the new scouts Terry has hired for the Giants is Ed Montague, whom Bill has never seen . . . Montague got his job simply on the recommendation of Joe Devine, the Yankee ivory hunter . . . Bobby Doerr, star second sacker of the Boston Red Sox, operates a mink farm in Oregon and Billy Herman, the keystone kop of the Dodgers, has been spending the winter ice skating at his Indiana home . . . Clint Brown, relief pitcher of the Cleveland Indians, runs a chicken farm . . . Press of war on his other enterprises has caused Walter O. Briggs, owner of the Detroit Tigers, not only to ignore baseball but to take the vice president and treasurer, his son Spike, out of the club offices . . . William G. Bramham, boss of the minor leagues, is coming to New York this weekend to sit in on baseball's vital policy-making meetings.

The hosts were led by Hocker, whose 8 points were tied by St. Alban's Bondy. It was the invaders' fifth triumph in seven games.

By the United Press

New York, Jan. 29.—James Edward (Eddie) Forbes, 68, nationally known referee and ring official, died today at his Brooklyn home of a heart ailment.

Forbes officiated in other capacities at many important bouts during the past 35 years and had been a member of the Brooklyn Daily Eagle organization for nearly 50 years.

He was third man in the ring for the Gene Tunney-Tom Heeney fight, which marked Tunney's last defense of the heavyweight crown. Because of his honesty in the ring he was often referred to as "Square Eddie."

He worked in the Brooklyn Eagle job press department as a young man and then became a boxing writer under the late Abe Yager, sr., and in turn was made sports editor ten years ago. He resigned to give more time to his work as a boxing official.

Capital Store Sales Up 66% During Week

Washington department store sales in the week ended January 24 soared 66 per cent above the comparable period last year, but were 8 per cent under the previous week this year, the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond reported yesterday.

Informed quarters said the continued heavy buying during the latest week represents efforts "to stock up" in anticipation of possible shortages and rationing in certain lines.

In the four weeks ended January 24 local store sales were 47 per cent heavier than in the same period last year. Sharp increases likewise were registered throughout the Fifth Federal Reserve District. The area sales gain was 47 per cent for the week and 42 per cent for the four weeks.

That Washington stores anticipated the buying rush was evidenced in other figures compiled by the Federal Reserve Bank. As of December 3, local stores had 3 per cent more goods on hand than on the same date last year. At the same time outstanding orders for merchandise were 86 per cent heavier than last year.

Collections of accounts receivable here were 30 per cent of the debits in December, according to the bank.

Rotate Spare Tire To Save Others, Expert Advises

Boston, Jan. 29 (AP).—A continual all-out effort to collect scrap rubber must be carried on to keep America's automobiles in operation, Vice President J. J. Newman, of the B. F. Goodrich Co., told New England business leaders in an address today.

The individual motorist, he suggested, could get 20 per cent more mileage from his tires by rotating his extra spare on the wheels of his car and thus cutting down on the over-all mileage taken out of the other four. "After all," he commented, "that new spare won't do you any good a year from now, if you haven't three other good tires to go with it."

Estimating that the country's resources could keep most of its automobiles in condition for necessary service for a year and a half to two years, Newman commented, "unless scrap rubber is collected in larger quantities, we are facing a much more dismal future. This program will have to be a Government 'must.'"

U.S. Foreign Trade In 9 Months Sets High Since 1929

By the Associated Press

The Foreign Commerce Department of the United States Chamber of Commerce said yesterday that the total value of combined American exports and imports for the first nine months of 1941 were $5,633,383,000, the highest since 1929.

The figures were reported in the January issue of the Our World Trade, a quarterly analysis of foreign trade, which the department announced would be suspended for the duration of the war.

The department said that exports amounted to $3,317,596,000, or 9.6 per cent above comparable 1940 figures and imports for consumption totaled $2,315,787,000, or 24 per cent above the 1940 figures for the nine-month period.

The department commented that "the interdependence of the United States and the British empire was high-noted by the empire's acceptanced of nearly two-thirds of our exports and the empire's providing of nearly half of our imports."

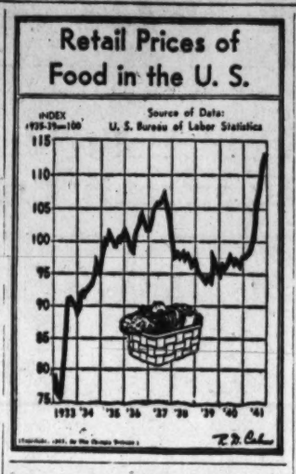
'Huge' Butter Surplus Faces Dairy Industry

Omaha, Jan. 29 (AP).—Leonard E. Hurtz, president of the International Associations of Ice Cream Manufacturers, contended yesterday a "huge surplus" of butter threatens stability of the dairy industry.

Hurtz, president of the Fairmont Creamery Co. here, told delegates to the Nebraska Ice Cream Manufacturers' Association convention the Government's lend-lease purchases of cheese and dried skim milk have increased the price of all milk and tended to reduce consumption of butter, thereby increasing the surplus.



Bank Idle Cash Off 100 Million During Week

By the Associated Press

The Federal Reserve Board said yesterday that lendable excess reserves of banks declined 100 million dollars to $3,480,000,000 in the week ended January 28.

The decrease was attributed to several technical factors, including a 20-million-dollar increase in money in circulation.

The board's statement said:

"During the week ended January 28 member bank reserve balances decreased 70 million dollars. Reductions in member bank reserves arose from increases of 20 million dollars in money in circulation and 18 million dollars in Treasury deposits with Federal reserve banks and decreases of 44 million dollars in reserve bank credit and 6 million dollars in gold stock, offset in part by decreases of 8 million dollars in Treasury cash and 9 million dollars in nonmember deposits and other Federal reserve accounts. Excess reserves of member banks on January 28 were estimated to be approximately $3,480,000,000, a decrease of 100 million dollars for the week.

"The principal change in holdings of bills and securities was a reduction of seven million dollars in United States Government securities, direct and guaranteed, including the six million dollars of bills held at the beginning of the week and one million dollars of bonds."

Bank Clearings Show 28.6% Gain

New York, Jan. 29 (AP).—Bank clearings in the week ended Wednesday retained the high percentage increase over a year ago prevalent in recent weeks and came within striking distance of the big turnover in the preceding period.

The total at 23 leadings cities, as reported to Dun & Bradstreet, was $7,138,753,000, an increase of 28.6 per cent over $5,549,519,000 in the like week of 1941. The amount was only $33,649,000 under the previous week.

Detroit had the largest gain over a year ago, ousiness at the motor capital topping by 68 per cent the amount reported in 1941. Other larger increases were Seattle, 48.4 per cent, Kansas City, 46.5, Minneapolis, 43.7, Buffalo, 40.9 and Louisville, 40.7.

The stock, in the form of par value common stock, would be used to meet part of a $14,250,000 debt to the parent American Telephone & Telegraph Co.

Simultaneously American Telephone & Telegraph asked authority to purchase the capital stock to be issued.

Retreat of Living Standard To 1933 Level Is Foreseen

By the Associated Press

New York, Jan. 29.—The National Industrial Conference Board said today that to enable fulfillment of President Roosevelt's war production program the average consumer's standard of living will have to be reduced to depression levels.

The research organization said its conclusion was based on an analysis of war consumption prepared by its division of industrial economics.

"Goods and services remaining for civilians under a maximum war effort," said the report, "would amount to only 56 billion dollars. This is no more than the total consumption expenditure of the Nation in 1933, after correction for price changes.

"In 1933 consumers required about $357 per capita to maintain a depression standard of living. Since then the cost of living has increased by almost 25 per cent. Today the depression standard of living would require about $427 per capita.

"The war production schedule would leave just about that amount for civilian per capita consumption. Consumption will be cut so sharply, according to this study, that the total flow of new goods and services to civilian consumers may be at the lowest level of the past generation. Although it will be adequate to maintain the efficiency and health of consumers, its changed character and lower dollar volume will reduce retail trade and skeletonize the distributive structure for durable goods."

The analysis saw consumers in the coming fiscal year having about $2 purchasing power for every $1 of civilian goods and services available and commented that "most of this increase will continue to occur in the lower and middle income groups which in the past have quickly spent almost every dollar they received.

"The rate of spending by these groups will be slowed down by war taxes as civilian stocks are reduced. At the same time, savings are likely to increase among these groups, whose sole experience in the past is with savings in their simplest and most automatic forms."

Shipbuilding Is Accelerated By Bethlehem

By the Associated Press

New York, Jan. 29.—Eugene G. Grace, president of Bethlehem Steel Corporation, said today "sizable merchant ships" would be turned out by the corporation's shipbuilding subsidiaries at a greatly increased rate in 1942.

Discussing the company's shipbuilding activities since the beginning of the present emergency, Grace said the ships turned out so far averaged more than 10,000 tons each and that the corporation had produced a third of all important merchant vessels delivered in 1941.

Grace withheld details regarding the company's naval construction program but did reveal Bethlehem had delivered many of its ships far ahead of schedule and disclosed future plans called for additional yards.

Grace also told of the Bethlehem plans for increasing steel making facilities which will involve the building of three new blast furnaces to turn out an additional 1,250,000 tons of pig iron annually and an expansion in steel capacity of 1,000,000 tons annually. The new blast furnaces are to be built at Bethlehem, Pa., Sparrows Point, Md., and the Lackawanna plant near Buffalo, N. Y.

Bethlehem's decline in steel operations to 98 per cent of capacity after a long stretch at more than 100 per cent was attributed by Grace to shortage of scrap metal. He said the company probably would get permanent relief from scrap shortage worries when the new pig iron capacity is available.

Nets $2.96 in Period

Bethlehem reported a profit of $10,459,742 for the quarter ended December 31 and a balance after preferred dividends equivalent to $2.96 a share on the common stock. This compared with $7,910,569, equal to $2.10 a common share in the September quarter and $14,516,779 or $4.32 a share in the last quarter of 1940.

Directors declared a dividend of $1.50 a share on the common stock, payable March 4 to holders of record February 10. The company has been paying at this rate quarterly since late 1940.

Preliminary figures for 1941 indicated net income for the year of $34,457,796, equal to $9.35 a share on common stock against $48,677,524 or $14.04 a share in the previous year. Earnings for 1940 were the best in 16 years.

The net billed value of products shipped and other classes of business done during 1941 totaled $961,240,737, compared with $602,202,618 for 1940.

The total amount of new business booked during the year was $1,084,600,000, contrasted with $1,519,300,000 for 1940.

As of December 31 last, the estimated value of orders on hand was $1,327,500,000, compared with $1,336,600,000 at the end of the previous quarter, and $1,204,100,000 on December 31, 1940. Approximately a billion dollars of this, Grace reported, represented shipbuilding contracts.

Operations At 103%

The company's production of steel and castings averaged 103 per cent of capacity during the fourth quarter, Grace said, compared with 99.9 per cent during the previous quarter.

For the full year 1941 steel production averaged 101.5 per cent, compared with 93.3 for the previous year.

At the beginning of the year 1942 the rated steel capacity was increased by 850,000 net tons to 12,700,000 net tons per annum, partly as a result of construction of five new open hearth furnaces and partly through increased operations in existing facilities.

At the present time Grace said production was approximately 98 per cent of the new capacity.

Cuba Acts to Boost U. S. Sugar Supply

Havana, Jan. 29 (AP).—President Fulgencio Batista yesterday decreed rigid control of the Cuban sugar crop in a "plan of close cooperation" designed to provide as much sugar as possible to the United States.

The decree authorizes the Cuban sugar stabilization institute to buy the entire 1942 crop, either as sugar, syrup or molasses.

The institute will sell to the United States all but 200,000 long tons reserved for Cuban domestic consumption and 65,000 tons for other export markets.

The remainder of the crop, expected to approach a total of four million tons, will be sold to the United States, and 34 million gallons of syrup will be set aside for manufacture of alcohol for the United States.

Caribbean Sugar Output to Be Increased

Secretary of Interior Ickes reported yesterday the United States possessions in the Carbibbean "can and will increase their sugar production in significant quantities during 1942."

The Secretary, who has juriadiction over the division of territories and island possessions, said Puerto Rico shipped to the United States last year 994,837 tons of sugar, meeting fully its intial 1941 quota allotment and sending to the States almost 200,000 additional tons "to meet the developing shortage."

The report estimated Puerto Rico this year would produce approximately 1,200,000 tons. The quota set for Puerto Rico for 1942 at the present time is 959,088.

He plans to ask President Roosevelt, Ickes said, to lift all quota restrictions on importation of sugar from Puerto Rico.

Ickes said the increased output can be amplified further in succeeding years to an estimated capacity production of 1,500,000 tons, if all restrictions were removed."

Even the Virgin Islands, where sugar production is negligible compared to the total normal Unied States consumption, will treble its output schedule this year, Ickes said. He estimated these islands would export approximately 5000 tons to the mainland this year.

Total United States sugar consumption amounts to approximately 7 million tons a year.

Year's Output of Bauxite Sets Record

United States 1941 production of bauxite, the ore from which aluminum is taken for aircraft manufacture, totaled approximately 899,500 long tons, exceeding the previous peak of the World War year or 1918 by 50 per cent and surpassing the 1940 output by 105 per cent, the Bureau of Mines reported yesterday.

Bauxite imports during the first nine months of 1941 totaled 749,264 tons, considerably greater than ever received during any previous full 12-months.

Consumption of the ore in this country also broke all records, amounting to an estimated 1,700,000 tons compared with 1,072,000 tons in 1940.

Moreover, the bureau said, "domestic production and importations in 1942 are expected to greatly surpass those of 1941."

Of the estimated 1941 bauxite production, Arkansas contributed 92 per cent and Alabama, Georgia and Virginia, the remaining 8 per cent. The greatest increase in mine production was in Arkansas and Alabama.

Insurance Firm Closed; Axis Control Charged

The Treasury yesterday ordered closing and liquidation of the Pilot Reinsurance Co., of New York City, because of alleged Axis control.

The Treasury said the company was organized in 1925 with German and Italian capital, but added that this control had been concealed by the transfer in 1939 and 1940 of most of the stock to holding companies in Sweden, Switzerland and the Netherlands.

The company will be liquidated, the Treasury said, by the superintendent of insurance, New York.

Wholesale Commodity Index Dips in Week

A slight drop in the cost of food and farm products resulted in a decline of 0.1 per cent in the Labor Department's wholesale commodity price index during the week ended January 24.

This change placed the price list at 0.4 per cent below the average for January 1929 and 12 per cent above the corresponding week of 1937.

The decline was in contrast to a series of sharp advances which boosted wholesale prices to a 12-year high in mid-Jauary. The index for the week was 95.5 per cent of the 1926 average or 1.8 per cent higher than in mid-December and 18 per cent above a year ago.

Stable Prices Asked in Farm Machinery

Price Administrator Leon Henderson said yesterday he had asked approximately 28,000 dealers in farm machinery not to sell tractors and other farm implements at levels higher than the retail prices suggested by the manufacturers, plus actual freight and handling costs and taxes.

"High prices for farm machinery mean high costs to the farmer and higher prices for food," Henderson explained. "The manufacturers of farm equipment are cooperating with their Government in absorbing a part of increased factory costs and holding their prices stable. The benefit of this stability to farmers can be canceled if dealers attempt to get the highest possible prices under conditions of great demand and restricted supply."

Dealers buy farm machinery from manufacturers at various discounts off "suggested retail prices." Henderson said recent investigations had shown a trend toward reduced trade-in allowances and excessive charges for transportation and handling, resulting in an increase in net prices paid by the farmers.

Sugar Shares, Beverage List Move Upward

New York, Jan. 29.—Soft drink, sugar and a handful of other stocks developed quiet strength in today's market but many leaders were unable to shake off drifting trends.

The direction was irregularly lower at the start and, while recoveries crept in here and there after midday, final prices in numerous instances were off fractions to a point or more.

Slackness of dealing throughout was a negatively encouraging feature, indicating to analysts that there was a real urge to liquidate.

Turnover Sluggish

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was off .1 of a point at 37.9. Transfers of 424,015 shares compared with 458,700 yesterday and were the smallest since October 3 last.

The war news still was more or less of a stand-off marketwise and the thought of taxes, shortages, priorities and further governmental controls still served to keep many potential buyers in the waiting division.

Bethlehem Steel finished down¼ point at 63¾ and directors, after the close, duplicated the previous common dividened of $1.50 a share and disclosed net earnings for 1941 of $9.35 a share against $14.04 in 1940. Net of $2.96 a share in the final 1941 quarter compared with $4.32 in the December period last year. Sharply higher taxes and other sizable charge-offs, as in the case of United States Steel, were said to have accounted for the year's profits drop.

Soft Drink List Rises

Coca-Cola was up 2⅝ and Pepsi-Cola 1¼ as Federal authorities revised the sugar allocation base for industrial use which would give the soft drink makers about 80 per cent of their 1941 requirements. Some sugars also edged forward in further response to the idea producers in the Atlantic area would benefit from better quotations on larger ouput inspired by the cessation of imports from the Philippines. Among these were Fajardo, which touched a new 1941-42 top, and South Porto Rico.

On the other hand American Tobacco common and "B" lost a point or more each and the preferred was off 3 at 140, a new bottom for the past year. The board voted the recommended $1 dividend on the junior issues, as against 75 cents paid in December, but talk of nearby heavy financing to take care of expanding inventories apparently was a depressing factor.

Southern Railway clung to a minor advance, but Union Pacific slipped a point and others in the group were off a shade despite a contraseasonal jump in last week's freight loadings.

Oils Hold Steady

Oils just about held their own, although tanker casualties in the Atlantic due to submarine attacks were considered by holders who heard warnings of a petroleum scarcity on the East Coast.

Shares on the losing end included U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler, Santa Fe, U. S. Rubber, Sears Roebuck, du Pont, Westinghouse, Anaconda, J. C. Penney, Western Union and Owens-Illinois.

On the upside were Lima Locomotive, American Telephone, Eastman Kodak, J. I. Case, General Motors, Youngstown Sheet and International Harvester.

Carrier bonds did fairly well. Commodities steadied. At Chicago wheat was unchanged to up ½ cent a bushel, corn 1 to 1½ advance and hogs 5 to 15 cents higher. Cotton was off 5 cents to up 15 cents a bale.

American Cyanamid "B" and Sherwin Williams were forward leaners in the curb while losses were posted for Gulf Oil, Cities Service, Pennroad and Glen Alden Coal. Turnover here approximated 81,000 shares versus 77,000 Wednesday.

$1 Dividend Voted By American Tobacco

The American Tobacco Co. yesterday voted a dividend of $1 a share on the common and common "B," payable March 3 to holders of record February 10. Previous payment was 75 cents a share on December 1. Prior to that the company paid $1.25 a share quarterly for many years.

On January 24, George Washington Hill, president, told stockholders business volume continued strong, but costs and taxes were steadily rising.

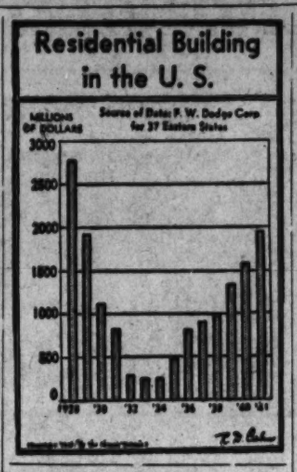
No. 26—Professional Expenses

A professional man may deduct all necessary expenses incurred in the pursuit of his profession. These include the cost of supplies used in his practice, office rent, cost of light, water, fuel, and telephone in his office, the hire of office assistants, and expenses paid in the operation and repair of an automobile, based upon the proportion of time it is used for professional purposes.

Many physicians use their residences both as their offices and their homes. In such instance the physician may deduct as a business expense the rental value of the rooms occupied for office purposes if he actually pays rent, and also the cost of light and heat furnished these rooms. Also, he may deduct a portion of the wages paid domestic servants whose time is partly occupied in caring for these rooms. Membership dues in professional societies are deductible. Physicians and dentists who keep in their waiting rooms current magazines and newspapers for the benefit of their patients may deduct this item as a business expense. The cost of professional journals for the taxpayer's own use is also a deductible item.

The cost of technical books is not a deductible item, being a capital expenditure, but a proportionate amount for each year's depreciation of the books may be deducted. Depreciation may also be taken on office furniture and equipment. Insurance premiums on office or other professional equipment and liability insurance may be deducted. A premium paid for automobile liability insurance should be apportioned and that part of the premium attributable to business may be deducted as a business expense.



C. & P. Will Spend $1,576,000 More On Expansion Here

Expenditures for telephone plant, amounting to about $1,576,000, were authorized by the directors of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. at their meeting yesterday, according to C. A. Robinson, vice president and general manager.

Indicative of the tremendous growth of Government telephone service, Mr. Robinson pointed out that about $936,000 will be spent to replace three private branch exchange systems of Federal agencies, and $285,000 will be spent on additions to the equipment in four Government systems.

Anticipating continuing growth in local and toll service, about $276,000 will be spent for additional central office equipment in the Dupont Center. Additions to and rearrangements of certain cables in the downtown area will require about $86,000.

According to Mr. Robinson, the company spent on construction in the District of Columbia during 1941, including reused equipment and material, more than 17 million dollars or 72 per cent more than in 1940.

Listen! with Glynn

It's a moot question as to which particular quiz program is the most heart-breaking—the one in which you start out with nothing and wind up (maybe) with a fistful of money, or the new kind in which you start out by being given a fistful of money and wind up (perhaps) with none at all.

Taking no sides in the matter, this is merely to report that Bob Hawk's new quiz show, which you hear over WJSV every Friday at 7:30 p. m., is of the latter variety.

Five contestants are chosen by lot before the broadcast from among the studio audience. The first two contestants are given $30 apiece and are asked three questions alternately. When one of the contestants misses, he gives his opponent $10 and so on until one of them has none left. The winning contestant then takes on an as yet unused contestant who is given an amount of money equal to his winnings and the initial stake. And so it continues until all five contestants have been used. While the amounts increase prodigiously, however, so do the penalties, they being doubled each time too. So that it's possible that on the final round, the contestants will in a theoretical way be losing $100 apiece for each question missed.

I'll leave you to figure out just how much the winner can get if he outlasts the other five contestants. I'll let you figure out, too, the awful sadness that must come over the fellow who misses the last question.

Contract Bridge

A double was neatly sidestepped by R. R. Richards, dean emeritus of the American Contract Bridge League, in the play of today's hand. He made his four-spade contract by cleverly shutting out an adversary from the lead, thus preventing a ruff which would have defeated him.

Today's Hand

SOUTH DEALER

	♠ 4 3 ♡ K 10 5 4 3 ◇ K Q J ♣ J 4 3
♠ A 8 7 5 ♡ A J 8 7 ◇ 8 ♣ K Q 10 9	NORTH WEST EAST SOUTH Richards	♠ None ♡ Q 9 6 2 ◇ 9 6 5 4 2 ♣ A 7 6 5
	♠ K Q J 10 9 6 2 ♡ None ◇ A 10 7 3 ♣ 8 3

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
4 ♠	D....	Pass	Pass
Pass

Opening lead—K ♣.

The king of clubs was opened by West, and although East made the encouraging discard of the club seven, the doubler shifted to his singleton diamond, realizing he probably would need a diamond ruff to defeat declarer.

Richards won on the board with a high diamond, and fully aware that East must be kept out of the lead, if possible, returned the king of hearts. When East played small, South discarded his last club, killing East's club ace as an entry card. West won with the heart ace, but he was now unable to put his partner "in" to lead back a diamond for a ruff, and the only trick left for the defenders was the trump ace.

South made four spades, doubled, losing the club king, the ace of hearts and the ace of spades.

West could have parried declarer's clever strategy had he known what it would be, and made sure of defeating the contract by leading his singleton diamond at the start. Declarer could then get rid of only one of his two losing clubs on the heart king, and West, after winning the heart ace, would be able to enter his partner's hand by leading a club to his partner's ace. The diamond return would be trumped by West and South would be set one trick, losing the ace of hearts, the ace of clubs, a diamond ruff and the ace of trumps.

Declarer Richards did not know that East held the club ace, but he knew that if East did have either the club ace or the queen, West would be able to obtain a diamond ruff unless he did something about it.

5-Million Dollar Loss Faced U. S. Through Racket

By the Associated Press

New York, Jan. 29.—A Federal grand jury in Brooklyn today returned indictments charging 20 agents of the United States Alcohol Control Unit with accepting bribes in a conspiracy to defraud the Government of five million dollars in alcohol taxes.

The indictment charged that the agents permitted the diversion of alcohol from hair tonic and cosmetics manufacturers into bootleg channels for the illegal making of liquor.

The conspiracy, the indictment said, began as far back as 1933 and continued until a recent date.

The investigation which led to the indictment was started almost a year ago.

United States District Attorney Harold M. Kennedy and his assistant, James C. Scileppi, said all but three of the indicted men still were in the service at the time the formal charges were returned.

Scileppi said it was the duty of agents to make sure that denatured alcohol drawn from warehouses under United States Treasury Department permits actually were used to make hair tonic and cosmetics.

The alleged conspirators, he declared, under an elaborate system of bribery, had permitted diversion of such supplies to bootleg channels and were paid from $100 to $500 for each "inspection" covering the transactions.

Fifteen of the agents, arraigned before Federal Judge Matthew T. Abruzzo, pleaded innocent to the indictment and were held under bail of $2000 each for trial on March 4.

An automobile stolen in Baltimore and believed to have been used by two youthful gunmen when they held up a bus driver at the Chevy Chase terminal yesterday, was found abandoned in Bethesda, Md.

Montgomery County Policemen James Breedon and E. E. Shoemaker found the machine parked at Wisconsin Avenue and Hampden Lane less than an hour after the holdup. The car had been reported stolen in Baltimore.

Police Chief Concealed Murder Clew, Kansas City Jury Says

By the Associated Press

Kansas City, Jan 29.—The Jackson County Grand Jury which indicted George W. Welsh 2d for the murder of his sster asserted in a report today that Lear B. Reed, former chief of police, had concealed evidence and obstructed other enforcement agencies in the Welsh investigation.

The jury report stated that on last March 22, 13 days after pretty Leila Adele Welsh was beaten and hacked to death, "L. B. Reed as chief of police had important information positively identifying the defendant George W. Welsh, jr., as the purchaser of the knife with which the victim's throat was cut. Why this evidence was not followed through to a prompt, public, logical and immediate conclusion still remains a source of mystery to this jury."

No formal charge was lodged against Reed but the assertions were contained in the jury's report to Judge Marion D. Waltner asking permission to stay in session longer.

In his charge to the jury last December 9 Judge Waltner asked for an investigation of the Welsh case and, without mentioning Chief Reed's name, referred to "a certain dime novel detective who said two days afterward that he could reach out and put his finger on the perpetrator. Then he proceeds to destroy the evidence.

"The time has ceased to be when we can boast of a fine police department as long as this case remains unsolved," he said. "I don't know what the grand jury can do, but it may be there are things you gentlemen can look into."

Judge Waltner tangled with former Gov. Lloyd Stark during the Tom Pendergast investigations in Kansas City. He threatened to cite the Governor for contempt.

674 New Cars Titled in D.C. Since Jan. 1

Six hundred and seventy-four new motor vehicles have been titled in the District since the "freeze order" of the Office of Production Management became effective, January 1, it was learned yesterday.

All of the cars were 1942 models and in all but 196 cases, it was asserted to the Director of Vehicles and Traffic in affidavits that the machines were delivered to the consumer "on or before December 31."

Government agencies, including the Army, Navy and District refuse department, received 89 of the titles, registering automobiles, trucks and motorcycles. Some of these vehicles were delivered after January 1.

Besides the 89 Government titles, seven cars were titled because of definite OPM priority ratings or because of telegrams received at the title department from OPM. An even 100 machines were titled without affidavits.

It is assumed at the Traffic Department that in each case of a new car title application, coming up now on vehicles delivered before January 1, the delay was caused by financing difficulties or slow-action on title assignments by dealers.

Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer adopted the plan of accepting affadavits from dealers as proof that new cars coming up for titling after January 1, were delivered before the OPM ban.

This system permitted the titling of cars during the "freeze" and before February 2, when it is expected that OPM's rationing program will be perfected and in operation.

The 100 titles which were issued without afladavits were mostly released on January 2, the first busines day following the New Year's holiday. Van Duzer insisted upon the sworn statements the next day to prevent the possibility of any unauthorized car sales.

Strict supervision of all title applications will begin as soon as the OPM announces its rationing plan. Then it will be impossible to obtain a District automobile title unless the purchaser has a priority rating.

The automobiles obtained by Government agencies in the past month include 33 vehicles to the Navy, 19 to the Army and 21 to other agencies, which include 5 to the Secret Service.

Hu Shih Lauds Federation's Embargo Fight

Dr. Hu Shih, Chinese Ambassador, yesterday praised the International Reform Federation's efforts in effecting an embargo on war materials to Japan before Pearl Harbor.

With civic, religious and legislative leaders, he addressed the Federation's forty-seventh annual breakfast meeting in the Methodist Building on Capitol Hill.

The Ambassador said that the United States and his native land are now fighting "as old friends and new allies" and predicted that "we shall win together."

Also speaking were Senator Capper, of Kansas, the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington; the Right Rev. Ralph S. Cushman, Methodist Bishop of St. Paul; D. Leigh Colvin, president of the Reform Federation, and others.

Clinton N. Howard, federation general superintendent, presented a floral tribute to Mrs. Morris Sheppard, widow of Senator Sheppard, of Texas, often called "the father of prohibition," and to Mrs. Ida Wise Smith, president of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union.

Meanwhile the National Temperance and Prohibition Council, meeting in the same building Wednesday night, asked President Roosevelt to apply the Honolulu liquor ban to all theaters of war and to defense production areas.
